FINKLE & LYON

SEWING MACHINE CO.

OFFICE 521 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

GUARANTEE—After a fair trial, if any purchaser does not regard the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine as superior to any machine in market, he can return it and have his money. It has taken many of the highest prizes—is less complicated than any other first class machine,—does a wider range of work without changing,—requires no taking apart to clean or oil, and no "lessons" to set needle, regulate tension, or operate machine.

N. B. Any Clergymen sending us two orders for Machines, shall receive one for himself as a present. The same proposition is extended to Professors and Teachers.

We have now completed our New Manufactory at a cost of some $200,000, including New Patents and important improvements; and the object of the above proposition is to secure the immediate introduction of our improved machine into every town in the United States without incurring the great expense of a travelling agent.

This proposition cannot avail in towns occupied by our own agents.

Please send for descriptive Catalogue, and samples of sewing.

Colonel Fane, a very portable and important watchman, was one night passing through a small town in the west, on patrol duty. Dutch blockheads.

'Are you the smith?' he asked of a short, black bearded, old man, who came out of the shop to look at the horse's defective shoe.

'Yes, I be der smidt,' replied the man, standing his long pipe with his left hand, while he felt the nose of the horse's feet with his right. 'You vant to have de new shoes, do you?'

'No, sir,' said the Colonel, in his quiet way. 'Set the shoes on his fore feet, that's all.'

'Set de shoes on his fore feet—yah, I understand. I till have him in von leetle minute.'

The Colonel went away, and returned at the appointed time, found the Dutchsmith at last at work on his horse. He was very wroth when he saw the state of affairs but he stood away again with the promise that in one half hour longer the shoes would then be set.

Further delays, in no very mild humor he made his appearance again at the shop, and asked what was to pay.

'Five shillings,' was the reply.

'Sir, shall myself a imposition?' said the fiery Colonel. 'I never paid over a shilling for setting a shoe in my life.'

'Very vell,' nodded Meinheer. 'You shall pay for de four shoes—dat is four shillings and five!'

'Sir, in the old Nick!' roared the excited traveller. 'I told you to set but two shoes and you set four.'

'Vy, sheveler!' said the smith, 'you tell me you vould set four.'

'I did not a falsehood,' answered the traveller.

'You say set de shoes on de fore feet.'

'I did,' said the traveller, 'the two shoes on the fore feet.'

'Vell, Himmel! two shoes on de four feet! You hat an dree headed an mootch cussing.'

'You fool and fool!' exclaimed the Colonel, now excited when excited. 'I said set the shoes on those two feet, you blundering Dutchman.'

'Set four shoes on two feet! Ha, ha. You hed me Dutchman accurately and very nice, hundred thousand blitzen, you tam Yankee.'

'You wooden headed Dutchman?'

'You Yankee goose! monkey! you tam jackass, feed!'

The Colonel replied, stuttering worse than ever, and the smith struck his fist and his beard Dutch, his knowledge of English being exhausted, and they had it back and forth until a mutual acquaintance came up and explained the matter.

The Colonel paid the charge laughed at the mistake, while the other smoothed his pipe coolly, and cursed copiously the language that made four feet two feet, or two feet four feet, any way but the right way.

Widow Jones' Cow.

Mr. Weld, editor of the New York Leepetch tells a story in as rich and quaint a style as any lord of the quill we know of. For example:—

Widower Smith's waggon stopped one morning before widow Jones door, and gave the usual sign that he wanted somebody in the house, dropping the reins, and sitting double, with his elbows on his knees. On tapped the widow, lively as a cricket, with a tremendous black ribbon on her snow white cap. Good morning was soon said on both sides, and the widow waited for what was to be said.

Well, ma'am Jones, per'aps you don't want to sell one of your cows, no how, for nothin', no way, do you.

'Well, there, Mr. Smith, you couldn't have spoken my mind better. A poor, lone woman like me, does not know what to do with as many creatures, I should be glad to trade if we can fix it.

So they adjourned to the meadow—Farmer Smith took it at Roan, then at the widow, then at Brindle, then at the widow, at the Downing Cow, then at the widow again—and so on through the whole forty. The same call was made every day for a week, but farmer Smith could not decide on which cow he wanted.

At length, on Saturday, when the widow Jones was in a hurry to get through with her baking for Sunday—and had ever so much to do in the house, as all farmer's wives and widows have on Saturday, she was a little impatient. Farmer Smith was as irresolute as ever.

That Downing cow is a pretty fair creature—but—he stopped to glance at the widow's face and then walked around her—not the widow, but the cow.

That cow about town Durham is not a bad looking beast, and I don't know—another look at the widow.

The Downing cow I knew but before the late Mr. Jones bought her. Here he sighed at the allusion of the late Mr. Jones. She sighed, and they both looked at each other. It was a highly interesting moment.

Old Roan is a faithful old milch, and so is nimble—but I have known better. A long pause succeeded this speech—the pause was getting awkward, and at last Mrs. Jones broke out:

'Lor! Mr. Smith, if I'm the cow you want, why say so!'

The intentions of the widower Smith and the widow Jones were duly published the next day as is the law and custom in Massachusetts, and as soon as they were "out published" they were married.

GALLANTRY.

One day at school, I saw a little fellow with his arms about a little witch of a little girl, embracing, I interpreted the manoeuvre aright, to kiss her.

'The act,' said I, 'what are you doing?'

'Nothin' sir,' spoke the bright-eyed little witch, he were 'train' to kith me, he watch me,' and she cried for friends.

'Why, Tony what prompted him to act so ungentlemanly right here in school?' I asked, assuming my same tone.

'Oh, he kicked up here and then he wanted me to kith him and I told him I wouldn't kith them a thouthy day as he is; then he then he'd kith me and I then he didn't. But he then he would do it, and I told him I would tell the matthcher if he did, but he then he didn't, cause a thnap for the matthcher, and then tried to kith me the hard, and the little thing sighed.

'Why don't you tell me, as you said you would?' I asked in a pleasant manner.

'Oh,' she replied with a naivete I did not often see, 'I didn't care much if he did kith me, and tha I let 'em.'

Here the whole school, which had listened intently, broke out in an uproarious laugh, while our little hero and heroine blushed deeply.

A traveler was lately boasting of the hurry of arriving at night, after a hard day's journey, to partake of the enjoyment of a well cut ham and the left leg of a goose. "Pray, sir, what is the peculiar luxury of a left leg?" "Sir, to conceive its luxury, you must find that it is the only leg that is left."

A WORD TO THE LADIES.

AT the commencement of a New Year, the proprietor of

Frank Leslie's Lady's Magazine

Appeals confidently, to his fair subscribers to assist him in increasing its circulation. The simple fact that they themselves patronize it is a sufficient proof that they consider it the best, a distinction which the publisher has endeavored to deserve, by sparing neither pains nor expense.

The double Steel Fashion Plate, exquisitely colored, surpasses that of any other Magazine; while the other Fashion plates exceed in number and beauty those of all other Lady's Magazines combined.

The commencement of a New Year and a New Volume, induces us to ask our Lady Subscribers to recommend this, their favorite publication to their friends. This will enable the proprietor to render Frank Leslies Lady's Magazine still more acceptable

The present number contains two features of great interest:—one a series of Lithographic copies of the most popular Parisian Pictures, colored in exact imitation of the original, possessing all the delicacy and finish of water colors. And the other a Plate of Doll Fashions arranged to be cut into separate pieces, so as to form a perfect Doll with change of costume. Other pictures and models are in course of preparation and will appear in succeeding numbers.

TERMS,—One copy one year, or 12 numbers $3 50; four copies one year, in one wrapper, to one address, $14, with an extra copy to the person getting up a club.

IT HAS BECOME NECESSARY

TO SUPPLY ANOTHER SET OF TELEGRAPHIC INSTRUMENTS and open another Office, to meet the wants of the constantly increasing number of Students studying this Art at the

LONDON COMMERCIAL COLLEGE

In future those Students learning to operate by paper will have entire separate from those learning by sound. Regular instruction will be given in each class every day.

Instruction will also be given each day in Phonography, by Mr S. Hutchinson, late reporter for Fowler & Wells, N. Y. We guarantee that no ordinary student can become the right ground in this Science while taking the Commercial Course, without materially interfering with his progress in that course.

The additional charge for full instruction in Telegraphing is only $5.

The additional charge for full instruction in Phonography is only $5.

Owing to the increase in the number of our Commercial Students, we have also found it necessary to add to our already large number of desks, and the cry is, "Still they Come." All right, Gentlemen! We will furnish a desk and seat for each of you, and good practical instruction, too. Remember, you can take a good thorough course in this College cheaper than in any other. Please send for circular, containing full information. For specimens of Penmanship, &c, enclose stamp and address,

AMERICAN
Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering.
SEWING MACHINE!
COMPANY,

627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLES made by this entirely simple and novel machine are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses, thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary.

One Needle and Two Threads are only Used

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indistinguishable for button-holes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, shaded or fancy silks, and produce a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste.

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Pocket-finders, Saddlers, &c, &c, it is indispensable; it is also admirable to be of great value to other branches as it Braids, Embroiders, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers Linen, Velvet Leather, &c. &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleeker where instruction Rooms are reserved for ladies.

P S—A novel patented BUTTON HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

Machine, $125.00; Button-Hole Cutter, $5.00.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Deraugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th inst., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs Deraugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and stands next to the Jewelry in the hearts of beautiful establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer, and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents to attend to Agencies in every locality, and pay even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

☞ Write your name and address distinctly and say on what is necessary.

PIANO-FORTES
DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano. The action being simple and natural, all the extraneous humbug in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old system of straining by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over-Strung Bass, of which Mr Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M Gottschalk,
M. a Marezek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Reifi,
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
" " Henry Eve	Charles Fradel

Mr. EGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is good and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes. They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal verisimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5.—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilliancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed in on the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It is a singing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Or an Organ and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr S. B. D. ggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements as exhibited in he instruments under examination in points of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excels them in pure, musical and prolonged power this upon stating only so far as to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,

L. M GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN
SEWING MACHINES.
EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB. 14th, 1860.

Salesrooms, { 536 Broadway, New York. / 252 Washington St., Boston

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles, combines all necessary and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shoe stitch which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nainsook or Cambric, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health.

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it almost impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply the market with a superior machine, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

But in a more especial manner do we elicit the calling of

New Map

OF

Peterborough and Ashburnham.

THE unnersigned beg to announce that their New Map of the Town of Peterboro' and of the Village of Ashburnham, is now complete and ready for publication.

This Map has been compiled with great care from the original registered plans and surveys, and its entire accuracy secured not only by those means, but by actual survey and careful admeasurement in the two corporations named, not only is every Lot given and its subdivisions where divided, but the names of the owners, as contained in the last Assessment Roll, are neatly printed on each lot. All public buildings, manufactories, stores, and private residence, together with the existing and proposed railways, streets, mill-races, water-courses dams, bridges, &c, are laid down from actual measurement The built-up portion of the town is so colored as to distinguish at a glance the materials used, whether of wood, stone or brick; while the whole is finished in a superior manner, so as to be both useful and ornamental, in securing which neither pains nor expense have been spared

During the ensuing week, the undersigned will be prepared to receive the names of intending subscribers, at their office, Scott's Buildings. Early application is desired, as but a limited number of copies will be published.

THE TEMPEST.

The spirit of the Tempest stalks abroad,
And with its stormy music wakes the world,
Peopling night with its impassioned minstrels,
The wild, unfettered, warring elements
That shake their hendish locks amid the gloom,
And sweep along the starless canopy
Far on the desert where the primal curse
Seems ripening with the stately march of time,
They swell their notes sublimly, but unheard,
Save by the lone and dying traveller.
Soon they change their ruffian notes, and wail
In plaintiff tones amid the lordless halls,
All windowless and broken, and o'er their
Moultering frag ents sing the strains of ruin.
Then fast careering thro' the gl om, they pitch
The billows from their oozy bed, and toss
Them to the skies, and sitting on their bosoms,
Chant furiously their song of desolation.
The reeling sailor hears the revelry
O, winds that woo him to the heaving deep,
And feels his bark the play-thing of the waves;
Casts back a hurried thought on home, his wife,
His little ones cast on the sympathy
Of a rude world, remorseless as the element
Ambitious to devour him—breathes a wish,
All-eloquent, that Heaven in love would shield
Their helplessness, and snatch them from their fate.
The waves, in all the majesty of death,
Come like his ministers to wrap the pall
Of everlasting night around him,
Without the fragment of a wreck to tell
Succeeding voyagers 'twas here he perished!
The heedless winds sweep onward still, and o'er
His tomb chant their unmeasured elegies.
What tho the lightning-fierce your torches are,
Though the thunder is the music of your revels,
Though in your wild career of desolation
You laugh at all the feeble attributes
Of man, still, still you hold the charter
Of your wild freedom from the Mighty One,
The Governor of Universal Nature;
His mandat calls you from your prison house,
The ministers of wrath to do his pleasure,
Leaving whole countries like a wilderness,
Blighting the pride and fairest hopes of man,
And teaching fearful lessons of dependence
On Him alone, whence all our blessings flow
Anon, His look all radient with Omnipotence,
Surveys the storm on Nature's troubled brow,
And all is hushed into a summer calm.

THE PASTOR'S WIDOW.

A few years ago our market was daily attended—unless, indeed, the weather was desperate—by an elderly woman, remarkable neither in face, attire, nor anything else. Her dress was always simplicity itself; she was middle-sized, had rather a commonplace face at the first glance, but what drew my attention to her was the regularity of her attendance, for which there seemed no adequate reason, since she had, generally speaking, only a very small basket on her arm, and sometimes none at all. When she had made her purchase she did not go straight home like other people, but regularly made the circuit of the whole market; and when the weather was fine and the stalls full, often visited some of them two or three times over. Uncommonly I took to observing what she was looking for, and what it was she bought; she had never come in my way as a bargainer, never snapped up a pigeon or fowl I happened to want. Indeed, her purchases seemed all on a small scale; belonging not to the annual but vegetable world and, even of vegetables she chose the cheapest and soonest cooked, and with them almost always a little fruit. At times too she would ask the price of flowers—a little rosebush or pot of pansies, and I noticed that very often the market-women would give her a few lettuce leaves unasked, whence I concluded that she kept a little bird, and in all probability lived alone. Now purchases to this amount need not have detained her two minutes; there must have been some other attraction in the market-place, and when once I began fairly to observe her, I soon discovered what it was.

Evidently, she took an infinite delight in the vegetables and fruits themselves, apart from any idea of eating them. But it was orchard-fruit that most fascinated her eyes and heart. Mere bush-fruit she seemed scarcely to notice, but apples and pears were her supreme delight,—there was a new exclamation at every kind she discovered. When the new ones came in, and new and old lay in the basket together, her new year seemed to begin, as she noted and named every fresh appearance, just as a field-marshal reviews his regiment.

I began, too, to notice how well the market-women knew her tastes. They would beckon to her to show her new kinds, and ask their names. There was in short, a quite peculiar tie between this good woman and the market wives, and a very friendly one. The interest that she took in their stalls, her admiration of fine fruit, her judicious discrimination of the relative merits of different kinds, and useful hints as to storing them, &c., were all pleasant to the sellers, who evidently liked to see her and to exchange a few good-humoured words, as a variety in the monotony of marketing.

It was in this way that I first got into conversation with her. I wanted a quantity of apples to store up for the spring, and was in doubt between two sorts, the rival sellers each praising their own, and endowing them with almost human excellence, when one of them pointed to the stranger, and said—'She can tell you which are best; she understands all about apples.' Accordingly up she came, and quietly pronounced that those in the other stall were fitter for using now, and a finer sort of fruit; but as to keeping ones, those belonging to the woman who had called her would certainly be found to answer best. From that day we often exchanged a few words, but on no occasion went on further. I did not even ask her name, nor did she mine that I know of.

One winter day, however, when it was bitter cold and slippery, it so happened that she fell down in going out of the market, and hurt her leg and arms very badly. She was soon raised up and set on her feet. No limb was broken. With great suffering she could contrive to walk, but not alone. I chanced to be the only creature there who had any kind of acquaintance with her, so I could not do less than offer her my arm, which she took gratefully, but with all sorts of excuses and apologies, such as were customery in my day, when every silly person had not yet got to believing that the world was created expressly for him, and that his fellow-creatures were in it to wait upon his convenience. It seems to be considered old fashioned now-a-days for one man to do more than another; but what would you have? If people have left off gratitude to God, why not to each other? I can tell you it was no easy matter to get the poor creature, who was in terrible pain, back to her own part of the town; and, indeed, it would be but proper that carriages and carts should have some sort of litter attached to them, to transport those they run over, whether killed or wounded to their own homes.

Her lowly room was indescribably clean and neat, and as I had rightly surmised, there was a bird in the window, who greeted us with cheerful chirps and twittering.

'You poor dear,' she said, 'you think are going to get your salad, and I have none for you to-day.'

Quite exhausted, she sank on a chair.

'My Heavenly Father!' she murmured, what am I to do now?'

It seemed that she was quite alone in the world. Only a charwoman came in once a day with wood and water. She did everything else herself. She rented this one little room, but had nothing to do with any of the other inhabitants of the house—no acquaintanceship with them, except a mutual bow of they chanced to meet in the doorway. Such complete isolation as this may go on pretty well for a time, but earlier or later something is sure to happen, and the question "what next?" often gets forced upon the lonely with a suddenness that takes away their very breath.

On this occasion it was I who put it, and not the half fainting sufferer. What next, indeed? There I was all alone; the charwoman would not come till six—it was only ten now. Had I been at home, I could have sent for help; but I was afraid of leaving her alone—and then, who was I to call in this strange house? There was not even a bell in the room. In the midst of my perplexity, however, there was a knock at the door, and a merry childish face peeped in and said—

'Mamma sent me to see if she could be of any use to the old lady. She heard that she had come back poorly.'

Here was an angel in time of need. She came in, and in the most compassionate way began to stroke the poor sufferer, who could not reply for coughing.

'Could your mamma come here herself?' said I, not noticing the shaking of the old lady's head, and the child was off before she could get out a word.

'Dear me!' she said at last, 'what can you be thinking of! Such a distinguished lady!'

But the lady herself soon entered, distinguished no doubt, but a sweet-looking creature as well, who approached the invalid in the most sympathising manner, but bowed very stiffly to me. I set it down for pride, and thought to myself, 'Ay, ay, they are all alike,' but later I found out it was shyness. It took some time to persuade me that a person over thirty, and a fashionable lady too, could be shy; but so it was, the very least thing would make her blush with downright shyness and nothing else.

And now, what next? Why, first of all we decided that we must get her to bed, and then I would go and fetch my own doctor. The lady said she would have sent for hers, only he was rather too much run after, and when once he had laid out the order of his day, nothing could get him to depart from it: if they ran after him with the intelligence that his own wife was dying, she believed he was capable of saying, 'She must wait, for I have still four patients down on my list.' Meanwhile I fully expected the lady to send for her maid; but no, she took the matter in hand herself, to the inexpressible confusion of the widow.

'Impossible—out of the question—the Sheriff's lady—Madam, I beg, I entreat—I shall die of shame.'

And when we came to her left foot we were nearly the death of her, for as the lady tried to draw off the stocking, she in the intensity of her distress and anxiety to prevent it, lost her balance and nearly fell off the chair. To be sure I caught her and broke the fall, but still the wrench she gave herself made her scream, and brought tears into her eyes. We had the greatest difficulty to get her into bed, but at last it was done, and she might at last have rested quietly but for her politeness and her scruples.

'And if I only knew what to do,—and she is not put out with me. She can do everything for me that I want.'

Upon which the lady explained that the allusion was to the charwoman who came once a day, and that the widow thought that would be attendance enough. But this the doctor would not hear of. The case required far more treatment, and he proposed to have the patient carried at once to the hospital, where all the townspeople had a right to be received gratis. He was physician there, he said, and he could promise that she would be perfectly well cared for. But, to our great astonishment, the pastor's widow positively refused; she could not endure to be amidst numbers—impossible to live in a large room where there was no rest or sleep day or night: a little room was such a comfort in sickness. We all tried to overcome her objections, told her a few hours would reconcile her to the change and vaunted the comforts of the institution,—even Lisette the lady's maid, taking a lively part in the argument, for she feared her mistress's kindness would give her some trouble.

The good soul knew and felt that this repugnance of hers must strike us all as childish and unreasonable, and therefore her agitation became very great, when all at once the sheriff's lady interposed:

'Never mind, my dear madam, don't distress yourself; there is no necessity for anything of the kind. I can easily understand your liking better to be alone than with a dozen others: when you want to sleep, somebody else is sure to begin coughing. I should feel just the same. We shall be sure to find a good nurse.'

The doctor was not one of those who are incapable of placing themselves in another person's situation, and get angry at the least difference of opinion, but he was fond of a joke, and often tried to conceal his tender-heartedness in this way.

'Very well, my good lady, I have not another word to say. I am not such a brute as to interfere between lovers. If only we get Mrs. X. (he meant me) to look about for us,—she knows everybody, and has an eye in all directions,—depend upon it we shall get a suitable nurse.'

'Thank you for your confidence in me,' said I; and the thing was settled. I went off to seek a nurse, who was, in the first instance, to call upon the doctor for further instructions, and the lady undertook to sit with the patient in the meantime.

Thus, then, a so-called accident had brought together, and into friendly relations, persons who else would never have known each other; and but for it I should have been poorer in kindly memories and richer in prejudices.

The consequences of the accident were far more serious than the good woman at first anticipated. The human frame is pretty much like a bottle of wine, which will keep clear and beautiful to the eye for years and years if you let it stand undisturbed, but a rude shake or two will so completely change its aspect, you would hardly believe it was the same wine, nor will it soon clear again. And, in the same way, let an elderly person, who has long led a quiet uniform life, meet with any untoward accident that shakes the frame and changes the course of habit, ten to one some latent mischief will develop itself, so that the original accident becomes a secondary thing, and not unfrequently results in death. The widow had hoped to be up and about in the course of the next week, but she was sadly mistaken; had to put off her hope from week to week, and meekly, though with many a sigh, to resign it as the week came round. The injuries would not heal properly; the limbs seemed to lose their power, and by degrees a general debility set in. The doctor did what he could, but gradually took to an ominous shake of the head. The nurse was very kind; I had been fortunate in my choice; not only was she skilful in her office but she got fond of the invalid, who suffered so patiently, never ordered her about, but humbly asked for what she absolutely required, and as much as possible respected her sleep.

But, however, the nurse could not give up her whole time to one patient; she had several valuable clients whom she could not afford to lose, and therefore arrangements had to be made to prevent the invalid being left alone. The sheriff's lady and myself, between us, contrived that the solitary intervals should be very short indeed, and I must say that it was this lady who took the greater part of the responsibility, and that not by sending Lisette or any other deputy, but in her own person. Nay, even when she knew that I was there, she would come down with her work; and help to while the time away; and when I admired her industry—just as though she had to work for a living—and vowed it put me to the blush, she would reply, 'I have been used to it from my childhood; my mother never allowed any one to be idle. Every respectable lady worked, she would say; it was only raw, underbred girls who did nothing.'

What struck us most of all about our widow was her entire and singular isolation. She asked for no one, sent to summon no one, nor were any inquiries made for her. Her bird seemed her only friend, and he would go on ruthlessly chirping till he got to her; and no lettuce leaves seemed thoroughly to please him but those he pecked from her hand. I must also except the market-women, who were greatly surprised at her absence, and expressed much concern when they heard of her accident, and here and there one gave me a flower, another an apple, to take to her, saying they had put them aside expressly for her, knowing them to be favourites. The example being once set, so many came to offer me similar tokens of remembrance, that I should have wanted a maid to carry them; but I begged that they would not all give at once but from time to time send a little present to the poor lady, who would not be among them again, I feared, for a long time, if ever. But, to be sure, the ecstasy of delight was to the good soul to think of being remembered; and then the beauty of the apples!—in short, every time I took her anything she used to cry with sheer happiness. So childish a spirit I never had met with in all my life. And what a precious treasure this childlike spirit is, the world little understands; 'tis one that passes understanding, like the peace of God. The so called happiness that most of us are chasing, strays beyond the confines of both these, and is nothing but a will-o'-the-wisp or a hunting spectre.

It will be easily understood that we wished to know whether she had any relations or friends whom she would like to apprise of her condition; but we were afraid of asking her abruptly, for fear she might fancy we wanted to get rid of our relation to her. To our individual inquiries on this head she replied that she had no one but the guardian of the Orphans' Institute who knew her at all, and she would gladly let him rest as long as ever she could. Not that he was ill-intentioned, but a rough over-bearing man who could not tolerate the least opposition to his will; and would, if put out, run on as though fire and death were in his hands. She actually trembled in speaking of him; but what was her consternation and alarm when she found that this said despotic guardian was my cousin. I had all the work in the world to compose her, and convince her that I was in no way offended. I was fond of my cousin, indeed, but far too well accustomed to his infirmity to mind it being commented on.

He was a man of the old-fashioned stamp, honorable and upright in the grain, and in private matters gentle enough; but once let him get on official ground, and clouds of majesty encompassed him about; contradiction was high treason; he became very harsh, haughty, magisterial; in short, I could well understand the impression he had made on the quiet widow, though I wondered how the two had chanced to come in contact.

Everything combined to make me anxious to raise the curtain of her past, and to learn how she could possibly be the lonely creature she was. But it was not I alone who felt this curiosity; the sheriff's lady shared it to the full. One day I met her outside the room, and she began:

'Do tell me whether you really know as little as I do about the history of our good widow; I would give anything to have an insight into it. She keeps it as close as a sitting hen does her eggs, and never makes the least allusion to it, which increases my wonder.'

'Just so with me,' I replied.

'Now look here,' she went on; you are a person of courage and resolution; will you devote this afternoon to finding out? It is such thoroughly bad weather, that we are sure no one will disturb us, and 'tis just the time for listening to a story, and she is so kind I don't think she will refuse; and whatever she tells us, she can trust us to keep to ourselves.'

So I consented; and as soon as we were both comfortably seated and the knitting going on, I began:

'What would you have said Mrs. —— if I had brought my cousin in here to see you? I stumbled upon him almost at your door, and had half a mind to tell him he was but a sorry guardian after all, and looked very ill after his ward; what a face to be sure he would have pulled!'

But I soon repented of my mischevious speech, it threw the poor soul into such a state of alarm.

'O!' she cried, 'if only I may be spared that! I do believe if I were to see him suddenly look in, the shock would kill me. What things he would say to me for not having announced my illness to him, and for refusing to go to the hospital; he would have carried him off there upon the spot.'

After we had quieted and comforted her as well as we could, I went on to beg that she would tell us why she had such a dread of the worthy guardian, and also to give us some insight into her past life; we knew nothing about her but her name, and in our town the custom was to get full possession of a person's family history as far back as their grand parents before we could feel acquainted with them. At first she excused herself on the score of having really no history to tell.

'O dear! what should I find worth your hearing?' she said. 'How could such an insignificant creature as I am have met with anything remarkable? You could only fall asleep over my story.'

When we told her that this fact alone, of her knowing no one, and seeming to have dropped down out of the sky, was in itself truly remarkable, she said it was perfectly natural. She did not belong to our town, but to ——; and so she suddenly found herself launched upon her history; and once fairly off, she forgot her scruples.'

Jowler and the Crows.

The good old house-dog, Jowler, was enjoying a fine bone in front of his quarters, one day after dinner, when who should peep'd we at him from the tree-top overhead but a glossy black crow.

"What a good dinner I could pick off from that," thought the hungry crow; "I wonder if I can't divert old Jowler's attention a minute, so I can whip it off." With that she flew down, and commenced dancing before him, with her head on one side, in a very comical manner. But the dignified dog would not condescend to such trifling, and refused to be amused, or to leave the important business he was engaged in.

What do you think this cunning thief did? Why, she flew away and brought a confederate to help her. Now number two commenced her antics, while number one watched her chance to seize the property. But they found old Jowler was as faithful to his own interests as he was to his master's. They grew quite impatient, and the second crow flew down and struck the poor dog a sharp blow on the back with her sharp bill. Jowler sprang up with a cry of pain, and when he had returned to his dinner again, it had disappeared.

These crows were about as persevering as evil companions are when they try to lead a boy into their bad ways. They try one method, and then another, and it is a happy thing for the boy if he succeeds in resisting them all. When they profess to do a great deal for your amusement and pleasure, you may be sure it is only to throw you off your guard, so they can reap some advantage to themselves. "Go not in the way of sinners."—Presbyterian.

THE AFRICAN AND HIS DOG.—A poor African came to Mr. Moffatt, the missionary in South Africa, with the sad story that his dog had torn a New Testament to pieces, and eaten some of the leaves. He said that the dog had been very useful to him, guarding his property from the wild beasts, and hunting them; but he feared he was now useless.

Mr. Moffatt asked him how this could be? He could get another New Testament and why would not the dog be as useful as ever?

I am afraid, he replied, that the dog will be of no further use to me. The words of the New Testament are full of love and gentleness, and after the dog has eaten them, it is not likely that he will hunt or fight for me any more.

Of course he was not long in finding out that the dog was made neither better nor worse by eating the words. How many are there who read those words, so "full of love," upon whom they have had no more effect for good than on the African's dog.

The garrotting of two reporters in the city of Richmond realized 10 cents to the garotted.

LOST FOR WANT OF LOVE.

One lovely summer afternoon, Mrs. Eversleigh sauntered out to the lawn in front of the house, and stood enjoying the pleasant sights and sounds which in general gather round a country house, especially when situated, as Eversleigh Hall is, on an eminence, in the midst of a finely wooded park. Mrs. Eversleigh stood with her back to an open glass door, which led into a large pleasant room, occupied as schoolroom by her two daughters, Katherine and Mabel. An angry voice from the schoolroom roused her unpleasantly from her musing.

As she turned round, Katherine said, "Mabel, you are the most tiresome, rude girl I ever knew or heard of. I'll be obliged to go to my room again for quiet." "Will you?" said Mabel, saucily, and then she added in a graver tone, "but forgive me, Kate, and don't go away; I'll be as quiet as a mouse.

"I know you won't. Besides I've no right to endure your impertinent teasing, so I don't see why I should forgive you." A reproachful "Katherine!" from her mother came in to her ear then, making her turn with a reddening cheek. Mabel was standing beside her, and Mrs. Eversleigh, going up to them, asked the cause of the dispute. Katherine answered, "Mabel told me it was eleven o'clock when it was twelve, and so caused this letter to be late." "Intentionally?" "Oh—well, no. But then she teased me, and disturbed me so, afterwards. Really, mamma, she is annoying."

Mrs. Eversleigh glanced at Mabel, who was looking only half sorry, and then at Katherine with her burning cheek, lowering eye, and sullen brow; then she said, "As the letter is too late for to-day's post, Katherine, put it away, and both of you fetch your work, while I tell you a sad event of my girlhood." They obeyed readily, and Mrs. Eversleigh, sitting beside them and shielding her eyes with her hand, said, "It was the Christmas holidays. I was just about your age, Katherine, and my brother John was home from school; he, was in his seventeenth year. There was quite a company of young people together for all our family were there, and many companions besides. At the dinner table wine was used freely. From taste I preferred water, but I soon saw Jack did not. It was considered manly to take a glass of wine, and when John doubled that it passed unreproved. But a fear rose within me that would be exceeded also. I watched him narrowly. I saw him steal back into the dining-room after it was deserted, and take another glass. Immediately afterwards, I went in and locked the wine into the sideboard. But that night—how he got it I know not—he was almost intoxicated. Our father saw it, and was slightly annoyed. "The boy's head was not strong; he had taken too much, one glass was enough for him yet. Ah! one glass! It fed the appetite, and his pocket-money supplied him with more. Again and again did he come in, excited with drink; every time making my father sterner, my mother paler and sadder. I was his favorite sister, and perhaps by kindness—but I may not, cannot pause on "perhaps." I was cold, harsh, cruel to him. One night he came out of his room; as I passed the door, he caught my hand, and said, "If you let bygones. Jane, and be the same to me as before, I'll conquer this vice, I will." I threw his hand from me, saying angrily, "You are a disgrace to the family; I have no right to forgive you until I see amendment." I left him and went down stairs, though immediately sorry for what I had said. I did not see John again that night. Next morning, when I rose, I saw, as if pushed under my room door, a scrap of writing paper. I picked it up and read, "I won't disgrace the family any more. When I get nothing but unkind words from my dearest sister, I surely am past hope." It was John's handwriting; and I hurried to his room to plead for forgiveness. He was gone—fled. Half distracted, I ran to my father's room. I found him supporting my mother, who had fainted; while a letter lay on a chair. I seized it. It was a farewell letter from John, saying that he would be in Liverpool when they received this. Leaving my mother in my care, my father followed him; but he was delayed on the way, and ere he arrived in that city John had sailed as a common sailor in a vessel bound for India. Once he wrote to my mother, only once. After a wild career of drunkenness, he fell from the mast and was drowned. My mother died—of a broken heart. I think; and my father grew gloomy and silent. Truly the course of wine had fallen on our home, but O! how different might it have been, but for my unkindness. Oh! my darlings, beware of unkind words." Bursting into tears, Mrs. Eversleigh hurried from the room. Is it necessary to say that the sisters were reconciled; or how, all their lives their mother's tale stood as a beacon to warn them from the ways of unkindness?—Advice for November.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1866.

THE CONVENTION.

The Chief Superintendent of education has issued a circular announcing his intention of holding Conventions of Municipal Councillors, Local Superintendents, Visitors, Trustees, Teachers, and other supporters of Public Schools, for the purpose of acquiring local information as to the circumstances or wishes of the people on several subjects connected with Grammar and Common School Education. The first object of those Conventions is:—"To consider any suggestion which may be made for the amendment of the School Law, for the improvement of Schools, for the diffusion of Education, and for the extension and usefulness of Prize-books and Public Libraries."

The second subject is:—"The advisibility of having but one Board of Trustees for a whole township, and the wisdom of making the Township Council that Board.

The third proposed subject for enquiry refers to investing municipal bodies with power to punish by fine or performance of work on roads, the parents who neglect to send their children to school at least four months in the year.

As the Convention for the discussion of the above subjects will be held on the 14th of February. It would be well for the friends of Education in this County to give the matter due consideration, and having done so, attend the Convention and make known the wishes of the people in their various localities, so that the Chief Superintendent may be enabled to take away with him the true mind of the people on these important questions.

In order to obtain the necessary information, it would be best to hold Township meetings beforehand, where the matters could be discussed freely, and the minds of Trustees, Councillors, Local Superintendents, and of the people fully ascertained. At those meetings delegates to the Convention could be appointed, who would go prepared to set forth the views of those different meetings, and support those views, if need be, by vote or otherwise.

The people of this county may rest assured that if they allow one or two to represent them at the Convention on the 14th inst., and should these few allow the Chief Superintendent to go away with opinions contrary to the real feelings of our people, they (the people) will be to blame, if hereafter a system of Education is forced upon us derogatory to our best interest, and to the free institutions which we have to guard.

At some of the last Conventions held by Dr. Ryerson some years ago, the principal movers were from the Towns and villages, and some of these cared very little about education, if they could but have the honor of being appreatly on the side of popular education.

But the same system of School Boards that suits towns and villages will not suit rural sections, as the most casual observer well knows, and hence the propriety of setting this before the Convention in its proper light.

We trust, therefore, that some steps will be taken to obtain the minds of the people on these matters, and to make it known at the Convention.

IMPORTANT APPOINTMENTS.

The most important matters transacted by the Council have been the appointment of Auditors, Local Superintendents of Schools, and the Grammar School Trustees required by the new Act. In the matter of Auditors, no better choice could have been made: the gentlemen appointed this year, performed the onerous duties very satisfactorily last year. They then, for the first time, arranged the accounts under distinct headings, and left them that even a child could comprehend them, and there appears a wise determination on the part of the Council to re-appoint old servants when they have done their duty, rather than appoint new men who may require a year to learn the duties of the office.

In the matter of Local Superintendents, we have invariably advocated one for the County, or at most two. The cry of the old ones was, that they were not paid for their labor and therefore could not afford to spend time in attending to the work. To remedy this, we proposed to have but one and pay him, and expect him to do the work. This the Council opposed, inclining still to retain the old plan of several Superintendents, although the complaints against the system were so numerous that our ears were deafened with them—which the members of the Council readily admitted. Since, therefore, the old system with its faults is retained, and the hope of remuneration even less than before, it can hardly be expected to be attended to during the present better than it has been in the past, unless those appointed are patriotic enough to give their time and labor for almost nothing; perhaps they will, but it is more than we can reasonably demand, or in justice expect. We think, therefore, since a County Superintendent was not appointed it would have been as well to have carried out the old plan as it was.

The Grammar School Trustees are all unexceptionable men, yet we have grave doubts before us, but we must wait till we find our fears realized, or removed, before making further comments.

THE SCHOOL LAW.

It will be remembered by our readers generally that the great sources of evil in our School Laws have been the continual amendments and changes it has undergone. Some of those it required, and some of them it would have been as well to have let alone. It is only a few years since children could go to any school to which their parents or guardians chose to send them. The Law, however, became so amended as to make it necessary if they did so, to return those children as attending the school of the Section to which their parents belonged, or had a legal right to patronize. This System has had a few years trial, and just as it is being understood it is proposed to turn whole townships into one Section, so to speak. In regard to our School Law it may be truly said to be a piece of patch-work, and which, according to appearances, requires another patch. Under such a process it never can become a System, and it would be well if our Legislators would consider this and set themselves to work to establish it—rather than patch it up every year. The chief Supt. of Education has done a great deal for the cause of education in Canada, and he has done some things that would be as well undone. The great error of this enactments has been want of maturing his schemes and plans before he embodied them in Acts of Parliament. Our readers will we are sure say with us, that it would be wisdom to give some one system a fair trial before it is cast off and one more faulty introduced, merely because it may have attracted the momentary attention of one or two individuals who sit in their office in Toronto, having little to do, but invent work for others, or perhaps, whittle down the best structures of their own handiwork.

Should there be but one Board of Trustees for Townships?

The divisions of the Townships into Sections is one of the most popular provision of the School Law. It has been found to work very well too. The sections have been formed in reference to distance for children to travel to school, and to Trustees attending public meetings. The good sense of the people generally selected the best men of the section as Trustees, with the exception of now and then a man may have been chosen for particular purposes. But on the whole, School matters have been well managed considering the unsatisfactory system of amending and re amending that prevailed at head quarters; and we may safely say that the majority of the people are satisfied with it as it is. To appoint a Board for the whole Township, would impose on five men the work that now requires 80 to 100 to do, and, as sectional and other difficulties would arise, would require a great deal of time, and then would come the subject of paying this Board, which the Chief Superintendent admits may work about. This Board would have more work to attend to than the present Councillors, and very soon would become more expensive; while the work that is now willingly done for nothing, would under this Board cost the Township several hundred dollars annually, and even then, we fear, would not be as well managed as at present. This Board too must have its place of meeting, would it be alternately in each School House or in one central place? If the former plan should be pursued, it would cost the Board much time and trouble; if the latter, those who would have trifling matters to attend to, must travel several miles, and lose a whole day to do what can be now done in an evening from seven to nine o'clock, and more satisfactorily too.—Every section is the best judge of the teacher that suits the neighborhood, and I should a central Board force one on the people contrary to the wishes of the majority of the supporters of such locality, which would be very probable, we would find that the new system would prove more odious in the eyes of the people than the old.

Who should Constitute the Board if but one?

In several of the places which Dr. Ryerson has already visited, the prevailing opinion is against a Township Board, and we may safely say that those in favor of such Boards are from towns and villages. But in not one report that we have read is it even suggested that the Township Council should be the Board. This part of the object of the Convention we will not now discuss as we think the idea is too preposterous ever to be acted upon, and if it should be we are not prepared to say that the Council should not be the Board, although at present we can see nothing to favour their being so. We trust that the Chief Superintendent, when he shall have completed his tour of the Province will have learned that the wishes of the enlightened portion of the community are not for centralization of Boards except in cities, towns, and villages.

Should Attendance be Compulsory?

This is an idea that has originated in the cities. There that class, called the "Arabs of the Streets" exists in great numbers, their parents are perhaps no sunk in vice or drunkenness that they disregards all the ties of nature in relation to their off-spring. This is rarely if ever found to exist in the rural Sections. Hence, in the cities and towns there is absolute necessity for some place of reformation or of education for these roving Arabs, and there should be some means of compelling them to occupy those places; but compulsory attendance at school will be found useless, unless the poor degraded wretches are removed entirely from their inhuman parents and placed where they will receive such moral and intellectual training as will fit them for the duties of life. What is the use of five or six hours a day at school for four months of the year only, while they are allowed to remain the other 18 or 20 hours in the atmosphere of thievery, drunkenness, lying and debauchery, and 8 entire months un for the training of thieves and murderers.

The only way to do those poor creatures any good is to establish reformatories into which children between the ages of 8 and 16 not properly provided for by their parents or guardians could be placed and where they could be educated, and have trades taught them, by means of which they might afterwards gain an honest living. Teaching a boy to read and write is not all that is needed to make him honest and industrious. But compulsory education implies, if the child must go to school some body must provide him food and clothing at the same time. Should these Central Boards have the powers to do so? is a question that arises out of the above, and thus it will be seen that compulsory education carries us farther than merely compelling parents to send their children to school: it compels us to find food and clothing as well as a school and school-books—it compels us to build reformatories where those who are neglected can be housed and provided for, and in order to do them any good compels us to find employment for them; but all this we contend appertains to cities and large towns only and is not applicable to rural sections, hence is not needed in them. But apart from all this, compulsory education is contrary to the genius of Free Institutions and never will be tolerated by a free people; and we are persuaded that the people of Upper Canada are too enlightened to allow such a law to stain the statutes of our fair land.

Opening a New Presbyterian Church.

The opening services of the New Presbyterian Church, at Lakevale, on the 4th line of Emily and Smith will be on Sabbath next. The Rev. J. Laing, of Cobourg will preach at 10 a. m., and at 2 p. m. The Rev. J. M. Roger, at ½ past 6 in the evening. On Monday there will be a Soiree in the new Church when a good Tea, excellent addresses, and sweet music will be the order of the day.—Several eloquent speakers are on the programme. Tea is ever good—and music is always cheering. But apart from the pleasure to be derived, there are other objects we suppose. The Presbyterian friends of west Smith and east of Emily have been inducted, for the cause of truth, to erect a Church for divine service; we trust, therefore, that all who can will make it an object to be present at their opening services—on Monday—and and, if even in a small way, in the good work, and thus encourage the friends there and strengthen their hands.

Concert.

In our advertising columns will be found the notice of a Concert to come off at the Victoria Hall on the eighth instant.—We are glad to be able to announce to our readers so rich a treat as will be afforded those who attend, through the performance of the "Port Hope Warblers." These gentlemen accompanied the excursion of the Municipal authorities to Rochester last autumn, and while greatly to the pleasure of the excursionists, and so greatly pleased with them were our neighbors on the other side of the line that they have several times invited them over to assist at Concerts got up for charitable and benevolent purposes. Mr. Caisse has kindly lent his grand piano for the occasion. We can only say "Come one, come all!"

Anniversary of Good Templars.

The ninth Anniversary of the Independent Order of Good Templars, in Peterborough, will be celebrated on Monday evening next, in Scott's Assembly Rooms. The Past Grand Worthy Chaplain of the Order will be present on the occasion. The friends of the Temple are doing all in their power to make this Anniversary superior to any previous one. We trust they may be enabled to succeed to their highest hopes. For particulars see hand bills.

Remember the Tea Meeting in the Bible Christian Church, on to-morrow, (Friday) evening. The proceeds will be used in behalf of the Trustee Fund of the Church. The President of the Bible Christian Conference, and other ministers, will deliver addresses. Proceedings are announced to commence at six o'clock p. m.

Literary Club.

This evening, there will be readings and recitations by the following gentlemen:—Messrs. J. A. Hall, Knapp, Haggart, W. H. Scott, O'Donnell, Strickland and Burnham. Doors open at 7½ p. m. The public are respectfully invited.

County Orange Lodge.

The Annual meeting of the County of Peterborough Loyal Orange Lodge will be held at the Orange Hall, in Peterborough, on Tuesday next, the 6th Instant.

Fire

On Sabbath morning, the Shingle Factory just north of Mr. Dickson's Flour Mill, (and very contiguous, too,) was consumed by fire. The under part, we believe, was used as a Shingle Factory by Wm. Toole, Esq., and the upper part by George Tanner, Esq., as a Chair Factory and Turning Shop. The cause of the fire is unknown, but is believed to have been the work of an incendiary. Mr. Toole is a heavy loser—about $3,000, insured for $2,000. Mr. Tanner lost considerable stuff—about $1,000, insured for $200. From the nearness of the building to the Flour Mill, it must have been in great danger; it did not suffer much, although once or twice on fire.

Donations for January.

The thanks of the Committee for the Protestant Home are due for the following articles:—Mrs. Bailey, piece of beef for soup. Mr Borland, Douro, 50 lbs. of flour; Mr D. Hamilton, Douro, 50 lbs. flour, also 1½ bushels of potatoes; Mrs. John Hall, Smith, a large basket of cakes from a Soiree; Mr. W. Simpson, Smith, 100 lbs. flour, from his little boy, a basket of cakes for the children; Mr. John Endicott, 1½ bushels of potatoes; Mr. Lewis Davis, Smith, a load of wood: Mr. T. M. Fairbairn, soap, lard, butter, salt and sugar; J. Sullivan, Hunter St. 2s 6; Mr. Winch, a shin of beef; Mr. Howden, a shin of beef; from the other butchers, pieces for soup.

The American Farmer, is the title of a neat little monthly Journal of Agriculture and Horticulture, published in the City of Rochester, N. Y., at the rate of one dollar a year in advance. It contains numerous engravings of buildings, animals and implements, and also several useful remarks on the above subjects. The reading matter of the Farmer for a year will be found worth more than a dollar.

Beef that was beef.

Mr. Henry Collins brought a beef into market, yesterday, that weighed 1107 lbs of meat. The hide weighed 127 lbs, and the tallow over that amount.

The Hon. Billa Flint was entertained by his constituents at a public dinner, on last Thursday. A large number were present on the occasion.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

The Reeves and Deputy Reeves of the County, as announced in our last issue, met on Tuesday, and in due form elected Evans Ingram, Esq., of Otonabee, Warden for the current year.

The members present were Messrs. Peter Pearce, P. M. Grover, John Kidd, John Carnegie, jr., Edward Patterson, E. Ingram, John Millar, M. S. Dean, George Fitzgerald, John Lucas, J. W. Gilmour, A. C. Dunlop, Jeremiah McCarthy, W. A. Scott, John Carroll, Thomas Probert, James Mellville, S. S. Peck was not present first day, but was the remainder of the session.

A motion to grant the Rev. Mr. Beck the sum of $50, as a testimonial for his regular attendance at the jail, was also lost by a vote of 10 to 7.

A By-law to repeal a clause of By law 262, for levying a tax on certain lands in Harvey for re-survey, was introduced by Mr. Dean.

FRIDAY—FOURTH DAY.

Council met; 18 present.

A circular from the County of Welland, also a copy of a memorial to the Legislative Assembly on the subject of interest, was referred to the Committee on Finance.

A memorial to His Excellency the Administrator of the Government of Canada, praying for the extension of Burleigh Road, was read and adopted.

Messrs. Carnegie and Gilmour were appointed a Committee, to be associated with the Warden, to attend to any matter that may require their attention between sessions.

On motion of Mr. Grover, the agreements of certain parties on the Bobcaygeon Road, as to granting certain lands for the improvement of the Road, were directed to be sent to the Government.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Scott, Local Superintendents of Schools are required to give a certificate before drawing any salary, that, up to the time they seek salary, they have fulfilled the duties of their office.

A By-law appointing County Officers was read and passed. A list of these officers is given above.

The account of Mr. John English was referred to Committee on Finance.

A By-law was also passed repealing certain clauses in By-law 262, referring to the re-survey of Harvey.

SATURDAY—FIFTH DAY.

The Council met; all present.

The Warden intimated to the Council that Capt. Rubidge had applied to him to have a portico or covering erected over the steps at the door of the Registry Office, to protect the same from falling ice and snow.

On motion, the Clerk was instructed to procure a copy of the Journal of Education for each member of the Council.

On motion of Mr. Grover, seconded by Mr. Gilmour, the Committee on Schools were instructed to report that a sum of money equal to one half the Government apportionment to said schools, be paid to the Grammar Schools of the County, provided said Schools shall be free.

The Committee on Roads and Bridges reported. The report was adopted. The only changes in the report of last year are:

In Beat No. 7, Bobcaygeon Road, James Lyle instead of James Ritchie as before.

Beat No. 13, Bobcaygeon Road, Andrew Lott instead of William Brower.

Beat No. 15, Bobcaygeon Road, John Thompson, of Snowden, instead of John Hughes, of Galway.

Beat No. 22, on the Peterson Road, Geo. Rowe, instead of George Mason.

Beat No. 23, on Peterson Road, Andrew Brown instead of John Barnum.

Beat No. 32, Peterson Road, C. Dalman, instead of P. Walsh.

Beat No. 33, between Otonabee and Asphodel, James Scott instead of E. Birdsall.

Beat No. 38, Dummer, James Carver instead of John Clements.

Beat No. 41, Dummer, Jas. Ivory instead of William Cannon.

Beat No. 42, Dummer, William Clydale instead of Henry Ingram.

Beat No. 47, Dummer, Andrew Kempt instead of Thos. Armstrong.

Beat No. 51, between Belmont and County Northumberland, James Sedgwick instead of Robert Johnston.

Beat No. 56, Galway, Wm. McElwain instead of Thos. Hoey.

A reduction of $2.50 was allowed to the Municipality of Burleigh, in the purchase of their seal.

The Committee to whom was referred the subject of the settlement of the new Townships reported, recommending that the Government be memorialized to extend the Burleigh Road as far as the Township of Dudley, as a means of inducing settlers into the new Townships of the County.

The Committee on Finance recommend the payment of the following claims and accounts:

Wm. Helms, pots for Jail,	$24 00
T. E. Nichol, balance for maps,	25 00
J. Brown, for hanging do	34 00
J. S. Carver, postage,	17 18
Nicholls & Hall, lamps, &c.,	3 95
John English, repairs,	9 50
Board Public Instruction—East	46 20
do do Peterboro	3 40
R. Romaine, printing, stationery and roll-books,	437 06
T. B. Clement, survey of Harvey,	218 55

The Committee also recommend the payment of $15 per quarter to Mr. E. Pearse, for services rendered.

Also, that two Maps of the Town, by Fitzgerald & Bolger, be purchased.

A further grant of $65 was allowed to Mr. E. Pearse, for services rendered in preparing books for use of the several Municipalities, and that the same be a charge of $5 each upon the Municipalities receiving them.

Mr. Norton was also allowed 10 cents per day for the maintenance of prisoners until the June session.

The report also states that from the Auditors' statement of the assets and liabilities, and abstract of detailed statement of receipts and disbursements, up to the 31st December last, there is a balance of assets over the liabilities of $9269, and in the receipts and disbursements there is a balance of cash on hand of $2334.36.

The Committee on printing recommended accepting the tender of Mr. Romaine for printing minutes, and one By-law of Roads and Bridges, and the Rolls for the Municipalities; that of Graham & Stratton, for printing List of Convictions, &c. They also recommended that other printing be given to the Printer in town who will do it at the lowest rate.

Messrs. Scott, Carnegie and Dean were appointed a Committee to confer with the Council of the Town of Peterborough, and the Municipalities interested in reference to communication with the back country, by way of Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek, as to the probable cost of such road, and the assistance such Municipalities would be willing to give towards the construction of it.

On motion of Mr. Gilmour, it was agreed to memorialize the Commissioner of Crown Lands to have stone monuments placed on the western governing lines of the several concessions, N. Monaghan, and that Messrs. Stewart and McDougall be recommended as Surveyors.

Messrs. W. A. Scott and M. S. Dean were appointed Commissioners to see to repairing of the Buckhorn Bridge.

On motion of Mr. Grover, the Committee on the new Jail were allowed to report. We glean the following items:—The entire cost of the new Jail is $16,103 36; of this the Government paid $6,000 00.

Cost of furnishing, &c	1718 46
	$16103 35

The following resolution was unanimously carried:

Moved by Mr. Gilmour, seconded by Mr. Carnegie.—That this Council cannot permit the members of the Jail Committee, Messrs. Ingram, Grover and Pearce, to retire from the labors of the said Committee, without expressing its approval of the manner in which those gentlemen have discharged the important duties appertaining to such Committee: and that this Council do now, on the satisfactory completion of said building, and the closing of the labors of said Committee, tender the thanks of this Council for the zeal and care with which they have discharged the duties of the said Committee.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Council met on Monday evening last; His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Burnham, Chamberlen, Hamilton, Cox, Millar, Ormond, Doherty, Stevenson, Wrighton and Wilson present.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

A Petition from Benjamin Reynolds, stating that he has now no way of making a living by labor, having lost an arm, and asking the Council to remit a fine of fifty dollars, inflicted upon him in the Police Court, for selling liquors without license.

The Finance Committee reported recommending payment of the following accounts: James Lince, Returning Officer for North Ward, $6.00; Rent for House, North Ward, $6.00; Robert Rowe, Returning Officer for South Ward, $6.00; Office for Election, $6; M. Hogan, Returning Officer, South Ward, $6.00; House for Election, $6.00; James Edwards, Returning Officer, East Ward, $6; S. J. Carver, for postage and box, $1.65.

The committee also recommended that Mr. E. Poole do furnish coffins for indigent persons, as he agrees to furnish the same at $2 each.

The chairman of committee on Charites submitted a report of expenditure up to date: amount, $131.

A By-law was passed appointing Robert Rowe and T. G. Hazlitt Assessors for the current year.

Mr. Wm. Arnott was reappointed Chief Constable for the Town.

Mr. Millar was appointed on the Charity committee, in the place of Mr. Ormond.

Mr. Ormond gave notice that at the next meeting he would introduce a By-law for apportioning of the Expenditure on Streets and Bridges.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, the Street and Bridge Committee were authorized to receive tenders for the delivery of 20,000 feet of 2 inch plank and scantling, before the first of June. As some misunderstanding existed relating to the motion, it was reconsidered and afterwards passed.

On motion of Mr. Cox, seconded by Mr. Millar,—a list of the fines that have been imposed for the last 2 years, including those that have been paid in part and those that have not been paid, was directed to be prepared for the next meeting of the Council.

Mr. Cox gave notice that at next meeting he would introduce a By-law for the appointment of License Inspectors, the regulating of Licenses, and other purposes.

The Council adjourned for two weeks.

North Monaghan Intellectual Improvement Society.

The Rev. Mr. Allen, of Millbrook, gave the inaugral Lecture of the Society, at the Town Hall, on Monday evening, the 17th inst., Subject, "Thoughts on Thinkers and Workers," or "Characteristics of Great Minds." The Rev. Mr. Blain occupied the chair

Mr. Allen commenced by stating the pleasure it afforded him to be able to comply with the wishes of the Association, this being the fifth time he had the honor of opening the series of lectures for the season. Referring to the subject he had chosen, he went on to show the elevating influence produced by conversing with the distinguished in thought or action which he compared to mountain air and scenery on the debilitated and sickly dwellers in the sultry plains of India and other tropical countries.

The present age was marked by the diffusion of knowledge. Its two great channels were the school master and the press, among lesser instruments were Mechanics Institutes and kindred societies to the I. I. Society of this Township, through which it is intended to elevate labor by bringing it as a body in contact with its soul—thought. Previous ages too much divorced intellect and toil. The thinker knew little of his toiling brother, they were strangers and frequently despised each other. But now it is otherwise, one, from his closet, the other from his mine or dingy workshop meet on common ground—the lecture room—where the most distinguished men in Great Britain have of late appeared.

He (Mr. A.) differed from those who thought shallowness necessarily resulted from diffusion. Fountains none less exhausted—reservoirs not less deep because streams more widely spread. He considered Carlyle unjust when he condemns the present age as mechanical—more correctly, social and brotherly. In spreading knowledge all should assist according to light and strength and use their best efforts to help our generation. And in trying to do this, can we do better than study the characters of those who have been powers in their day, and left their mark broad and deep upon their fellow-men and try and eliminate from the living thinkers, and actors the secrets of their power—in other words, to discover from a few examples the elements which combined make men great.

Foremost among the element of greatness he would place Originality—greatness used in its popular sense. In the highest and noblest sense, none are great in whom we do not recognize the moral—nay in its broad sense, even the religious element. And history shows that the religious sense is almost a faculty in the highest order of minds. But by greatness here he meant that power in man which has in any wise made him a force in his day and generation

Continuing his remark, Mr. Allen noticed originality in action and in thought, which he illustrated at great length and said that though nature always presented the same features, yet in all the great masters of descriptive poetry, from Homer to Tennyson, we see something new. To each, nature revealed a beauty that shone upon no eyes but his, and spoke with a voice which found no interpreter before him, and as a result of interest and continuous study, opened a splendour and beauty known not to the superficial and irreverent.

Next to originality he would place power—a word rather hard to define. It is, however, something which has a creative effect upon us and belongs only to thinkers of the first order. Who can look upon the power exerted by the great object in nature, such as Niagra, oceans, lofty mountains, noble prospects and the starry skies without having thoughts and feelings spring up within them, born of the mighty influence which they exert upon our minds, so with the powers of nature. How solemn and awful the hush which precedes the convulsion of the elements, and how generative of thought: the tempest, the thunder and lightening flash. So also with great thoughts, they lift us up as wings, every thought seems prolific, becomes the germ of thoughts in our own minds, and we are as it were forced to think by an irresistible power. This part of the subject was illustrated by reference to Burk, Milton, Sheridan, Tennyson, Byron, Burns and Longfellow.

Next to power, he would place earnestness inspired by lofty aims and objects. Every great thinker and worker aims to prove something, and is therefore earnest, he feels the burden and pressure of his task.

Earnestness is a characteristic of all great thinkers. A quality inducing a man to look into the deep realities of life rather than dwell upon the surface, apt rather to produce and eyes than smiling lips. It is especially a quality of great reformers, and noticed Elijah, St. Paul, Luther, Wilberforce and Howard, and is necessary to support them by its mighty enthusiasm under discouragement, obloquy, persecution and worse, misconception of their motives, which are too surely their portion.

As another of the characteristics of the Great, he would name Faith in their intentions or conclusions. As nothing great can be effected by him who feels he stands upon doubtful ground, hence we find in all leading thinkers and workers a confidence in the truth of their convictions which to others may seem rash audacity, but which is in fact the result of clearness and depth of view and patient investigation. They feel they stand on the unchanging rock of truth, and hence they feel that the attainment of their object is only a question of time. Could it be supposed that Columbus would have endured all his discouragements at Courts and on the sea if he did not feel that there was a western world ready to receive the overteeming population of the old land. Galileo, when persecuted and imprisoned might be made to falsify himself, but still in his own mind, believed that the world moved still. Sir Wm. Wallace believed his country could be saved and he did it. Our own Wellington believed in British endurance and pluck, and hence the brave patience of that immortal squire which turned the tide of victory in favor of English arms, and made just then the ark of freedom—the thermopylae of the world. This confidence at once in their own convictions and the truth and justice of their cause is the very soul of every reform aiming at the sweeping away abuses whether of a religious, moral, political or industrial kind. "Truth is powerful and will prevail" has ever been the watchword of freedom, of social progress, in fine of every movement aiming at the regeneration of man.

In the last place he would name work. A popular but mistaken opinion existed with reference to men of genius that they could dispense with the labour and method necessary to men of ordinary minds. Indolence and high powers are sometimes associated, there may have been instances of this, but no man ever leaves abiding impress without toil, and certainly the intellectual leaders of the present day do not plead guilty to the charge of indolence. If there is one truth more than another graven upon the records of the present age, it is this, the dignity of labour. He can demand the silly affectation of some in schools, in colleges, in life who pretend that attainments are not the product of labour, far better say with Bailey—"I know what study is" &c. As well might we say that the order of their courses robbed the stars of their lustre, the orderly March of the seasons lessened our sense of their beauty and variety, or the ocean failed to fill our minds with a sense of its majesty and power by the recurrence of its tides, as that methodistical labour detracted from talent. Newton said he owed all to work. Southey—a martyr to work. Wordsworth—high priest of nature—a man of orderly work. Byron—erratic and desultory—but a great reader as his works testify. He might extend the list ad infinitum. It may, therefore, be affirmed that any monument reared by human thought has been the product of high powers, and earnest and persevering toil, and if unwilling to work we must be content to remain ignoble, as most subjects must be long and intensely viewed to be known.

Having thus examined some of the elements which make men great, he said, since we cannot imitate originality or power, we can earnestness, faith, and labour, and by studying the characters of the distinguished, we may ourselves learn to shine—though in a lower sphere—a narrower orbit, and with diminished lustre.

Mr. Allen then reviewed the subject at considerable length, drew practical lessons therefrom which he impressed upon the audience and concluded an able, eloquent, interesting, and instructive address of one hour and fifteen minutes duration, which was listened to throughout with the closest attention.

Mr. Bennett moved a vote of thanks to the lecturer, which was seconded by Mr. Wood.

The Rev. Mr. Blain, in according the vote of thanks, passed a well merited eulogium on the ability displayed in the delivery of such a lecture as they had just heard and hoped that all present would profit by it."

The proceedings terminated by singing the Doxology.

IMPORTANT FROM WASHINGTON.

In the American papers of yesterday we find a synopsis of the recommendations made by the U. S Revenue Commissioners to the American Government, on the subject of Reciprocity with the B. N. A. Provinces. Our readers are already aware that the Commissioners recommended to their Government the appointment of joint Commissioners to negotiate a new Treaty, and the extension of the existing Treaty for a year, so as to give time for the arrangement of the new one. In making their report, the Commissioners appended a draft Bill prepared by Mr. E. H. Derby, giving effect to their recommendations.

This draft Bill, it appears, provides for the extension of the existing Treaty for one year from the 17th March, 1866, on the concession that Canada shall repeal all duties and taxes on salt, cars, locomotives, vehicles of all kinds, machinery, furniture, tools, implements, soap, starch, boots, shoes, leather, horse-shoes and horse shoe nails, harness, tacks, brad, watches, music and musical instruments, clocks, tin and wooden ware, mousseline de laines, coarse shawls, satinets and sheetings and shirtings worth less than one dollar a pound, and shall raise her internal tax and duty on spirits to at least 75 cents per gallon, wine measure, and discontinue her free ports on Lakes Huron and Superior.—Globe.

Home it Forwards!—We mean all the wheat, flower, and other produce intended for the American market. No time should now be lost. There must yet be large quantities of our productions which have no found the market—in fact, some parties believe that fully one-third of our late splendid harvest is yet held in store. The whole of this should be shipped into the United States before the 17th of March next. New commercial regulations may arise from the conferences between Messrs. Galt and Howland and the American Government, but, under the most favourable as at the present time. Our farmers, millers, produce-dealers, and others directly interested, should be careful not to let the present opportunity pass unimproved. There is sufficient time before the expiry of the Treaty to get all the produce of our farms which we can spare, safely delivered to our American neighbours, but that time must not be frittered away. If it is, it is quite possible there may be such a rush of freight at the last that the railways may not be able to move it forward just enough, and some of the laggards get badly bitten. With proper precautions, this result may be wholly avoided. The openness of the winter thus far, and the comparatively poor sleighing there as been, have prevented the farmers in the newer townships from getting their grain forward. There is now some improvement in the roads, and all who come into contact with the agricultural classes should impress upon them the necessity, both for the Province and themselves, that they should make the delivery of their grain, pork, &c, their first consideration. Much can be done in this way to effect this desirable end, and we hope our millers, grain-buyers, and retail merchants will take the trouble to do so. We may regret, but we cannot prevent, the Americans from copying the commercial policy of such nations as Japan and China after March next, but they cannot do it before that period. In the meantime, we can at least have all last season's plentiful crop safely delivered in their markets, which, although it will be a great benefit to the Americans themselves, yet it will be a greater one to us: so we repeat—hurry it forward!—Trade Review

A Wealthy Church.—The Church in Mexico consists of one Archbishop, eight Bishops, and about 10,000 interior clergy of all orders. It is the richest church established in the world. Its landed property, mortgages, and rents are estimated to be worth about $150,000,000, to say nothing of the untold millions invested in cathedrals and church edifices, which are all of the most solid and costly construction, and are said to be as valuable now as the day they were built. With their gold and silver vessels, candlesticks and other ornaments, these buildings (of which there are 108 in the city of Mexico alone) estimated at $150,000,000. The landed property is continually increasing in value, in the same measure that the silver mines are becoming more productive. The revenues of the clergy are still very large, though not so enormous as they were when Mexico was a Spanish colony. At that time the annual income of the Archbishop was $104,000, and that of the eight Bishops united $400,000. The Archbishop is the financial as well as the ecclesiastical head of the church, and subordinate to him there is a single person in each diocese, by whom this vast property is controlled.

Carry them for your Defence.—A box of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers can be carried in your vest pocket. They stop a cough in five minutes, and sore throat in an hour, and cure a cold in one day. 25 cents a box. At all Druggists.

A Wast Sufferer.—The public have long felt the want of something that could be depended upon for the cure of rheumatism, sprains, bruises, neuralgia, bowel complaints, &c, and we are happy to say that what is now supplied in the shape of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." It is truly a most wonderful medicine, and one that effects an immediate and permanent cure in all cases for which it is recommended. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

THE HORSE.

"Of the great number of animals under the control of man, the horse is unquestionably the most serviceable;" but is not strange that so many who own horses, and who are dependent on their labor for a living, should neglect to give them that care and attention which their own interests no less than the safety and comfort of the horse demands. The best medicine for horses is "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine," of this there can be no doubt—it is safe and easily given.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY
IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

Prescott, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it, with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

The following, from Messrs. Wanzer, & Co., will show the class of machine and the guarantees which they give with it:—

"Messrs. T. & R. White have purchased from us one of our new and improved Family Sewing Machines, half case, extra finished and ornamented, with it a hemmer, quilter, braider, tucker, seaming guage, oil case, screw driver, two wrenches, half-a-dozen needles, letter of instruction, &c., which we hold subject to their order, in connection with the prizes offered by them as premiums to agents for the Spectator, and which we have agreed shall be of the very best quality, and subject to all the guarantees given with our best machines.

(Signed) "R. M. WANZER & Co.

"January 1st, 1866."

Each subscriber obtained for the Daily Spectator will count as five weekly subscribers.

Each list of subscribers as received will be entered in a book kept for that purpose, to the credit of the party sending it; and as many of our friends have already sent us in lists since the 1st of January, these will also be credited in awarding the prizes. Should they send any further list, they will please mention the fact of a previous list having been sent, to avoid the chance of error or oversight.

THE SPECTATOR

Is now equal, as a newspaper, to any journal published in the Province. It is the only paper west of Toronto which receives and publishes all telegraphic reports of the Associated Press, and the number of persons employed as correspondents in different parts of the country, makes it, as a general Provincial paper, second to no other in British America.

During the session of Parliament full reports of the proceedings of the Legislature are given, and its editorial correspondence from the seat of Government, gives an interesting resume of all questions of general interest.

THE WEEKLY SPECTATOR

Is made up with the greatest care. Full reports of the Markets in different parts of Upper Canada are given weekly; and no pains or expense is spared to make it a welcome visitor to the family circle.

The Daily is sent by mail at $5 a year, and the Weekly at $1.00, payable in advance.

Our regular agent, Mr. Carolan, will not be permitted to compete for these prizes.

The well established popularity of the Spectator will enable persons willing to compete for these prizes to secure large lists with but little trouble; and the number of prizes offered, which will be given to those who will secure the largest lists, afford an excellent opportunity to persons to secure these valuable donations.

☞ All letters addressed by mail to us, and registered, will be at our risk.

Poetry.

LITTLE LONGINGS.

I wish I had a little wife,
And owned a little land;
I'd have a little house upon it,
And feel a little grand.
I'd want a little daughter, and
Likewise a little son;
And when I'd little time to spare,
I'd have a little fun.

A little glassy lake I'd have,
Well filled with little fishes;
My little pantry shelves would shine
With little pewter dishes.
And my own little little birds
Should tune their little throats;
And in a little hill shall frisk
My little nanny goats.

I'd lounge a little after meals,
And take a little ease;
And if my little wife should scold,
I'd raise a little breeze.
I'd let it rage a little, then
I'd take a little "sneeze."
And little "snappel" go out and hoe
My little crop of peas.

And I should want a little cash,
I'd take some little pains,
Since every little trifle helps
To lay up little gains;
And then I'd smile at little ills,
And life's little snares,
Enjoy a little Paradise,
And laugh at little cares.

These little longings though in vain,
Yet little minds they bare;
And when a mortal little gets,
He sighs for little more.
Destitute, the little ballad says,
Or, call it little song;
"Man wants but little here below,
Nor wants that little long."

Varieties.

A Husband can readily foot the bills of a wife who is not ashamed to be seen footing his stockings.

Many a lady, as if it were not enough to be clasped by one lover, has her waist encircled by a bruce.

Why are soldiers apt to be tired in the month of April? Because they've just gone through a March.

Why should a man named Brooks make a poor soldier? Because brooks generally run.

Why cannot two slender persons ever become great friends? Because they will always be slight acquaintances.

If the letter N could sing, what sort of sounds would it produce? N-chanting sounds, undoubtedly.

What is the reason that ladies never do anything wrong? Because all sinners are malefactors.

What is the difference between an avalanche and a skating pond? One is a land slide and the other a water slide.

Mr. Quelp (the brute) thinks the reason so many young women are obliged to support themselves is because the young men find them insupportable.

Why is a rat that bites your wrist, like an ear-doctor? Because its a knaw-wrist (an aurist.) The author of this atrocity has since committed suicide with a cat-o'-nine-tails.

Mentioning the demise of an acquaintance to a couple of Aberdeen friends, one asked me, "Fat dead he O?" The other seeing me puzzled, said He means "Fat deed he dee O."

A doctor up town has recently given the following prescription to a lady:—A new bonnet, a cashmere shawl, and a new pair of gaiter boots. The lady it is needless to say, has completely recovered.

A traveller coming up to an Inn, and seeing the host standing at the door, said, "Pray, are you the master of this house?" "Yes sir," answered the landlord, "my wife has been dead these three weeks."

A lady correspondent says that one of the most detestable sights she ever sees, is three or four, or more old bachelors lounging around, smoking their cagars, and talking about the horrors of married life.

Some of our boarding-house keepers are said to have adopted the plan of laying an extra fork across the plates of delinquent boarders, on the principle that, in such cases, they like to have one "fork-over."

Paddy's description of a fiddle cannot be beat. It was the shape of a turkey and the size of a goose; he turned it over on its belly and rubbed its back-bone with a stick and och by St. Patrick how it did squale!

An unsophisticate broker in Wall Street on being told that the Italians and French have no words in their languages, informed his informant that he couldn't fool him in that way, and knowingly wanted to know how they could spell wagon, or wealth, or woman, or wine, without a w.

Sharp Repartee.—A countryman sowing his ground, two smart fellows riding that way, one of them called to him with a contemptuous air. "Well, honest fellow," said he, "'tis you business to sow, but we reap the fruits of your labor." To which the countryman replied, "'tis very like you may for I am sowing hemp."

A Barber in England, during the prevalence of the cholera expressed his opinion to a customer, on whom he was operating, that after all the cholera was in the hair. "Then," was the answer, "you ought to be very careful what brushes you use." "Oh sir," said the barber, laughing, "I didn't mean the 'air of your 'ed, but the hair of the hatmosphere."

When is a Man Drunk?—A witness in a New York police court gave his views on this subject, in reply to the questions of counsel, as follows:—

Lawyer—Was Mr. Graham drunk?

Witness—I don't think he was drunk, it is hard to say when a man is drunk.

L.—Then you have got enlarged ideas on the subject of drunk?

W.—Yes, sir. I consider a man sober as long as he can walk straight and not stagger any.

L.—As long as he does not fall into the gutter?

W.—Yes, sir,—and don't catch hold of the grass to keep himself from rolling over.

A genuine down Easter took a trip to New York city with his sweetheart. One day walking down Broadway, they happened to come to Wild's candy store. They stopped and looked into the window and pretty soon Jonathan, seeing a kind of candy that he thought he would like, said:—

"Come along, Sal, let's go in"—and in they went.

"Give me three cent's worth of that 'ere candy, sir.'

The purchase was wrapped up for him, and after paying for it, he commenced eating it; his sweetheart looking at him wistfully, he said to her:—

"By gum, Sal, it's fine. Why don't you buy some for yourself?"

FINKLE & LYON
SEWING MACHINE CO.

OFFICE 281 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

GUARANTEE.—After a fair trial, if any purchaser does not regard the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine as superior to any machine in market, he can return it and have his money. It has taken many of the highest prizes—is less complicated than any other first class machine,—does a wider range of work without changing,—requires no taking apart to clean or oil, and no "lessons" to set needle, regulate tension, or operate machine.

N. B. Any Clergyman sending us two orders for Machines, shall receive one for himself as a present. The same proposition is extended to Professors and Teachers.

We have now completed our New Manufactory at a cost of some $240,000, including New Patents and important Improvements, and the object of the above proposition is to secure the immediate introduction of our improved machine into every town in the United States without incurring the great expense of a travelling agent.

This proposition cannot avail in towns occupied by our own agents.

Please send for descriptive Catalogue, with samples of sewing.

A WORD TO THE LADIES.

AT the commencement of a New Year, the proprietor of

Frank Leslie's Lady's Magazine

Appeals, confidently, to his fair subscribers to assist him in increasing its circulation. The simple fact that they them elves patronize it is a sufficient proof that they consider it the best, a distinction which the publisher has endeavored to deserve, by sparing neither pains nor expense.

The double Steel Fashion Plate, exquisitely colored, surpasses that of any other Magazine, while the other Fashion plates exceed in number and beauty those of all other Lady's Magazines combined.

The commencement of a New Year and a New Volume, induces us to ask our Lady Subscribers to recommend this, their favorite publication to their friends. This will enable the proprietor to render Frank Leslies Lady's Magazine still more acceptable.

The present number contains two features of great interdat:—One a series of Lithographic copies of the most popular Parisian Pictures, colored in exact imitation of the original, possessing all the delicacy and finish of water colors. And the other a Plate of Doll Fashions arranged to be cut into separate pieces, so as to form a perfect Doll with change of costume. Other pictures and models are in course of preparation and will appear in succeeding numbers.

Terms,—One copy one year, or 12 numbers, $3 50; four copies one year, in one wrapper, to one address, $14, with an extra copy to the person getting up a club.

Subscriptions to be sent to

FRANK LESLIE,
537 Pearl Street, N. Y.

IT HAS BECOME NECESSARY

TO SUPPLY ANOTHER SET OF TELEGRAPHIC INSTRUMENTS and open another Office, to meet the wants of the constantly increasing number of Students studying this Art at the

LONDON COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.

In future those Students learning to operate by paper will be entirely separate from those learning by sound. Regular instruction will be given in each class every day.

Instruction will also be given each day in Phonography by Mr S. Hutchinson, late reporter for Fowler & Wells, N. Y. We guarantee that an ordinary student can become thoroughly grounded in this Science whilst taking the Commercial Course, without materially interfering with h s progress in that course.

The additional charge for full instruction in Telegraphing is only $5.

The additional charge for full instruction in Phonography is only $5.

Owing to the increase in the number of our Commercial Students, we have also found it necessary to add to our already large number of desks, and the cry is, "Still they Come." All right, Gentlemen! We will furnish a desk and seat for each of you, and good practical instruction, too. Remember, you can take a good thorough course in this College cheaper than in any other. Please send for circular, containing full information. For specimens of Penmanship, &c, enclose stamp and address,

J. W. JONES,
Principal of London Commercial College,

AMERICAN
Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering
SEWING MACHINE!
COMPANY,

627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLE made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses; thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary.

One Needle and Two Threads are only Used.

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indispensible for Button-holes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done in colored, shaded or chine silks, and produce a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c, &c, it is indispensable; it is also admitted to be of great value, to other branches as it Braids, Embroidere, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c., &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleaker, where instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P. S.—A novel patented BUTTON-HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

Machine, $125.00; Button-Hole Cutter, $5.00.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

PIANO-FORTES
DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrumen is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old principle of stringing by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Dunois is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek.	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfield,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Bailli,
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry.	Charles Fradel

Mr. EGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical: in purity, volume, and compass of tone, in vocal verasimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept 7—Upon a careful examination of Dunois Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilliancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument: an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr S. B. Dunois, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN
SEWING MACHINES.
EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB. 14th, 1860.

Salerooms, { 536 Broadway, New York, 252 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles of mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shuttle stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nainsook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number, having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health.

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it almost impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply themselves with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

OF
Peterborough and Ashburnham.
THE undersigned beg to announce that their New Map of the Town of Peterboro' and of the Village of Ashburnham, is now complete and ready for publication.
This Map has been executed with great care from the original registered plans and surveys, and its entire accuracy secured not only by those means, but by actual survey and careful admeasurement in the two corporations named, not only is every Lot given and its subdivisions where divided, but the names of the owners, as contained in the last Assessment Roll, are neatly printed on each lot. All public buildings, manufactories stores, and private residences, together with the existing and proposed railways, streets, mill-races, water-courses dams, bridges, &c, are laid down from actual measurement. The built-up portion of the town is so colored as to distinguish at a glance the materials used, whether of wood, stone or brick; while the whole is finished in a superior manner so as to be both useful and ornamental, in securing which neither pains nor expense have been spared.
During the ensuing week, the undersigned will be prepared to receive the names of intending subscribers, at their office, Scott's Buildings Early application is desired, as but a limited number of copies will be published.

THE MOTHER'S FAITH.

"Hark how the wind is whistling, mother!
List to the driving rain,
And, alas, to think that my gentle brother
Is tossed on the stormy main."
The mother raised her meek blue eye
From the Holy Book to the stormy sky,
And a moment's blush went o'er her brow
As she thought of the tossing flood below,
But she checked her human weakness well,
And sighed for the heart that would rebel;
And then she meekly spoke—"My love,
I will not fear, there's a God above."

"But look at the tossing waves, mother,
How they dash and foam and roar,
And the wild winds howling almost smother
Their echoings ashore."
The mother looked to the ocean wild,
And her heart grew sick for her absent child,
And the strong prayer rose from that swelling heart—
"My God, thy help and aid impart."

"Look, look to the patch from the beach, mother,
Some neighbor that must be—
O, should he say my only brother
Is wrecked in that stormy sea!"
But the mother's brow grew deeper flushed,
And her very breath at her heart was hushed,
And the light in her meek and trustful eye
Grew bright as a star in a frosty sky;
Then over the cottage floor she sprung
And back the door on the hinges flung,
And round her wet and weary boy
She flung her arms in feverish joy.
The gallant ship is all a wreck,
But she had fallen upon his neck;
His hard-earned wealth is lost and gone,
But the God of mercy hath spared her son.

THE PASTOR'S WIDOW.

(Concluded.)

'When I was young,' she began, 'I little thought of ever becoming a citizen of B——. But, begging your pardon, it is not all gold that glistens. I belonged to one of the small towns in which, as the proverb says, you may pour out a quart of cream at the higher gate and gather it again at the lower without losing a drop. My father was the gate-keeper, and had besides to look after the town clock, and to see that it kept good time. It was an important post, but a difficult one too, for the clock was old and had a trick of standing; and if my father did not find this out at once, the mayor, or the lawyer's lady, or some of the first quality in the little town were sure to be down upon him, and send him flying out with a threat that if the time was not better looked after, a change would have to be made. Just under the gate my father had set up a little shop, both a source of profit and amusement. There the very best matches were to be had, as well as other things,—tobacco, for instance, and coffee; and in winter, walnuts and chestnuts too. My father was a widower, and had no child but me, nor could he afford to keep a maid. My father was not one of those who fix themselves about time. He ate his dinner when it was ready, and did not expect it to be always to a minute, like the lawyer's lady, with her pointed nose. I often was rather perplexed what to do to make the two ends meet, but I was contented. It never occurred to me that we were badly off, and the Sundays were always beautiful days. There was church in the morning, and time for the most delightful meditations; and when Monday came, I began to look forward to the next Sunday. And so I lived on, quite, though quietly, so. I had indeed, very few playfellows, and was generally at home where there was more than enough to do; but my father was very kind to me, and what better did I want? To be sure, I had my troubles every now and then,—if a flower I was fond of died or my father gave me a slight reproof. One day—but really I do not know how to tell you this part, I must skip this,' said the old lady, positively blushing.

But we were well aware that this would turn out the most interesting part of her story, and therefore we never ceased begging and coaxing till she began again.

'One day—one day'—but she stammered over it a good deal, and it was some time before we could get her fairly started.

'One day, then—it was on a Thursday, and getting on to evening—a short gentleman made his appearance in my little shop, and inquired for tinder. I served him as I should any one else; he was a long time in choosing. "I gave him my advice, and at length he went off without my thinking more about him than that he was a kind-mannered gentleman, had a lively voice, and no doubt sang well. I wished I could hear him.

'The next Monday he again appeared suddenly before me, and quite startled me, for I had entirely forgotten him. He was full of praises of the tinder, and inquired whether we had tobacco as well, his being nearly done. I said we had and as he had been so much pleased with the tinder, he said he might trust us as to tobacco, and I had to put him up a small parcel, which I did in fear and trembling, lest he should not approve it. At last Monday came again, and he too, saying he had never bought any tobacco so good as ours, strange to say; but it was not always the largest shops that had the best things, and in future he should get everything he could from us. I did not know what to say in reply and but that he spoke so kindly I should have thought he was surely laughing at us.

'In the evening I told my father that a gentleman had been to the shop, who meant always to buy his tobacco from us. I should like to know his name. When my father had asked what he was like, and heard that he always appeared on a Monday, he pronounced that it must be the Helmsdale curate who was in the habit of coming to town on that day, and got laughed at because he always bought a small bottle of some stomachic elixir at the apothecary's. It made me very angry to think that people should laugh at so kind a gentleman, and next time he came I was the more attentive, because I felt sorry for him. He chatted, too, longer than usual, and when I called him Reverend Sir, seemed pleased at my knowing who he was. He told me that Monday afternoon was the only time he had for recreation; early on Tuesday he had to set to work again studying for the following Sunday.

'Now then I became fonder than ever of the Sunday, because Monday came next. All the week through I used to think, "Oh, if Monday was but here!" But I was always in great alarm lest my father should send me out on a Monday afternoon, and the curate find no one in the shop, and so buy his tobacco elsewhere.

'On one occasion, just as he had pocketed his purchases, a sudden snow-storm came on. It got quite dark, and the snow blew in at the door, so that I could do nothing but shut it to and ask him to step into our room, for, with the door shut, we could hardly have turned round in the little shop. As it was he was covered with snow, and I should have liked to have shaken it off, but did not, out of respect.

'From that time we got on more friendly terms, and he used to come, not only into the shop but the room, to have a look at the rose-tree. My father thought a great deal of him, both because it was an honour to be on familiar terms with the clergy, and because he listened so patiently to my father's droll stories, and would laugh at them heartily, which was a new thing to my dear father, who hardly ever met with any one who had not heard them before; and he would say, "Such gentlemen are not often to be met with in our part of the country; things would go on better if there were more like him."

'Now people even began to tease me about a love affair. I looked upon it merely as one of their customary jokes, and laughed with them. All I feared was, that the curate might come to hear of it, and get his tobacco elsewhere, which would have been a loss any way, particularly to my father, who so enjoyed a talk with him.'

At that we both smiled, and the sheriff's lady said,

'But you, my dear madam, would you not have been grieved, too, if the curate had left off his visits?'

'No doubt I should, afterwards,' she replied, 'but I was not conscious then of my own real feelings. To be sure, I used to think what a fine position a pastor's wife had: how she could have her own way in house and garden, and go about her parish like a queen amongst the other women, particularly if she had such a good, learned gentleman for her husband as the curate was. But that such good fortune could ever all to me didn't enter my head, nor did he give me any room for thinking of it. He was not one of the young gentry, who pay compliments to every girl they meet. Nothing of the kind ever passed his lips; he was kind, but grave; always called me Miss Susan; never shook hands with me; never spoke of settling, or of future prospects, or bragged about his sermons; only sighed sometimes over his difficulty in composing them.'

'Those men are the most dangerous of all, my dear lady,' I broke in; 'they only humble themselves that they may be praised by others.'

'No, indeed, no; that he never did; he was far too sincere for that; he was not like folks now-a-days. And it would have done him no good either. I could not have praised him, nor should I like to have told him what people said; that they were getting rather tired of him at Helmsdale: he had been there so long—not that there was much to find fault with, either, except that he was so short in stature.

'But one Monday came and did not bring him, and waiting and watching were all in vain; the whole week through not a creature came from Helmsdale from whom I might inquire whether the curate was sick. To be sure, he had missed one Monday before, but then he had told me of it beforehand, and taken two packets of tobacco. Ah! this was a long week, indeed, and my father and I did nothing but wonder what had happened to him. The following Monday the weather was so dreadful that we decided he never could come. However, on the mere chance, I thought I would make it twelve o'clock a little earlier than usual, so as to get our dinner well over and things all out of the way, and to have time to—well, I will not say dress myself a little, my father would have given me a proper lecture for that—but at all events it could do no harm if I gave my face an extra wash, and changed to put on the handkerchief that I wore on Sunday.

'As we were in the middle of our dinner, a knock came to the door, which indeed often happened, for people had a way of leaving things under our care, and my father called out, "Come in." And in came—(in reverence the Curate. Perhaps we had heard that he had been appointed to the living of Carnethal?

'No, indeed; and very kind we took it of the reverend gentleman that he should take the trouble of announcing this to us himself. But there was more to come, which quite overwhelmed both my father and me. He went on to ask me in marriage, and dwelt so beautifully on his being an orphan, and alone in the world, and that he wanted a wife to be father, mother, and all to him, that I can't help crying to this very day when I think it over. Then he told how that he thought he had found all he wanted in me, in such a way that my father wept out loud like a child, so that I did not know whether he was pleased or not; and when he ceased speaking, neither of us could answer him a word. And thus I, a poor gate-keeper's daughter, was to become a pastor's wife, and a citizen of B——!! It was too much for my head to take in: it did not seem real, I felt as if in a dream.

'My father was the first to get the use of his tongue, and he went on about the honour and our poverty and I, in my confusion, muttered something about not leaving my father, for how could the shop be carried on without me.

'Then came the best of all the objection Miss Susan had to make,' he said, 'he had anticipated it, and could, he thought, overcome it. He was about to propose that my father should live with us; it would be a great benefit to him if he could make up his mind to do so. There was glebe land with the parsonage that he should not know what to do with; he did not understand country pursuits, and my father did most thoroughly, he knew, and could therefore be of the greatest assistance to him.'

'The next morning the news was all over the town, and before noon our own pastor came to tell my father that, having heard such a report, he felt it his duty to come and warn him of it, and he sincerely regretted that his daughter should have been so indiscreet as to carry on a flirtation with a curate. Then my father replied that I had done nothing of the kind, but that the curate had been appointed to a living, and that quite unexpectedly I had become engaged to him yesterday. Our minister would not believe it, and thought we had mistaken jest for earnest; but when he was really convinced, he wished me grace to profit by my good fortune. But I was still, he said, far from being qualified for such a position, and gladly would he lend me all the assistance he could, and I might come to his house whenever I liked. He added that, he must say he never should have expected such a thing: but it was true enough that still waters run deep.

'You can easily imagine the noise it made in our little town; but no one seemed to grudge me my happiness, not even those at the parsonage, where there were seven daughters. Everybody was kind to me, and seemed to think that my good fortune was an honor.

'I had to go over to B——, where I had never been before. It was a grand day for me, and I enjoyed it much only with fear and trembling. He let me everywhere by the hand, else I should never had courage to walk about, and it was a great relief to me when we left the gates behind us. I was so afraid we should lose our way and not get home again, though he kept assuring me he knew all the ins and outs from his childhood, and could find any given house with his eyes bandaged.

'The following day was the most important in my life; it was that on which our banns were given out, and we went to church together. After that we were busy, indeed! My father was resolved to leave none of our poor furniture behind. What we had, he said, we need not buy, and that was money saved at all events; added to which, under his auspices, the curate bought some very nice things; and as to presents, I had so many I was quite ashamed. It seemed the whole town wanted to share in setting us up. I never could have believed people had been so fond of us. At first we thought we had better not have all our effects carried to the parsonage at once, but my father decided that the sight of such a load would inspire the parishioners with respect, and went with it a day or two before to get all ready for us. The next morning we got quietly married, and that evening arrived at the parsonage.

'That was a day of which I can say little more than that I did not know if I was standing upon my head or my heels. I was so full of joy and humility, that I did not speak a dozen words throughout its course. I seemed to float in rapture and joy inexpressible, and could only thank those who greeted me, with tears.

'"Our new pastor's wife is still quite a child," the villagers said; "but she is one of the children who will turn out a good kind of woman; she has no pride." Ah, no, indeed, I was not proud; I only felt that Heaven had opened and taken me in.

'Many laughed at us, no doubt, but we were not aware of it. And then we, especially my husband, had such a genuine goodwill to all men, that the laughter soon died down and it was allowed that he was one of the right sort, and would help every one if he could. But it was my father who was the most looked up to. He had just the proper self-respect; sat quite at his ease in our mayor's company, and had always plenty to talk of, as well as plenty to do, for our glebe, and especially our orchard, kept his hands full. We lived very much to ourselves. The village was remote; nor had we much intercourse with the other pastors round; my husband was shy, and I still more so. I can quite understand that we were of little value in society; for, if not stupid, we could not prove ourselves the reverse; but we were none the less happy for that. My husband with his flock, my father with his fields, and I with my garden—the narrower our interests, the more engrossing they seemed, and the joy of one was shared by the other two. And our joys were new, day by day; each season brought baskets full, and we were like children in our delight over our crops; more particularly my husband, who had been brought up in the town, and now for the first time experiencing the charms of a country life, felt as if new-born. And in addition to this came the sense of being independently respected and beloved. But indeed he was so good and so dear in every way, that it is not to be told; and often he declared that he had never believed any human being could be so blest, and least of all himself.

'Nor was my father less happy than my husband; and in return for he ascribed all our prosperity to his own efforts. We should see, he said, how differently things would go on but for him; we were but a foolish inexperienced pair, and had no idea of management; and we fully believed him. We both felt that we were blest far above our deserts and indeed I was so childish that I often felt ashamed of it, and almost said in the confession that it could never last.—For small as our income really was, our wants being so few, we always felt ourselves to have all and abound, and I do not believe a happier household could have been found than ours for many, many a year.

'The first blow was my father's sudden death. He had retained his energies so completely that we never thought of losing him. He made a sad gap in our life; we missed him in every way. And then we had no children, and began to feel a conscientious scruple in living so completely to ourselves while others were oppressed by family cares. We thought God meant us to come to this conclusion, and had sent my father's death to point us to it. Then we were childishly delighted to find a little orphan, to whom we both took—a lovely boy, with curling hair; and we rejoiced in the thought of bringing him up well—the more so that he came of a very wild stock. We got inexpressibly fond of the child; he was our little idol; never off the lap of one or other, and allowed to have his own way in everything. Yes, indeed we forgot our garden and our orchard in our new treasure; he might pull our best apples, or knock off the heads of our prettiest flowers; we could not make up our minds to thwart him, though we looked on in sorrow and dismay. We thought that he only behaved so ill because he knew no better, and would get more manageable by-and-by.

'But no, on the contrary, he grew worse and worse, ruder, and more defiant. Do what we would we could not elicit a spark of love or a trace of sorrow. He was a tyrant to all other children in the village, and brought down much censure upon us for our bad bringing up of him; in short, he was a heart-break to us every way; but we reflected that each human being must have his portion of sorrow, and that it behove us to bear it patiently.

'God knows what would have become of us all at last if our dear Lord had not mercifully taken matters into his own hand. He removed the boy out of our keeping: sent his angel, Death to bring him away to himself. The poor fellow showed a much better spirit during his illness; we thought him really improved, and fervently did he implore that he might be spared. But at length we came to see that he only humbled himself under the Lord's hand during his hour of suffering; that if he had got well and been committed to our management once more, he would have been just the same; and our comfort was that God had not allowed him to relapse into evil, but had called him away when his heart was softened, and he wished to improve. We understood at last how gracious God had been in freeing us from a self-imposed responsibility. He gave us no children.—He knew our hands were too weak to rule them. Why should we have tried to be wiser than He, and to undertake duties He had not imposed? For all that He would not suffer a soul to be lost through our folly. The boy was not left to grow mature in sin or to die hardened, nor we to the agonizing conviction of his spiritual ruin lying at our door.

'This was our season of bitterest trial, and taught us to feel the incompleteness of this world. After it was over, our days again flowed on peacefully and lovingly, each brought some good and most sweet joy. We became very skilful in the cultivation of fruit and vegetables, and our garden supplied half our neighbours.

'And so it was, that a long series of years glided away, and we were already getting old, when my husband suddenly died. This blow I had never thought of. He had not been laid up at all, and scarcely seemed less well than usual. He was always rather given to doctoring himself, probably because he had been delicate from childhood, so that it seemed a thing of course that he should be slightly ailing, and a little more or less was not easily observed. It was a thunder-bolt out of a cloudless sky when I so suddenly lost him. Then I discovered the whole extent of my love for him; that I had lived, as it were, in his life for nearly forty years: that he had been my father, my husband, my child—my all! And yet at first I could not estimate all that was buried in his grave. The village had become my world: I knew of none outside it. All my hope and consolation would have been in remaining there, with my dear trees, near my church, near his grave. The smallest room would have been enough for me, and I knew of one that suited perfectly. We had never saved any money; true, we had spent little on ourselves; but that people were aware of and therefore they required the more, and we both were fond of giving, and so nothing could be put by. But when everything was sold, there was a small sum left; and besides, I had a claim on two widows' funds, and therefore hoped to be able to live on the proceeds. But the gentleman in office would not hear of it. He told me plump and plain that I was a stupid woman, and did not understand the case, and that when I had removed from the parsonage, and had everything to buy, I should have great difficulty in getting on; whereas, if I lived at B——, there were civil rights that I could have the benefit of. But I thought I should have died at the very idea of moving and therefore had the courage to oppose him. 'Very well, try it,' said he; 'we shall soon see who is right.'

'Alas! he was right; but I will not go over all my sorrowful experience of how much kindness and consideration for me was buried in my husband's grave. I had to write and tell the guardian that I could not make the two ends meet; to which he said 'of course not,' and he would look me out a lodging in B——. Ah! that was a season of weeping, and the consolations of my neighbors about the firewood grate, and other prerequisites, only made me the more wretched. I began to fancy they were tired of me, and were glad I was going away, which distressed me bitterly, yet it made my nerves easier. When at length the parting came, my heart nearly broke. The trees were all in full blossom; but many eyes, too were wet, and many an old woman said to me: 'I shall not know what to do with myself when you are gone. We shall never meet here again, but please God we shall elsewhere. I am breaking down every day, and you are dreadfully pulled down of late.'

"And now I found myself in a broad stony street, and knew no one but the guardian of the widow and orphan's fund; and if I chanced to see him I always felt as if he were the bear out of the pit coming to devour me. It was ungrateful of me too for he had cared for me like a father—had taken this room, and put all I wanted into it, and at the same time admonished me sharply not to become a useless gad-about as most of the pastor's widows who came B— did. Alas! He meant well but he little knew how wide of the mark he was. Timid by nature, and made more so by sorrow, I never made an acquaintance—

[illegible] say, at first I never ventured out of my room, saw no trees, no flowers, heard no song of birds. I learnt then what is meant by dying of depression—of feeling that you are forsaken by every living being, are nothing to anybody in all the world, made to live so without sympathy and affection.

"And so for some terrible weeks I did live, and should soon have died, but that God in mercy put it into my head to buy some living thing or other into my room. I ventured as far as the market, and all at once found myself restored to a familiar world. I was acquainted with everything in the stalls, and accustomed to speak to country women. I bought a few flower-pots, and next my little bird, and later took to going to market daily. That was my life, and when I got accustomed to walking about I soon found other places where I could enjoy trees and flowers, especially the beautiful church-yard and pleasure garden outside the town; but I made no acquaintance except the market women, who were always kind to me.

'And so I lived a quiet happy life here, such as I did not believe it possible to know again; and if ever I fell into low spirits, my little bird would come and peck at me till I began to play with him. Then I found my money go much further than in the country, for no one ever asked me for anything, so that sometimes I am ashamed of spending all upon myself and think anxiously how I shall answer when God asks me what I have done for the poor. I have to confess to the guardian whenever he brings me my money, that I am far better off here than in Helmsdale. He never lets me off. He is a worthy man, but when I see him I never can help thinking of the bear we put. Once he invited me to dinner, but I am sure we were all equally glad when it was over. His wife is a smart, talkative lady, and I don't believe I got out ten words; and once back in my little room, I felt exactly as though I had been in the bear's den, and unexpectedly got out alive. I never was so stupid in my life. It is to be hoped they went judge other pastor's widows by me; would be wronging them greatly. But I am thankful that no other invitations came, and I went on living in my quiet way, and very grateful for it to God, till He was pleased to visit me with this trial, and I found out that I could no longer get on alone; and now how grateful to Him ought I not to be, for having sent me his angels in my hour of need.'

Such was the widow's tale, but not told in the course of one afternoon, for talking tired her, and yet it did her good. In her intensely quiet life she had garnered up much of thought and feeling, of which she was scarcely conscious. Her heart was over full: our sympathy unlocked it, and it evidently cheered and refreshed her to tell us what she had experienced.

But she grew more and more feeble. I think hers was naturally a very fragile constitution; healthy so long as day passed after day in the same quiet uniformity, but incapable of sustaining a sudden shock.—Perhaps, too, there may have been some latent constitutional disease, which the accident rapidly brought to a crisis.

She lived on a little while, but it seemed as if her life were all spiritual. She expressed herself far more fervently. Her feelings appeared more lively than in the first part of her illness. She spoke much of making a little journey to Helmsdale when she recovered. She had such an intense longing after her beloved husband's grave, and she should like too to see how the trees had grown in the parsonage orchard, and whether there were any persons left who still remembered her. When I brought her home a present from any of the market-women, she still showed all a child's delight, and would almost weep for joy. But gradually, indeed, they ceased to remember her in the market. Everything gets forgotten at last; only to present her finding it out, I went on bringing her little gifts, as if from the women themselves, and each of them was a solace to her spirit.

It was the will of the Lord that she should die. One morning, just as the sun began to gild her little room, she gently slipped away, without even one deep-drawn breath; the bird alone, who was sitting on her pillow, witnessed her departure, flattered wildly about her head, perched on her shoulder, sang as loudly as he could, as though he would waken her, and when he could not waken her dropped his wings and sat dull and listless in the same place without moving. In a few hours all his feathers looked rough, and in the evening when we were going to put him to roost as usual, we found he was gone to roost forever; he lay dead on her shoulder where in life he had sat so constantly; he had followed his kind mistress; he could not endure to be without her loving care for a single day. It is but seldom man so clings to man. Wives and mourn each other, indeed; but hearts are not often torn to bleeding to say nothing of their breaking outright.

Well, her loss left a large gap in my life too; a gap such as I seldom experience, and for which my cousin, the guardian, has me severely to task. He could not, I said, comprehend my grieving thus after her: we were in no way related; not even in the same social circle; our acquaintanceship had not lasted for many months, therefore my depression was not real, but affected, abnormal, sentiment; all the board of guardians of the orphan institution considered it in that light, and had discussed it with great disapprobation.

As the Pastor's Widow had no relations no one took any notice of her death as the said board, who exactly filled the mourning-coach that followed her coffin. Thus, her departure made no stir on earth, was passed over in utter silence. But much greater was the joy in heaven of the angels who had long known and loved her, when she came to join them, and with them to bless and praise the Lord, as only those who are pure in heart may.

Some girls, in kissing, purse up their mouths as if they were going to perform on the flageolet. That is wrong. Kissing is a luxury that should be indulged in with appetite, and not nibbled at as if it were 'pizen.'

RECIPROCITY.

This much vexed question appears not to be capable of satisfactory or amicable settlement. The American people, very foolishly indeed, imagined that the people of British North America could be forced into annexation by refusing to renew the Reciprocity Treaty. Having once committed themselves to the idea, they seem very tenacious of it. Latest advices declare all negotiations at an end. Telegrams from Washington state that the Provincial Delegates have declined the proposition of the committee on Ways and Means. The Reciprocity negotiations are therefore at an end! The delegates leave to-morrow, the 8th inst. This, therefore, if true, puts an end to the hopes of those who desired its continuance; now we must prepare to suit ourselves to any new order of things that may arise, and try as much as possible to find a new channel for our trade that will free us from being at the mercy, in any way, of a whimsical and unequal nation.

Religious Services at the Jail.

From the report of the County Council proceedings in our late issues, it will be seen that the question of ministerial labors at the Jail was again before the Council.—We were not present during the discussion relative thereto, but learn that Rev. Mr. Beck was almost, if not altogether, the only Gospel Minister that regularly visited the Jail for some time. We, however, feel persuaded that there must be some mistake about the matter, and that some of the visits of other Ministers may have been forgotten, as, of made, must have been made on other than Sabbath days. Ministers, generally, have very much to do on Sabbath days. Two or three services often are to be conducted and those at places several miles apart, thus leaving no time for attending the Jail on that day. Rev. Mr. Beck's labors are wholly in town, and hence he can afford to go to the Jail on Sabbath. Great credit is due to the Rev. gentleman for his attention to the spiritual wants of the prisoners, and it was only a matter of conscientious scruple that prevented the members of the County Council from supporting the resolution for a tangible acknowledgement of his services. But we deem it due to other Ministers to give them credit for their visits, although they may not be on the Sabbath, and we feel sure that the matter only requires to be brought to their notice to ensure attention at all times in their power.

We give to day a copy of a Report of the Committee in the County Council on the settlement of the back country. The Report enters very fully into the progress of the settlement of the new Townships, and what has been done to induce settlement. We ask a careful perusal of the Report; it will repay the trouble, and afford information as well as show the desire of the members of the Council to do all in their power to induce the settlement of those lands that are capable of being successfully cultivated, and that will repay the labors of the settler. It is satisfactory to learn from reliable sources that so much (five sixths) of the wild lands is fit for cultivation, and may be made to produce the usual crops of the country. The wheat from the back country, exhibited at the last agricultural exhibition of this county would have compared favourably with the produce of the Front Townships. The oats equaled any thing grown on new land in any section of the country, and the root-crops equaled any at the exhibition, in our opinion. We therefore hope that government will lend a favorable ear to the memorial, and that ere long we may find that settlers can go back to these new Townships, and there reap the full rewards of industry, and enjoy the comforts of prosperous and happy homes.

Spain.

The revolt lately chronicled to have taken place in Spain is now reported to have come to an end. The leader has been driven into a corner, out of which he will hardly be able to extricate himself. May the rulers learn wisdom and remove the cause of complaint, for until they do so the people will not be contented—a gleam of light and a grasp for liberty are found in some minds, among even the most ignorant.

Postponed.

The Canada Presbyterian Church Soiree will be held on Tuesday 13th instant, instead of monday. This change is on account of the Methodist Missionary meeting being on Monday evening.

The River south of the Bridge is now bridged over with ice, which has not occurred for several years before. The last few days have been intensely cold here.

BOARD OF SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

We learn that on Monday evening the Trustees of the Common School Department of the Union School met, and balloted out two of their number. The Trustees that remain in office are Messrs. Dumble, Cluxton, Lundy, Cameron, Helm and Coulter. This was necessitated because of the change in the law in reference to Grammar School Trustees, there being only six Grammar School Trustees, the Common School having eight would have had a preponderance of two members, and hence the balloting out of two of the Common School Trustees.

The regular meeting of the Board was held on Tuesday evening. Present, all the Board but Dr. McRae.

The Clerk having called the Board to order to proceed with business, on motion of Mr. Coulter, seconded by Col. Haultain, Dr. Burnham was elected Chairman for the current year.

The Dr. having taken his seat, gracefully thanked them for the honors conferred. The Clerk then read official notices from the County Clerk, of the appointment of J. W. Gilmour, Esq., Dr. Poole, and Dr. McRae, by the County Council as Grammar School Trustees, and from Mr. Edwards, Clerk of the Town, of the election of Mr. Dumble, for North Ward; Mr. Cluxton, for East Ward; Mr. Cameron, for Centre Ward, and of Mr. Helm, for South Ward. Also of the appointment by the Town Council, of Colonel Haultain, Dr. Burnham, and Jas. Stevenson, Esq., as Grammar School Trustees.

The Board then unanimously re-appointed Mr. O'Beirne Clerk and Treasurer for the year.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Messrs. Cluxton, Dumble, and Cameron, were named as Committee on Finance.

Mr. Cluxton objected.

Mr. Coulter moved that Messrs. Stevenson, Lundy and Gilmour be the Committee on Finance.

Mr. Stevenson refused to be on the Committee saying if appointed he would not act.

Mr. Stevenson moved that Col. Haultain, Lundy, and Coulter be the Committee.

The Col. remarked that as he (Col. H) would be from home almost four months of the year it would be unwise to appoint him.

After several motions and amendments being offered the original motion was carried. Mr. Stevenson being determined not to act, resigned, and on motion of Col. Haultain, his resignation was accepted, and Mr. Dumble's name put instead of Mr. Stevenson's on the Committee.

COMMITTEE ON PROPERTY.

On motion of Mr. Coulter, Messrs. Cluxton, Helm, Dumble and Cameron, were appointed committee on Property.

Mr. Dumble offered an amendment, that Col. Haultain, Messrs. Lundy and Stevenson, be the committee on property.

The amendment was lost, and the original motion carried.

COMMITTEE TO ADMIT FREE PUPILS.

Col. Haultain, Dr. Burnham, and Messrs. Cluxton and Lundy were appointed a committee to admit free pupils.

COMMITTEE ON AUDITORS.

On motion of Mr. Cluxton, seconded by Mr. Coulter, Messrs. E. Pearse and J. Stratton were appointed auditors.

LOCAL SUPERINTENDENT.

On motion of Mr. Lundy, seconded by Mr. Coulter, Mr. Jas. Stratton was appointed local Superintendent for the current year.

Minutes of last meeting were then read and approved.

A Report from the Principal was then read and received; also a communication from Mr. Currie resigning his situation as Teacher of the fifth department and asking to be heard before the Board.

An application from W. N. Kennedy, to be appointed Drill instructor. It appears that this is not necessary, the matter, we think was referred to a committee.

A communication from the Principal setting forth the crowded state of Mrs. Flavell's room and asking for a Committee to consider what can be done to relieve Mrs. Flavelle; and also setting forth the cause, namely:—many will not send to the North Ward School. It is due to this School to say that there is no fault agt. the School; but no higher than the second is allowed to be taught there, and some consider their children advanced enough for a higher class, and hence wish to send to the Union School. Some also wish to send the small children with large ones, and thus crowd the Primary Department.

Mr. Currie was heard before the Board. The burden of his remarks were faultfindings with the Principal. In reference to the state of the Fifth Division, it is to be remarked that although the Principal reported unfavorably of the late examinations; not these Reports, but the remarks of Professor Young, Grammar School Inspector, that have brought about the present intimated change. It is due also to the Institution to state that Col. Haultain remarked that Prof Young had spoken in the most favorable terms of the state of the Classical Department of the Grammar School, and of the care evidently taken in instructing the pupils. Thus bearing testimony to the efficiency of the Principal.

From the monthly Report read, there were in grammar School, during January, 32 pupils; in Common School, 322; total, 354; average, 267. Last year (1865), total, 356; average, 270. The number in 1864, was about the same.

The matter of Mrs. Flavelle's room, and also of the crowded state of Mr. Griffin's was referred to a Committee consisting of Col. Haultain, Dr. Burnham, Dr. Poole, and Messrs. Dumble, Cluxton and Stevenson.

A Report from visiting Committee, also from the Principal on state of the School was also read, Report not favorable to one Division. The matter remains for further consideration.

There followed some remarks about wood, that is being delivered. They are not of sufficient interest to our readers to publish them.

On motion of Dr. Poole, Col. Haultain, Dr. Burnham and W. Cluxton, Esq., were appointed a Committee to wait on Dr. Ryerson on his arrival here on the 14th instant, with a view of conducting him to his hotel, and rendering his stay as agreeable as the Board may have it in their power.

The Board then adjourned.

Remember the Concert to-night, in Victoria Hall.

BIBLE SOCIETY.

We give copious extracts from the very excellent Report read at the annual meeting. The friends of the Bible will read with gratification the encouraging details thus brought before us.

The annual meeting was eminently successful. The Resolutions bore testimony to the Divine Origin of the Bible and the right of every individual to possess it. The addresses abundantly sustained the tenor of the Resolutions, and amply established the erroneous teaching of that Church which numbers among its followers so many of our citizens, and which resolutely withholds from the masses the Book of Truth, the only infallible guide for faith and practice.

The officers appointed are as follows:—Robert Dennistoun, President; Col. Haultain, A. H. Campbell, John Walton, W. Sheridan, James Hall, J. W. Gilmour, R. Richardson, Vice-Presidents; Wm. Hall, Treasurer and Dep.; T. M. Fairbairn, Secy; D. H. Hogg, Assistant Secy; Thomas Donnelly, J. W. Dunnett, R. Romaine, E. Ingram, Wm. Graham, M. Sanderson, John Dundas, J. M. Burns, D. Pentland, W. Brownscombe, Jas. Edwards, Wm. Tully, R. Rutherford, Jas Stratton, Wm. Cluxton, R. Kingan, Wm. Glover, all Ministers of the Town who were members of the Society, and the Collectors of the Society.

EXTRACTS FROM SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The lapse of another year casts upon your Committee the task of laying before you some account of the doings of your Society since its last Annual Meeting, with such reference to the Parent Institution and the work going on under its direction as the compass of a Branch Society's Report will allow.

At the meetings of your Committee during the year the Society's best interests have been cared for with zeal. As a fruit of its labors a number of Bible meetings have been held, with most marked success, during the previous week, in various parts of the surrounding country, and addressed by members of your Committee. The want of interest hitherto manifested by the people in the Townships about us, in the good work in which we labor, seemed to call loudly for such a movement. That it will result in the dissipation to a great extent of that apathy which has so discouraged our collectors and weakened our usefulness as a Society, may fairly be presumed from the successful character of the meetings.

The new Depository so prominently and conveniently situated is an event of the year. A large increase in the sale of books has followed the opening of it. There have been more than twice as many volumes sold this year as there were last year. Perhaps the most interesting local item which your Committee can refer to is the very satisfactory results of the 1st years operations of the Peterboro Ladies Bible Society. Your Committee were represented at the Annual Meeting of this Society in December last, and learn with truthfullness that what at our last meeting was little beyond an experiment has now become a permanent instrument of most extensive usefulness.

The collections amount to $105.97 of which $91.44 was paid out for 93 Bibles and 28 Testaments distributed during the year, leaving a balance in the hands of the Treasurer, at the date of the Annual Meeting of $114.53.

A growing desire to send a colporteur to the lumbermen, scattered throughout the northern wilds of this County—has manifested itself in the meetings of your Committee, and with the aid of neighboring sister Societies, it is most probable that during the present, much-talked-of year, Godwilling, the precious treasure, His own blessed word will be carried to these now destitute homes.

In to-day's Daily Globe we learn by telegraph from Montreal that the receipts of the Bible Society of that city amount this year to $4000—an increase of $400 over last year, and from the partial returns made by our own collectors it is quite evident that our own Society's fund will this year be equally in advance of last year. Taxing our own increased funds in connection with the ladie's collections we may announce that the Bible work has received more liberal encouragement this year in Peterboro than ever before.

Of the work accomplished by the B. & F. Bible Society, the Earl of Shaftesbury at its last annual meeting gave "Although this be our ordinary anniversary, I will just observe that this is no ordinary Report. I think there never was one that called more energetically for the most unbounded joy and thanksgiving to Almighty God that in a crisis such as this, amidst the apparently conflicting but really harmonious operations of Popery and Rationalism, we should have larger issues of the Bible and much larger receipts to our funds than on any former occasion.

The Icelanders, with warm hearts in the cold regions, continue to receive the Testament and Psalms in their own native tongue, with joy and gratitude. The people are eager to possess them, and the clergy are anxious to obtain supplies for their congregations; but the very peculiar character of the country and the uncertainty of communication render intercourse between the capital and the remote parts of the Island extremely difficult, the transit of bulky packages being very costly. These obstacles will, however, all be gradually removed.

In surveying the vast German field to which the operations of the Society extend, the Committee can announce a state of things which fills them with great joy, and leads them to anticipate such spiritual results as shall hasten the overthrow of error and superstition, and win the allegiance of many hearts to the God of Truth. It is sweet to reap the fruits of toil, to see plans which have been formed with much thought and prayer and matured by patient and persevering efforts, issuing in success far in advance of any hopes that had been cherished. Such is the privilege of your Committee, and such is the privilege of the faithful and zealous agents who have had charge of your German work, and who have discharged their responsibility and duty with an energy, intelligence and devotedness which entitles them to the warmest gratitude of every friend to the dissemination of the Bible. How wonderfully has the action of your Society, under skilful guidance and steady purpose, expanded in Germany, over how large a surface it now ranges. How diversified are the modes by which its one simple object is achieved; how countless are its friends and well-wishers; how many are the facilities it has command for the quiet and unostentatious fulfilment of its mission. It is a most suggestive fact that your circulation last year in connexion with your German Agencies was more than equal to the whole annual circulation effected by the Society in all parts of the world, even after it had been laboring for a quarter of a century.

Of Italy, it is said that there is not only or two from south to south, from the Adriatic to the Mediterranean, which has not been penetrated by the Colporteurs of the Society; and while there are many striking instances of the happy results of this mission to this deeply interesting part of the world, we are assured that in many cases the Scriptures are being read quietly and secretly, and stirring thoughts and enquiries which cannot fail in due time to awaken principles and purposes of the most important character.

PETROLEUM COMPANY.

A meeting of the Stockholders of the above Company was held on Tuesday evening in the Town Hall.

Sheriff Hall occupied the chair. The Secretary, Mr. A. Stewart, presented a memorandum of receipts and disbursements of the proceeds of fifty per cent of the stock which has been already called in. From the memorandum it appears that the Company is in debt to different parties to the amount of two hundred dollars. Considerable discussion arose about the expenses of collecting the fifty per cent that has been collected. It appears that five per cent were allowed for such collection. This, however, was agreed to.

The boring has ceased for some time because of the drill and some other part of the apparatus being in the bore and cannot be got out.

In view of this, on motion of Mr. Williams, seconded by Mr. Douglass, the Trustees were directed to proceed to bore in a new place, as they in their Judgment shall deem fit.

It was also agreed that the work be let by contract, and that sufficient security be required for the due performance of the work.

Mr. Stewart was re-appointed secretary, and the thanks of the meeting tendered to him for his efficient services.

The total expenses to date are $1500, of this sum $1300 have been collected from Stockholders, leaving the Company in debt $200.

Under the circumstances we consider that it is very unwise on the part of the Stockholders to proceed any further, unless under good and sufficient guarantees that a certain amount of work will be performed.

The Lady's Friend.

The February number of this beautiful magazine opens with a very touching steel engraving, entitled "News from the War,"

"The women weep as one children may."

a very expressive engraving indeed, which will, we fear, touch the source of tears in many a sorrowful heart. The large colored double steel Fashion Plate for this number, is as usual refined and elegant; the distinguishing traits of the Fashion Plates of the Lady's Friend. Then we have an engraving of Elise Radner, (an illustration of a story of the same name, with engravings of an Evening Toilet, Rococo Bodice, Embroidery, Children's Fashions, Crochet Imitation of Guipure Lace, Winter Boot, (in knitting,) Greek Lace Trimming, Baby's Hat of white cashmere, quilted; Knitted Carriage Shawl, &c., &c. The music is "Near Thee," the words by Charles Swain. Among the literature we note "Elise Radner," by S. Frost; "Love Folger," a story by August Bell; "The Hidden Bridal Gift," by Aunt Alice; "Rachel Dane's Legacy," by A. H. Heydon; "Stories of our Village," by Beatrice Colon; "Faithful unto Death," by Harris Byrne; New Publications, Receipts, the Fashions, &c., &c. Price $2.50 a year; 2 copies for $1.00; 8 copies (and on gratis) $16. Now is a very good time to get up clubs for 1866. Specimen numbers for this purpose will be sent for 15 cents. Wheeler and Wilson's celebrated Sewing Machine are furnished as Premiums in certain cases. The Prospectus of this Magazine for this year embodies a splendid list contributors. Address Deacon & Peterson, 319 Walnut street, Philadelphia.

County Orange Lodge.

The County Orange Lodge, met in the Orange Hall, Peterboro, on Tuesday last, when the following officers were elected for ensuing year:—

Bro. D. G. Haslon, County Master.
Bro. W. H. Stevenson, County Dep. M.
Bro. John Armstrong, County Treasurer.
Bro. John Smith, County Secretary.
Bro Rev. W. S. Scott, County Chaplin.
Bro. Ron. S. Smith, County Proxy.
Bro. John Simpson, County D. of Ceis.

Correction.

In our last issue in the report of County Council proceedings, we represented the Council as passing a By-law to repeal a certain clause of By-law 262, in reference to the re-survey of Harvey, which was incorrect. The By-law was lost in Committee. The error crept in through careless reading of the minutes.

New Goods.

We invite the attention of our readers to Mr. A. Armstrong's announcement of the arrival of an extensive assortment of Dry Goods. Those requiring articles in his Line would do well to give him a call.

Bible Christian Intelligence.

The tea at the Bible Christian Church, on Friday evening last, was quite a success. From a little after 6, p. m. till 8 the tables were thronged by those apparently determined to do ample justice to the good things so liberally provided by the lady's of the congregation. At 8 o'clock the meeting was called to order by Mr. Cawdon, Pastor, the Church being literally thronged. Evans Ingram, Esq., Warden of the County of Peterborough was unanimously called to the chair, and in a brief but very appropriate speech, placed before the audience the object and design of the meeting. The chief speakers on the occasion were Mr. Richardson, of the Montreal Bank, and Mr. C. Barker, of Cobourg, President of the B. C. Conference.

Mr. Richardson spoke at some length in reference to the past of the great Methodist family, and urged the necessity of closer union between ministers and members of the different evangelical denominations, his remarks were very well received.

Mr. Barker's speech was in truth a master-piece of chaste and simple eloquence.—How we think who heard him will soon forget the influence produced, and which was acknowledged by the wrapt attention, with which the audience hung upon his lips. During some of the more pathetic portions of his speech the silent tear stealing down the cheek, bespoke the powerful motions awakened in the bosom. He took for his motto, what he described as the idol of those lands—"Chance," and drew a striking contrast between that Ephemeral Idea, and the Christian's hope and watchword, "The Lord Reigneth," in the rise and fall of empires, the devastations of great National wars, the mighty revolutions in Kingdoms and States, the direful scourges of plagues, famine, the persecutions of the Church, the blood of martyrs, the joyful and triumphant death-bed scenes of thousands of humble believers. He proved the truth and power of the motto, "The Lord Reigneth."

The performances of the Choir, discoursing sweet music, added greatly to the evening's enjoyment.

The Trustees realized after meeting all expenses the handsome sum of Fifty Dollars.

Peterboro', Feb. 6th, 1866.

Committee on Settlement of Back Country.

The Committee to whom was referred the resolution in reference to the settlement of the new townships of this county reported as follows:—

The special committee to whom was referred the resolution to "enquire into the progress of settlement in the new townships of this county, and into the condition of the settlers therein, and also to enquire into and report upon the best means of promoting the settlement of the unoccupied lands in said township," beg leave to report,—

That they have carefully considered the subject of said resolution, and submit as the result of their enquiries the following conclusions, arrived at after diligent enquiry and mature consideration:—

1st. Your Committee find that twenty-three new townships, comprising a land area of 1,265,000 acres, have been surveyed in the rear of the old settled townships of this county, most if not all of which townships have been subdivided into lots at an approximate expense of $88,550, and that 300 miles of Colonization Roads have been surveyed, at an expense of $30,000, while only 90 miles of Colonization Roads have been made, which, having been constructed under the contract system, were exceedingly inferior, and in many instances impassable, and therefore almost useless as roads, rendering ingress or egress to or from the new townships intended to be opened by them tedious and difficult, and in many instances totally impossible. Your Committee finds, therefore, that owing to the want of roads, and other obstacles to settlement, removable, in the opinion of your Committee, by Legislative enactments and Departmental regulations; and also that although $114,550 has been expended in surveying these townships, yet that only in eleven has settlement taken place, and that the total number of ratepayers for the year 1865, as shewn by the Assessment Rolls of these eleven townships, amount only to the number of 750, and this notwithstanding the fact that settlement of said townships commenced ten years ago. It is obvious, therefore that if settlement of our wild lands is to be made, some better system must be devised and put in practice than has been hitherto resorted to.

2nd. Your Committee are pleased to be able to announce that the information obtained in relation to the condition of the settlers in the new townships is of the most gratifying character. The labours of the industrious settler have been everywhere rewarded during the past season with the most abundant results. Crops of every kind succeeded well, and the produce of the soil in many instances has been of the most bounteous character. Settlers who have the advantage of roads are reported to be contented and prosperous. Municipal organizations are going into effect, and the erection of churches and school houses are being proceeded with. In fine, by the removal of the impediments which operate so grievously against the progress of settlement, there can be no doubt, in the opinion of your Committee, that ere long the vast area of surveyed lands in the rear of this and neighbouring counties would rapidly become occupied by a thriving agricultural population.

3rd. While enquiring into the best means of promoting the settlement of the lands in the new townships, your Committee have deemed it essential to obtain all the information within their reach in relation to the quality of the lands in these new townships, and with this view have solicited information from the gentlemen by whom many of them were surveyed, and also from the Crown Lands Agent, who has personally inspected several of them, as well as from settlers and others, who, from a residence or knowledge over a period of several years, are in a position to supply information on this subject of a reliable character; and as a result of the enquiries your Committee have arrived at the conclusion that at least sixty-five per cent of the available land area in these town-ships is well adapted for agricultural purposes. And your Committee also desires to make known the fact that it has been ascertained by repeated experience that where crops—roots or cereals—have been sown in proper season the yield has been equal to that of the most fertile lands in the Province; and as regards fall wheat, which has occasionally been sown under unfavorable circumstances, as frequently occurs in new sections of the country, yet even this crop has seldom been known to yield less than a fair average. In fact this is generally looked upon as a sure crop if sown in proper time, 1st of October.

4th. The attention of your Committee has been directed to the 11th paragraph of a memorial from the Municipal Council of the County of Simcoe, addressed to His Excellency the Governor General, and dated Nov. 29, 1865, which paragraph, being in accordance with former memorials emanating from this Council, your Committee adopts as its own, and which is as follows:—

"Your memorialists feel bound to again state to your Excellency that they feel satisfied that a free grant system, with proper restrictions as to actual settlement, is the true policy by which the Government of a new country should be guided in the disposal of its Agricultural Lands, inasmuch as rapid settlement tends more than anything else to increase the wealth and material prosperity of the community, and by increasing the number of contributors to the public exchequer, more than makes up in a pecuniary way for the increased direct outlay which would in that case have to be made in connection with the Crown Lands Department; and they would therefore again suggest and press upon the attention of your Excellency the advisability that the Crown Lands in Upper Canada, which are yet at the disposal of the Crown and of the ordinary description suitable for farming purposes, shall in future be offered free to actual settlers or at a nominal price, to cover the expenses of survey, and accompanied by the most stringent regulations as to settlement; and further that all lands not occupied or held by actual settlers, the purchase money of which is in arrears to the Crown, shall be declared forfeited so soon as the same can be legally done, and at once offered for settlement as an encouragement to immigration and to obtain for settlement a large quantity of the wild lands of the Province now held by speculators to the great injury of the Agricultural interests of the Province."

5th. In connection with the mode of disposing of public lands, and equally important therewith, as regards settlement, your Committee considers the system of Colonization Roads, and in relation thereto beg to express their hearty approval of the abolition of the contract system, which they look upon as an entire failure in its application to the construction of Colonization Roads. They would, however, urge that the Government be solicited to deal liberally with such roads under the new system, and to construct them in such a manner at least that new municipalities may in the future be reasonable expected to keep them in repair; and your Committee further urge the imperative necessity of constructing intersecting lines of road, either along the boundary lines between townships or wherever extensive tracts of good land may occur. Such lines of road, although not necessarily to any great length nor expensive in construction, would aid in a very important measure in the settlement of unoccupied lands, especially if the free grant system were to be adopted in connection therewith, which your Committee beg leave to recommend.

6th. It has been ascertained that the 9th section of the Act entitled an Act to amend the Consolidated Assessment Act of Upper Canada, &c., passed October 15th, 1863, operates in many cases prejudicially to new settlements, inasmuch as it is made incumbent on Township Councils to assess lands from which it frequently happens the taxes cannot be collected; but on such, owing to their being assessed, Township Councils are compelled to pay County and School rates. Your Committee, therefore, are of opinion that the section referred to should be so amended as to make it optional with Township Councils to assess such lands or not.

7th. Your Committee finds that the present system of granting timber licenses calls loudly for amendment. It is ascertained that the lumbering interests as well as the interests of settlement are prejudiced by the system now in practice, and as a remedy for the evils which exist, your Committee recommend that the Government be memorialized to order a careful inspection of public lands with the view of ascertaining what lands are fit for settlement and what are not, so that a proper system of classification may be adopted, and that lands considered unfit for settlement and suitable for lumbering purposes should be withheld from sale.—And also that lands considered suitable for agricultural purposes, although bearing timber of marketable value, should in every case be entirely exempt from the operations of timber licenses.

8th. It has been represented to your Committee that the want of mills in new settlements is a serious drawback, retarding the progress of settlement for a long time. They therefore beg to recommend that Government be memorialized to grant such aid to individuals as will ensure the erection of mills, as it is considered that the outlay on this account will be amply compensated by the impetus which will be given thereby to settlement. And your Committee are further of opinion that houses should be erected at convenient points on Colonization Roads, which could be temporarily occupied by settlers while building houses of their own; and also that provision ought to be made for supplying new settlers with seed and provision at convenient points and at moderate rates.

9th. Your Committe, feeling the importance of the subject committed to them, regret that the time to which they have been limited does not permit them to make so full a report as they would desire, and pray therefore that they be not now dissolved, but be permitted to report again at the next meeting of this Council.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

PETER PEARCE,
Chairman.

On motion the report was adopted and subsequently embodied in a Memorial to His Excellency the Administrator of the Government.

SMITH COUNCIL.

Smith, Feb. 6th, 1866.

The Council met. All the members present.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

Moved by Mr. Fitzgerald, and seconded by Mr. Galvin,—That the offices of Assessor and Collector for this Municipality for the current year be let by tender, the Council reserving the privilege of not being obliged to accept the lowest or any tender.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Fitzgerald, and seconded by Mr. Galvin,—That the Clerk do advertize the letting of the offices of Assessor and Collector by tender with written notices, and that sealed tenders be received until monday the 19th instant, said tenders to be directed to the Reeve of this Council and marked, "tender"

A Petition from Samuel White and others, was presented and read, praying that new overseer of Highways be appointed for Road Division No. 78 for the current year.—Prayer granted.

After appointing, by motion, 95 overseers of highways, 11 pound-keepers and 14 fence-viewers, the council adjourned till Monday, the 19th instant, then to meet to confirm the above appointments by By-law, examine the tenders received for the offices of assessor and collector and transact other business belonging to the Township.

Alleged Case of Child Murder.

On Monday last a telegram was sent from Brantford to the Mayor of Chatham, for the purpose of having arrested on charge of child murder a negroe man named O'Banyan, and a woman named Rachel Palmer. A telegram was handed to the Police Magistrate, who put it in Constable Goodyear's hands who was successful in effecting the arrest of both parties the same day and lodging them in the gaol. On the following day they were taken in charge by an officer from Brantford, and left Chatham for that place on the day Express. The circumstances of the case, as we have heard them, are as follows:—Fall O'Banyan was living in Brantford, where he has a wife who we are told is now in gaol on charge of robbery or house-breaking. He not only presented in the Episcopal (colored) Methodist Church, but inconsistently co-habited with the female Rachel Palmer. In October last a child was born, the result of this illicit intercourse, which child was taken care of made away with, and of the whereabouts remained unknown to all save two or three until Monday last when, upon the revelation of an eye witness to the murder and doing away with the child, it was found in the vault of a privy. It was, on this revelation that the arrest of O'Banyan and his paramour were made. So far as we have heard the case, there appears to be no question as to the guilt of the parties charged. At the time of his arrest O'Banyan was engaged in holding protracted meetings among the colored people of Chatham, where he has hitherto been looked upon as worthy, zealous, and exemplary member of the colored Episcopal Methodist denomination.—Chatham Planet.

A SAD NARRATIVE.—In Canada, it is common for small farmers to go into the woods in the winter as lumber men, and one of this class, residing at Hawkesbury, left his wife and five children in their lonely farm house. Last Saturday afternoon, which was a very severe day, this woman was doing the necessary work outside, and, on coming in felt ill, and lay down by the stove, where she died. The eldest child, a girl of seven, tried to cry to the next neighbor, three or four acres off, but the storm prevented them from hearing her. She then laid the baby in its dead mother's bosom to prevent its crying; but when she perceived that the stove was getting cold, and the baby chilled, she took it to bed, and made the other child lie on the other side, locking their arms together, in order to keep the baby and them selves warm. Providentially a neighbor came in next morning about ten o'clock and found the dead mother, and the three little ones nearly dead with cold. Horrible to relate, the cat had eaten off one of the fingers of the deceased mother.—White v.

The report is current, both in Quebec and Montreal, that the Governor General has written a letter from England intimating that the Queen has appointed His Royal Highness, the Duke of Cambridge, to visit this country in May next to open the Parliament buildings at Ottawa. The Canadians for such a report is far from being improbable; and if realized, will cause considerable gayety in Canada. The Duke of Cambridge is Her Majesty's cousin, a member of the Royal Family, and would be something more than viceroy should he come here. Without the official appointment he would be entitled to royal honors. He, is besides, a Field Marshal, and the Commander-in-Chief of the forces, and the highest military honors would have to be paid him. His visit will be sure to make a great stir among the military, and be a matter of considerable interest to the public, who will be glad to note that the inauguration of our new Legislative Buildings is to be presided over by a person of such distinguished rank.—News.

We tell the American public—and they have heretofore found us pretty accurate prophets in everything relative to the Fenian cause—that before ten weeks there will be, somewhere, an Irish Republic existing on the face of the earth, with a flag, an army, a port of entry, a navy of privateers, and the inalienable government both of France and the United States in the prosecution of belligerent acts against Great Britain—Let no one ask us for the present where this republic will be located, for we cannot answer. It must be called a Republic, to warrant the flag and fleet, but will really only be used as an immediate basis of operations for the transfer of active hostilities to the Canadian and Irish soils. A word to the wise is enough. And now, while the quid nunc's grow excited, the wise will await developments, giving liberally of their means to aid the cause: nor will they have to tarry long fulfillment of all that we here in foreshadow.

Supposing that they take possession of the island of Juan Fernandez or the barren rock of St. Helena, or some Guano island in the Pacific Ocean and fight it out there.

A Horrible Record of Crime.

THREE MURDERS IN FIVE HOURS.

On Thursday of last week, three shocking murders were committed in the city of Indianapolis, Indiana; all within five hours of each other. A man of the name of Buchanan, violent in temper and dissipated in habits, has for some time past been noted for his barbarous treatment of his wife, to whom he has been married about eleven years. He had repeatedly threatened to take the unfortunate woman's life, and on the 15th of December last he had been arrested and bound over to keep the peace. They then removed to the house of her brother, where she supposed she would be safe. On Thursday week Buchanan became partially intoxicated, bought a pair of pistols, and swearing that he would kill his wife. They were, however, taken away from him, after which he went to the residence of Mr. Liddy, and entered the room in which his wife was sewing.—Mrs. Liddy, who was in the back room, heard them talking a short time, when Buchanan went out, but in a few moments returned. Almost immediately after his return, Mrs. L. heard a scuffle in the front room, followed by a fall on the floor and the shriek of a woman. Opening the door she saw Mrs. B. prostrate on the floor while the fiend was standing with his foot on her body and stabbing her about the head and neck with an axe. Buchanan told her not to come near or he would kill her too, upon which she ran out and alarmed the neighborhood with her shrieks. After hacking the insensible body of his victim until he was satisfied, Buchanan deliberately walked out of the house, threw the bloody weapon to one side, and was walking off when he was taken into custody.

About seven o'clock the same evening 3 prisoners in the jail made an attack upon a man named Williams another prisoner. He defended himself as well as he could with a stick, but his assailants inflicted such terrible wounds upon him with a knife that he died in a few hours. About two hours later an ineffective attempt was shot made at the escape by a notorious Indian named Longnecker.

A few days ago a tragedy occurred at the village of Marion, near Little Rock, Arkansas. Some robbers broke into a house occupied by a person named Whiting, who aided by his son attempted a resistance, one of the thieves fired at the old gentleman and missed him, Mr. Whiting immediately returned the fire killing his man almost instantly. The other three fired almost simultaneously, two balls taking effect on the person of Mr. Whiting—one in the body and the other in the in the head. The son fired and closed upon the ruffians, but he was overpowered and desperately cut over the head and in the side. By this time the female portion of the family rushed out of the house, and the robbers took their leave precipitately, leaving the house, as well as their dying comrade. He expired in a few minutes after. Mr. Whiting died in a few hours from his wounds, but the son, it was thought would live. The robber who was killed was not identified.

Important Address to the Fenians of Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Feb. 5.

The following card was published in Buffalo this morning:—

To the Friends of Irish Independence. The Fenian Brotherhood of America, which for the last seven years has been preparing to strike a blow for Ireland's freedom, is now gathering up its ens gies for the conflict. A veteran Irish officer, of unsullied honor and a brilliant military reputation, who has spent eighteen years in the military service of the United States, has volunteered his services to lead the hosts which are now about to be marshaled under the green flag of Ireland. The time for action has arrived!

The plan for action is now perfected and all that is now required is to take place in the hands of the thousands of brave men who are to-day ready to take the field and fight for their country's liberation. Men of Ireland, the eyes of the world are upon you! The story of your wrongs has long furnished an eloquent theme for your orators and your poets, and the suffering and degradation to which a despotic power have subjected your country have enlisted the sympathy of the people of all climes who love liberty. An opportunity is now yours of showing that your professed love of country is sincere and that you are ready to offer every aid consistent with your means for the salvation of your native land. Let there be no wavering or no flinching. Now the men who are engaged in this movement are the sons of the exiled of the millions of our race throughout the United States will now prove true and steadfast to the cause, the fight will result in glorious victory, and the Irish name and race be redeemed from the humiliation which for centuries have rested upon them. Our American fellow-citizens we feel assured, will not be deaf to the call which the Fenian brotherhood of America now make on them to aid in the work of winning Irish independence. The Irishmen of America have manifested the most loyal devotion to this Republic, and have ever been found ready to fight and die for the preservation of American liberties. In conclusion, we repeat that speedy and effective action is now the purpose of the Fenian brotherhood. All we ask is the implements of warfare. To procure those, money is required. [Here follows the names of a committee of thirty, to collect funds for the above-named purpose.]

Signed by order of the brotherhood,

P. O'DAY,
District Centre.

A few days ago it was announced that a vessel, manned by Irishmen, had sailed from New York, and that when outside the bar it raised the flag of the Irish Republic. The assumption was that it was an Irish privateer, hitherto up to prey on British commerce. It turned out afterwards that the famous privateer was simply a pilot boat on her trial trip, but we think it quite possible that what was then but a rumor may yet be a fact. The fools are not all dead yet, and it may be that Fenian dupes and Yankee speculators may try their hands at privateering. The following paragraph from the New York Albion gives a sensible hint to such, if such there be:

"There have been silly rumors during the week that a Fenian privateer had gone to sea to capture British vessels. We have the utmost contempt for Irish intelligence in everything that pertains to their absurd but dangerous plot it may be called. Still, we do not think that they are such absolute fools as to risk their precious necks in such unprofitable adventures. A broken head at Donnybrook may be pleasant but there is no recalling, alive, a privateering at the yard-arm.

The American people and the Irish in America have learned a bad lesson from the manner in which Confederate privateers were treated by the Federal authorities, if they assume that under the flag of the Irish Republic they could play the same game against British commerce with impunity. The Irish privateers will find two very serious points of

"WILD OATS."

When all the world is young, lad,
And all the trees are green,
And every goose a swan, lad,
And every lass a queen,
Then hey for boot and horse, lad,
And round the world away;
Young blood must have its course, lad,
And every dog his day

When all the world is old, lad,
And all the trees are brown,
And all the sports are stale, lad,
And all the wheels run down,
Creep home and take your place there,
The spent and maimed among;
God grant you find a face there
You loved when you were young.

Hints on Feeding Cattle.

Cattle feeding is a science or trade, to be studied and learned like any other. One man will make the same amount of feed go further and accomplish more than another. A great deal depends on knowing how.

Major George Taylor, of Westfield, who is literally head and shoulders above most other men, has had some seventeen years' experience in feeding, and his father was a feeder before him. Some of the best cattle in that famous cat-cattle town have graduate from his stalls, and allowing success to be test, his practice and observations are worthy of consideration. His usual practice is to feed coarse hay first in the morning, then dry meal and then two or three foddermes of finer hay and rowen.—After the cattle are well filled, about 11 a m., they are to ned out to water, and while out the stalls are regulated, cleaned and strawed. They are immediately stabled again, as they gain faster shut up, and are expected to be down till feeding time again. About 3 p. m. dry meal is given them one or two foddermes of hay, and lastly stalks, which answer for the night.—Every leaf and straw unconsumed is removed from the mangers between the feedings. Only such quantities and qualities are fed, as are likely to be eaten entire and clean. The hay is mostly pulled with a hay hook, in order to draw from different layers of the mow, and thus secure greater variety. The meal is a mixture of corn, rye and oats. Eight quarts of meal a day per animal, a common regular allowance, and less bulky to overload the stomach than a larger quantity. Coarse herds grass is poor stuff to fatten cattle. Fine English clover and rowen hay are best. Poor hay if any, is fed to old cattle that can bear it. The best fat cattle is kept growing from youth. They should never be allowed to waver or decline, as their recovery is more expensive than their continued advance. An animal fed heavy one day and light another becomes big bellied and a great eater.—Regularity is indispensible to success. The cattle thus know what to expect and do not fret over deferred hopes. Cattle at five years old have all the bone and lean meat possible, and have done growing. They increase after that in fat, which at first so oddly shows over the muscles and in the last stages of ripeness manifests in bunches and mixed upon projections. There is no profit in feeding beyond this. Comfort is another requisite in good management. Animals should have a soft bed. Cattle have been known to lose their hoofs and become lame by standing on manure. Heating manure induces foul. This is in the exercise a fattening animal needs. He has sometimes got up at midnight, because of sounds of distress at the barn, and only found his cattle grunting and stretching themselves with fullness. He prefers large cattle because they eat but little more than small ones, and they weigh heavier and are more profitable.—Springfield Republican

We had, last winter, as a man-of-all-works, a youthful "American citizen of African descent," named Tom. Tom is something of a genius, in his peculiar ways and though 'not very hetty on work" as he expressed it, yet is "some" on wits sayings. Tom prides himself on the purity of his blood. "No mean, mangy white blood 'bout dis yer chile," Tom is wont to say.

On one occasion Mrs. P——, "the lady of the house," found Tom in the kitchen giving way to a series of b'hoos, accompanied by a copious flood of tears.

"Why, Tom, what is the matter with you?" asked the kind-hearted lady.

To whom Tom replied: "Dey sez my brodder—b'hoo!—hab been and gone and marr'd a wite woman—b'hoo!"

"I should think you would be glad of it, Tom," rejoined she.

"Why, missit, I tell jes bad 'bout my brodder merr'in a wite gal as you'd feel 'I yout brodder marr'd a culled lady."

A person having an ass to go by train from North Shields, sent it to the goods station for Newcastle. The porters were placing it in a van, when a fog asked what they charged for taking the animal. "Nine pence, sir," was the reply. "And pray, my good fellow, what do you charge for a donkey?" inquired the fog. "Sir," rejoined the porter, "you know what you paid for your ticket.

Sir William B——, being at a parish meeting, made some proposals that were objected to by a farmer. Highly enraged, 'Sir' said he to the farmer, 'do you know, sir, that I have been to the two Universities, and at two colleges in each University?'—Well, Sir,' said the farmer, 'what of that? I had a calf that sucked two cows and the observation I made was, that the more he sucked the bigger calf he got to be.'

An Irish glazier was putting a pane of glass into a window, when a groom who was standing by, began joking him, telling him to mind and put in plenty of putty. The Irishman bore the banter for a time, but at last silenced his tormentor by "Arrah, now, be off wid ye, or I'll put a pain in your head without any putty."

"If you ever think of marrying a widow," said an anxious parent to an heir, "select one whose first husband was hung; for that is the only way to prevent her from throwing his memory into your face, and making annoying comparisons." "Even that wont prevent it," exclaimed a crusty old bachelor, "she'll praise him by saying that hanging would be too good for you."

How to Receive a Proposal.—You ought to take it kind, looking downhill, with an expression about half-tickled and half-scar'. After the pop is over, if you never wants tew kiss you, I don't think I would say yes or no, but let the thing kind or take its own course.

'Well George,' how do you like your profession,' asked a friend of a young lawyer. 'Alas sir! my profession is better than my practice.'

A good bank to have stock in—a bank where early falls the due.

Age a venerable man; it would be in woman if she ever got old.

FINKLE & LYON SEWING MACHINE CO.

OFFICE 581 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

GUARANTEE.—After a fair trial, if any purchaser does not regard the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine as superior to any machine in market, he can return it and have his money. It has taken many of the highest prizes—is less complicated than any other first class machine,—does a wider range of work without changing,—requires no taking apart to clean or oil, and no "lessons" to set needle, regulate tension, or to; create machine.

N B. Any Clergyman sending us two orders for Machines, shall receive one for himself as a present. The same proposition is extended to Profession and Teachers.

We have now completed our New Manufactory at a cost of some $200,000, including New Patents and important Improvements; and the object of the above proposition is to secure the immediate introduction of our improved machine into every town in the United States without incurring the great expense of a travelling agent.

This proposition cannot avail in towns occupied by our own agents.

Please send for descriptive Catalogue, with samples of sewing

A WORD TO THE LADIES.

AT the commencement of a New Year, the proprietor of

Frank Leslie's Lady's Magazine

Appeals, confidently, to his fair subscribers to assist him in increasing its circulation. The simple fact that they them elves patronize it is a sufficient proof that they consider it the best, a distinction which the publisher has endeavored to deserve, by sparing neither pains nor expense

The double Steel Fashion Plate, exquisitely colored, surpasses that of any other Magazine; while the other Fashion plates exceed in number and beauty those of all other Lady's Magazines combined.

The commencement of a New Year and a New Vol me, induces us to ask our Lady Subscribers to recommend this, their favorite publication to their friends. This will enable the proprietor to render Frank Leslies Lady's Magazine still more acceptable.

The present number contains two features of great interest:—One a series of Lithographic copies of the most popular Parisian Pictures, colored in exact imitation of the original, possessing all the delicacy and finish of water colors. And the other a Plate of Doll Fashions arranged to be cut into separate pieces, so as to form a perfect Doll with change of costume. Other pictures and models are in course of preparation and will appear in succeeding numbe s.

Terms,—One copy one year, o. 12 numbers, $3.50; four copies one year, in one wrapper, to one address, $14, with an extra copy to the person getting up a club.

AMERICAN
Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering.

SEWING MACHINE!
COMPANY,

627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLE made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses; thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary.

One Needle and Two Threads are only Used

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indispensable for button-holes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, shaded or chine silks, and produce a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste.

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak maker-, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c, &c, it is indispensable; it is also admitted to be of great value, to other branches as it Braids, Embroiders, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimere, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c. &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleaker, where instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P. S.—A novel patented BUTTON HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that the finest display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate, showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send one; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and none even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrumen is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin The strings re-attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old fashioned system of stretching by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over String Bass, of which Mr Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M Gottschalk,
M x Maretzek,	S Thalbe
Theodore Eisfield,	Wm Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A Barili.
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strakosch,
Wm. Henry Fry	Charles Fradel

Mr. EGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes. They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strakosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical: in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal versimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to sing on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept 5—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilliancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instriment without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument, and ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they most speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and constructed by Mr S. B. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone-power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN

SEWING MACHINES.
EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB 14th, 1860.

Salesrooms, { 536 Broadway, New York. / 252 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principle and presents many features of rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shuttle stitch which will with or rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Swiss muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it readily, without fatigue or injury to health

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it alm st impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite Dressmakers generally to supply themselves with a superior machine, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

In addition to the above especial manner do we elicit the patronage of

Merchant Tailors,	Corset Makers,
Coach Makers,	Gaiter Fitters,

OF

Peterborough and Ashburnham.

THE subscriber begs to announce that their New Map of the Town of Peterborough and of the Village of Ashburnham, is now complete and ready for publication.

This Map has been compiled with great care from the original registered plans and surveys and its entire accuracy may be relied upon by those in want, but by actual survey and careful measurement. In the two corporations named, not only is every lot given and its subdivisions where divided, but the names of the owners, as contained in the last Assessment Roll, are neatly printed on each lot. All public buildings, manufactories, stores, and private residences, together with the existing and proposed railways, streets, mill-races, water-courses and roads, bridges, &c., are laid down from actual measurement. The building portion of the main is so colored as to distinguish at a glance the materials used, whether of wood, stone or brick; while the whole is finished in a superior manner, so as to be both useful and ornamental, in securing which neither pains nor expense has been spared.

During the ensuing week, the undersigned will be prepared to receive the names of intending subscribers, at their office, Scott Buildings. Early application is desired, as but a limited number of copies will be printed.

PHANTOMS OF WINTER.

Crunching 'neath my heavy footsteps
Yields the crispy frosted snow;
Cruelly the north winds blow;
And there comes no tinkling murmur
From the quiet glen below.

Silver-voiced, the little brooklet
Sings no more the pleasant tune
That it sung to me in June,
And the sere leaves on the branches
Chatter sadly to the moon.

In the softening shades of twilight
Twinkles lone one starry eye,
In the calm eternal sky;
And the gray owl by the river,
Late and wasted, sleeping lie.

So I and dread the fitful night wind
Moaning among the pine tops high—
Wanderings by the hunter's fire,
Sobbings with approaches nigh.

Perching on the rustling branches,
Wants the training wind some change,
Sorrows sadly fold their wings,
And, through terror of the darkness,
Needle close, like living things.

Slowly the sigh the stunted fir trees
See the creeping darkness creep;
Sleepless grows the craggy steep;
Draped with blackness dream the island
Where the icy waters sleep.

Mustering in the deepening shadows,
Phantoms rush from bleak ravines,
From the coverts of the pines,
From lone haunts by woodland waters,
Reeling crags and caves and mines.

Cold and chill their wings they flutter
By my creeping, stiffening hair,
As they weave the icy air;
And I hear their myriad columns
Sweeping o'er the barrows bare.

Mystic ones! we are not strangers—
We have known one other sphere—
Ye have stirred my heart before!
Voices! ye are all pervading;
Ye are whispering ever more.

Darkness closes in the landscape;
Once again mournful sublime
Night has clasped the hand of Time,
And the trembling stars, in gladness,
Sing till Chaos ring, Earth's natal hymn.

Literature.

TWO CHAPTERS OF LIFE.

CHAPTER I.—"WOOED AND WON."

"What the deuce has come over you Darwin? and the speaker, a fair young man, with bright, honest face, pitched down his fishing tackle, and eyed the fisher of the hour.—"You don't want to fly with the fishes that swim in that water famous for their love?"

"I wish I didn't feel in such a confounded fool of myself," replied the other, sucking a cut in the bare and showing trespass in the Lamb of his upper lip. The fair youth gave him a quick glance, and then, pushing his cap over his eyes, lay down on its back saying presently, "Example is better than precept; at least, the copy book I used to my childhood had it so. You are in love; I never have been. You are evidently annoyed, bad company, and inclined to be apprehensive. Ergo, love is to be avoided by those who desire to live at peace with their fellow men."

The sunburnt changing his voice and letting himself up, he said: "Let's have a pull. I saw the tide is on the turn, and will bring us in again; an hours stretch will put us right on to better cider."

His companion, although he made no verbal answer, set about doing what was required of him; he rolled up his line, hit a fresh cigar, and took his oar lightly if not kindly. They pulled straight out to the mouth of a couple of miles, neither breaking silence. Then they paused, and Llew, looking a little ruffled, said:

"I say, Charley, I'm a devil of a tempter, you shouldn't try to tempt me, especially about—you know who I. I have got myself into a mess, and—and—the fact is, I mean to marry Alice in spite of them all."

"The deuce you! It isn't worse than I expected. What do you mean to keep a wife upon?"

"I'll emigrate."

"No you won't. It costs money, you see."

"I'll take a private tutorship."

"But they won't like you, wife, too.—All that you would do; you'd drop overboard together. Seriously, you cannot afford to marry. Alice's father is a suicide on his fellows; he won't have anything to say to you; he's as proud as his way as you are."

Llew made use of an expression by no means complimentary to his intended father-in-law on his elder's word out.

"Do put it another way. Suppose you could have her, and make her Mrs. Darwin to-morrow—how about your new relations? Her people would be your people you see."

"Stop that, Charley; I'm in earnest; I mean to marry Alice, and I mean to end all her relations. Who was the person who coloured me to at Denby?"

"Cornish, an old Wadham man; he's got a curacy down in these parts somewhere and is a capital fellow across country, and not so bad at brewing punch."

"Would he come over here for a day or two?"

"I don't see why he should not; but, why? You don't want him to do the splicing, eh?"

"Yes, I do—"

"By Jove!" and Charley Shafner drew a long breath. "I hope you won't get angry, Derwin; he sent on speaking very gravely, but I'd rather not have anything to do with this; you are certain to repent it sooner or later. Not that Alice is not a good and pretty girl; I believe all that old fellow; but it's her relations. And then your uncle, he's put a spoke in your wheel at once. I wish you'd be reasonable. Let us cut over to-no-town; come; there's a good fellow; such a dear little body, and it will be a wrench, you know, but better a scar than an open wound."

Charley spoke from his heart, and with a sincere feeling of anxiety for his friend; but then he had never been in love, and forgot that reason has sometimes very little to do with the tender passion. He paused, thinking his argument to clear out to take effect, and then, as Llew did not answer, he held his peace, mentally comforting himself with the reflection that his words had told and that his friend was thinking of them; just a the keel grated against the beach, Derwin said:

"We'll start to-morrow, Charley."

"That's a good fellow," and all the clouds passed away from Charley's face; "you'll never regret it."

"I don't intend to," was the reply, uttered in rather ambiguous tones; and together, the two men shouldered their tackle fish and oars, and resumed the hill to the hotel, where they had taken up their quarters a month before, with the intention of reading hard, an intention Shafner kept as far as the Field and B B's Life were concerned while Derwin might very soon have made a personal application of Byron's lines:

"My only books were woman's looks," the blue eyes, fair face and light form of a neighboring farmer's daughter having effectually banished all other power of study.

A few hours later, Derwin, pretending to go to bed, took good night to his friend, and took his way out of the house, along the path leading to the castle, which, rising grimly against the cloudbanks, was throwing mysterious shadows upon the hillside. Not a breath of air moved the leaves or grass, or disturbed the surface of the river, down which, it being full tide, the stream was just keeping up a moving rain of silver sparkles in the centre of the broad bottom of the water. There were very few people astir at that hour; the villagers worked hard and early, and went soon to bed in those days and the country folks, who, after the manner of the Welsh, came down to bathe, saw no beauty in the evening hights. So it was that Mr Derwin had the castle road to himself, and having passed through the wood and reached the open path on the south side of the hill, he walked more slowly pausing to look back now and then as if in expectation of seeing some one. At last, reaching the steeper part of the hill, he sat down upon the grass, and whistling softly, gazed over Carmarthen bay, sung quiet and lake-like between him and Gower Land. The moon was full that night and rising low in the blue heaven, casting a broad, glistening path of light across the water along which one solitary fishing boat was gliding, the oars throwing showers of fiery sparks as they dipped in the water.—It was very lovely, very peaceful and holy, but Derwin was only looking at, not thinking of it; he scarcely knew whether it was land or water, moonlight or daylight.—Presently a quick light step came along the turf, and Alice Morgan stood by his side.

"You are shaking, darling," her lover whispered, as he held her by the hand and gazed into the sweet eyes, growing unnaturally large and bright in contrast to her pale frightened face.

"Yes, surely; Mr. Shafner was talking to father, and they were saying you are to go to-morrow?" she looked round her fixedly for a second or two, then lifting away his arm from her waist, she rose, saying in a loud, hard voice: "And it's true, indeed, then, and I might have known it all along—God forgive you for deceiving my heart, but it's me that's been foolish and blind. Yes indeed, I knew you were a gentleman like the rest of them, but I thought I could read love and truth in your eyes."

Derwin had let her talk on, partly because he was tempted just for the moment to take Shafner's advice, partly because in her vehemence and despair there was a new spell and power to her beauty, and partly because it was pleasant to hear how the very passion she gave way to told of her love; but when she paused, with a big, sobbing gasp for breath he held out his arms whispering:

"Alice, my beloved, you are coming with me."

She clasped her hands together, and sent forward as if to read his face, whispering in a low, husky voice:

"God forgive you. Why are you tempting me?"

"It's no temptation, Alice, I swear," and as he spoke he sprang to his feet and took her hand in his. "You shall be my wife—I want no other thing else. I have no one to stop me marrying whom I please; and you, darling—they'll never keep you from me."

Alice began to sob hysterically now; and shaking and crying, clung to him, as he told her in plain, hopes and promises which, as he was excited, Derwin poured forth vehemently, and, as far as the feeling of the time went, truthfully.

He told her his home could present no difficulty, which, with her by his side, would prove unobservable; his uncle must be all love and happiness, its very hardships, tinged with the rosy hue, would look like blessings.

The moon rose higher and in the quiet sky, the silvery path was gone; inch by inch the ebb left the glistening sands, and Derwin still drew pictures of the time to come, of the world he was to show his wife; and Alice listened, nestling to his arms, and now and then asking some question, which, from the very insight it gave him into her simplicity and innocence, stirred still more the bitter feelings of his heart, and gave them just enough light of pure love to blind him to the passion that was burning him on.

When they parted that night Alice had promised to meet him at the nearest railway station upon the morning following his departure from Islandstephen, and they were to be married in London.

Derwin did not take his friend into his confidence. Possibly a railway carriage is too public place to secrets. Perhaps he was beginning to doubt the prudence of his scheme. Shafner's noisy college chaff and talk was bringing back other feelings, and he grew more and more absent and nervous.

They reached Treby in time for dinner, and Shafner, misinterpreting his friend's cloudy spirits, concluded that after all, if love could take such hold upon a man like Derwin, it must be a still more desperate thing than he, Charles Shafner, had ever imagined. There was only one cure he knew of, and that was to drown dull care, therefore he ordered a capital dinner, and persuaded Llew to try a peculiar combination of liquids, brewed in a special manner, concocted by a famous grand uncle of Shafner's.—But his experiment failed.—Derwin pronounced it atrocious, and drank mildly of whisky-punch; so that Shafner, out of veneration for his uncle's memory, did more than his duty to his own manufacture and found it expedient to retire about midnight, assuring the waiter that he was going to be married the next day to the maid of Llangollen.

As soon as Shafner was safely out of the way a dog cart was ordered, and Mr. Derwin, leaving an explanatory note in the coffee room, was driven to the station, whence he proceeded to the appointed rendezvous, where veiled and frightened, Alice stood almost alone upon the platform, waiting for the train.

CHAPTER II—"LOVED AT LAST."

As soon as their marriage was duly solemnized, Alice wrote to her parents; but no answer came; again and again she covered sheets of paper with petitions of pardon, but they all fell, or at least seemed to fall unheeded, and at last gave no writing or speaking of her old home, trying hard to give up thinking too. But thought is not so easy to control, and many a bitter tear ran down the young wife's cheek in the silent watches of the night; tears, that alas! soon began to have a two-fold meaning, for already the spell was breaking. College term had begun again. Derwin had taken his wife with him, and domiciled her carefully out of the way of the usual haunts of the college men. He had encountered Shafner, and a somewhat stormy altercation had been the result, Charley's code of honor and Derwin's not exactly agreeing; so that when his old friend did his duty, (all honor to him, a very painful one,) and called upon the bride, he knew very well by whose orders she was 'not at home,' and never repeated the experiment.

No one else called; for, though it was pretty well known that Derwin had married, he never spoke of it, nor in any manner acted like a married man; and his friends resented this want of cordiality by pretending to ignore his marriage, the boldest now and then taking their revenge by chaffing him about his eagle's beauty.

And yet, though acting with such false pride towards his acquaintances, Derwin was not as yet an unkind husband. The gloss of first love had not worn off, and Alice was all that a man could desire in a wife. The first vacation they went to a south coast bathing place, and there the trials that were to crush out every hope and joy began. Derwin met some old friends and did not introduce his wife—they were sure to patronize and then laugh at her and him, he reasoned to himself; therefore he determined to leave the place, but not before he had promised to spend a fortnight with his friends out at their country place. The prospect was a pleasing one. So he took Alice to London, and leaving her in lodgings, went to fulfill his engagement.

He had told her he would be a fortnight away, but the fortnight became four, five, then six weeks, and there had come neither letter nor tidings, and although horrible visions of railway accidents and sudden death in every imaginable form filled Alice's mind, she still waited, and dreading lest she might act contrary to her husband's wishes or off nd against the customs of the world, she made no inquiry. At last a new trial came upon her, she was without money; the landlady grew, first impatient, then suspicious, and finally turned Alice out, upbraiding her with disgracing her house.

Alice was bewildered; there seemed only one alternative, and that was to go to Derwin's uncle's house, the address of which she for masterly remembered, and there obtain some information of her husband.

The man servant looked at her rather suspiciously as she asked whether he knew where Mr. Derwin had gone, and half closed the door as he replied:

"Yes, ma'am he's gone to Australia; his uncle got him an appointment, and he sailed three weeks ago, all in a hurry; had not time to leave any P. P. C.'s."

How Alice bore the intelligence—how she concealed her dreadful shock and managed to walk quietly away from the eye of the curious domestic—was one of those mysterious feats of self-command now and then accomplished by those whom the world looks on as the weakest—woman. The shock, though it fell suddenly, had struck deep into the heart; she never doubted its truth; something entering at her heart, and throbbing in her brain told her it was even as the man said and that he was gone. But why? wherefore had he not seen her—written to her? what business could have been urgent enough to drag him away without giving him space to bid her farewell? Very, very slowly she began to see the truth.

Wandering aimlessly from street to street one misfortune of time, and startling night revellers with her ghastly face and despairing eyes, she passed the night, and when morning dawned, cold, misty, and, in the great deserted streets of London, indescribably lonely, she began fully to comprehend the weight and depth of her husband's villainy and her own desolation. Deserted by him for whom she had discovered and left her to her and mother—what could she do? Suddenly the commandment she had broken fell upon her, "Honor thy father and thy mother, and thy days shall be long in the land." She had dishonored them; why should her days be prolonged? sure it was God's will that they [illegible] death, [illegible] and it did not come itself, could it not seek it?

Starting up from the door steps upon which she had fallen, she walked hurriedly down the street, remembering that but a short time before she had passed a bridge, below which ran the broad, hard, merciful road to death, and, crouching by the parapet, she tried to say her old childish prayers, the same she had repeated at her mother's knee. Her mother! What was there in the word to curse such a thrill through the girl's frame and send a wild sensation of love and tenderness pulsing in her veins?

Tears came rushing from her eyes, and bitter sobs mingled with the half wild, but wholly penitent prayer:

"God forgive me if I thought of murdering my unborn baby, and spare me strength for its sake."

Poor people of every degree seem to cheat themselves into the belief that London is the very Eldorado of work and wealth—that you have but to say, "Give me work," and employment stands ready. Alas! how many an aching heart, how many starving lives have mourned, too late, the fatal delusion!

Alice begged from house to house for work, and at last, weary by deep sustained and conscious that her woman's time of trial was coming, she sought the last refuge of the homeless, and the baby, whose life had saved her life, was born in the lying-in ward of a city workhouse.

As soon as Alice was able, she left the Union, and by the help of one of the nurses, obtained work in shirt-making for a cheap out-fitting shop, badly enough paid, and requiring close sitting far into the night to bring in the barest livelihood; but work was no toil now; the tiny little creature kicking and sprawling upon the floor beside her gave her new energy; she was not stitching for her own life, but for the life of the child of whom God in His wise inscrutable wisdom and wise mercy, had made her mother. As months passed into years the child throve and grew; Alice worked harder and harder, early and late, with a new sense of enjoyment and life springing up in her heart—a sort of vague foreshadowing that the child would somehow restore the husband of her youth, and bring back to her past happiness.

Eight years had gone by since Derwin left her, when, in passing a newspaper shop, she stopped to pick up some torn scraps of paper, thinking there might be something to read to her boy. Almost the first name that met her eyes was that of her husband; it formed part of a sentence—something about a death and the succession of an unlooked-for heir. Staggering rather than walking into the shop, Alice pointed to the words and asked the man if he could get her a newspaper with the paragraph complete. The man happened to be good natured, and seeing the woman's distress, took some pains to hunt up a paper of corresponding date. Armed with this, Alice hurried home, and there read a curious story, the story of her husband's life, the portion mixed up with herself only left untouched; the first part she knew, but the part dating from his departure for Australia, was all new. He had, it seems, succeeded at first; and then by one of those crushing strokes of Providence, his good fortune had deserted him, all his newly acquired wealth was swallowed up by unlucky speculations, everything he put his hand to failed, when reduced to beggary, he left the colony and returned to England, there to find himself next heir to one of the finest estates in Wales. Thither he had gone, welcomed and received as a sort of hero, and worshipped for the very troubles he had known.

"Has he ever sought me?" was Alice's first thought, as after reading the story nearly a dozen times over, she laid down the newspaper. "Has he ever tried to find me?"

Then she remembered how fruitless such a search would be. Who knew her?—How could he trace her? She must write and tell him where she was, and how she had suffered. So wrote she did, not once, but many times, hope growing fainter each time. No answer came, and there seemed but one thing left—to seek him out and give him—his child, then hide herself away and die. Despair gave her renewed energy, and supported her during all the long weary journey; worn foot sore, hungry and weary she begged from cottage to cottage the food and shelter necessary to support life; at last the trial was drawing to a climax; she heard the old familiar tongue again, and fancied every voice was that of an old friend.

But when she saw the house he had inherited her heart sunk. How dare she, a beggar in rags go up to that stately home and claim the master as her husband? In all her trouble and anxiety, no thought such as this had entered her mind; now it came with overwhelming force, crushing down every ray of hope. Irresolute, she stood by the lodge gate, then turned away, only however again to return, and gaze wonderingly again.

The lodge-keeper came out, and she had her boy's face in her shawl; then conquered, mother-like, that to see the child's face once was to remember him forever, she took him down the road, and bade him wait for her, and went back alone to question the old woman; but the gates were closed, and as she stood uncertain whether to ring or not, the quick trot of a horse upon the gravel of the avenue caught her ear; peering through the iron bars of the gate it needed no second glance to tell her that the rider was her husband; and then, utterly powerless, deaf, blind, and only conscious that he was coming to her there, and there they were to meet, she stood clinging with both hands to the gate.

The lead-keeper, hurrying out, thrust her angrily away, and as one side of the heavy iron gate swung open, Alice's agony burst forth, and a long, inarticulate, pent-up cry came from her lips as her cold relaxing she fell almost under the horse's feet.

Derwin had seen the white face through the bars, and knew it again as instantly; and as he sat there, a thousand old long-buried feelings welled up, and beat fiercely at his heart. He [illegible] to know he had been a black-guard—[illegible] death-like face staring at him with such wild eyes might, for all he knew, be that of a mad woman, more, a mad wife, wretched and maddened by his crime. He dared not recognize her, and he dared not pass her; fascinated and spell-bound, he heard her cry, and knew that it was his name that rang out like an appeal to an avenging God. Then he saw the old lodge-keeper kneel down by her, and heard her cry out that the woman was dying in a fit.

Slowly and mechanically Derwin got down from his horse, and helped to carry the body into the lodge. As they did so the child came running up, and throwing his arms around his mother, began crying piteously. Derwin's self-control was—leaving him now, and fearful lest he should betray himself, he dispatched the woman to the house for wine, and, locking the cottage door, stood looking at her whom a few years before he had left in the pride of youth and beauty. Derwin was not such a heedless fellow as he tried to make and think himself; like many another nature, so long as you kept out of his sight the misery and pain he was causing, he could go on in his own selfish, heartless course; but once bring him face to face with the sight of his crime, and the devil was cast out of him. No thought of his dissolute life had ever materially distressed the worldly-wise Squire's thoughts, until he kept that watch by what seemed her death-bed, and then he knew what he was and what he had done.

So absorbed had he been for a few minutes that he forgot the boy, and when he did think of him he stared long and inquisitively into the child's face, his own features gradually softening and growing strangely like his former self as he gazed.

"What is your name?" he asked hoarsely, and muttering an oft at to speak calmly.

"Llewellin Derwin," replied the child.

A shock passed over the man's face; all strength, self-possession and control were swept away, and the words, "My God, forgive me!" burst almost unconsciously from his lips, big tears welled up, and blotted out the wondering face of the little boy.

Some of us may remember how, after a season of intense anxiety, sleep has fallen upon us, sleep—or rather trance—during which the dream of illness, death or danger, we have just escaped, or suffered and realized in its most dreadful shape, we may remember how we awakened from that sleep, our hearts quivering with agony, and our eyes too wild to weep; awakened to find the whole a dream, to look up at the newly risen sun, and to recognize the very fruition or hope.

Something like this was that awakening of Alice. Her first conscious glance fell upon her husband's face, not as she had seen it in that terrible moment when she fainted, but as she had prayed to see it. There was no talk of pardon or reproach. Alice silenced both. Both had suffered; and although the loving gaze of the woman roused much from the care-worn face now gazing upon her hands, yet she saw deeper in the eyes the love that was to brighten her future life, and enable her to forget the sorrow of the past.

DEACON MURRAY'S WAY.—A poor man lived near Deacon Murray, referred to in the tract 'Worth a Dollar,' and occasionally called at his house for a supply of milk. One morning he came when the family was at breakfast. Mrs. Murray told him to wait upon him, but the deacon said, 'Wait till after breakfast.' She did so, and meantime the deacon made some inquiries of the man about his family and circumstances. After family worship the deacon invited him to go out to the barn with him. When they got into the yard, the deacon pointing to one of the cows, exclaimed, "There take that cow and drive her home." The man thanked him heartily for the cow, and started for home; but the deacon was observed to stand in the attitude of deep thought until the man had gone some rods. He then looked up, and called out, "Hey bring that cow back." The man looked around, and the deacon added, "Let that cow come back, and you come back, too." He did so, and when he came back into the yard again, the deacon said, "There now take your pick out of the cows; I don't going to lead to the Lord the poorest cow I've got!"

PARENTS EATING THEIR CHILDREN IN INDIA.—The following extraordinary statement, dated Patna, November 9, is extracted from the Patna Observer. There must be, we think, some mistake in the matter; at any rate we decline to believe so horrible and sickening a story without better evidence than that contained in the present paragraph:—Such is the state of affairs in these districts that people have commenced eating their own children.—The people in question are not systematically cannibals; but what can they do? Provisions of all sorts are sold at exorbitant rates, or are not to all procurable. Hence they must eat something, if body and soul are to be kept together. The other day the police brought up two women before the magistrate, who had been roasting a child one year old to eat it. From inquiries made by the last named functionary it appeared that the child had died, and that one of the fiend's, the mother, was induced by the other, her friend, both in a state of starvation, not to consign its dead remains to the river, but to feast on it. The magistrate could not, under the circumstances, inflict any punishment on them." Rice, the chief food of the people of Behar, is sold at the rate of eight or nine seers a rupee, and dall, the second article of consumption, at seven and a half seers. Hence it is that they do not scruple to do anything.—Times of India.

An intoxicated man who was suffering the consequences of his indiscretion, was asked what he was doing, when replied, "developing my internal resources."

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1866.

COUNTY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The Rev. Dr. Ryerson, according to previous announcement, held a convention of the friends of Education yesterday, in the Court House. Sheriff Hall, occupied the chair. Mr. J. Stratton acted as Secretary.

The Chairman said it was unnecessary for him to occupy the time of the meeting; he would, instead thereof, call on the Rev. Dr. Ryerson, Chief Superintendent of Education, to address those present.

The Rev. Gentleman on rising was warmly greeted, and proceeded at once to discuss the three leading proposition that were proposed to be embodied in a new School Act, that was being prepared and would be brought before parliament ere long. The first proposition was a change in the present system of County Boards of Instruction. The second, compulsory attendance at School, and the third, Township Boards of Trustees instead of Sectional Boards as at present.

Dr. Ryerson proceeded at once to explain his proposed changes, and to give his reasons for introducing them. He proposed to do away with the present County Boards of Instruction, and the present system of the examination of Teachers, and to establish Boards, consisting of six that shall be appointed by the Governor in Council, at the recommendation of the Board of Public Instruction, to be selected from 12 individuals who may be recommended by the County Council. The questions for the examination of Teachers to be prepared by the gentlemen who prepare questions for the students at the Normal School; these questions to be sent, under the Seal of the Department, to the Chairman of each County Board, not to be opened till the day of examination. He also proposes to make the Certificates thus granted Provincial in value, and to exist during the continuance of the programme, or, in other words, while the Act remains in force. He also proposes to abolish Third Class Certificates altogether.

We regret we have not space to give his arguments in favor of this scheme.

Compulsory education is proposed upon the plea that since the state or people are taxed to provide education for all, therefore, all should be forced to go to school to obtain it. Another plea: It is the law of other lands, such as Austria, Prussia and Switzerland. It is to be regretted that the Dr. did not wait to hear the views of the meeting on this matter, his own views were artfully arranged, and being allowed to go unanswered have the appearance of plausibility whereas, they are most fallacious.

TOWNSHIP BOARDS.

The benefits hoped (?) to be realized from Township Boards are;—First, fewer schools to a given population; Second, children under that system will be allowed to attend the school their parents may choose; Third, the schools will be better managed (?) by one Board than by the many, as at present; Fourth, better teachers will be employed; female teachers can be employed to teach the smaller children as is done in Ward Schools. This last savours something of city ideas. But we must attend to these again.

As soon as the Dr. delivered his lecture, the cars being about to leave, he had to go, and consequently heard nothing of the views of the people, unless what may be conveyed to him in the shape of motions. Col. Haultain, who had been expected to take a part in the discussion, owing to engagements was forced to leave, but hoped the proposed changes would be carefully discussed, as his action in Parliament would be guided in a great measure by the views of his constituents. He, however, remarked that his own views had been some little modified by hearing the remarks of the Chief Superintendent.

The meeting then agreed to take up the propositions in the order they had been brought forward. The first proposition for a change in the present County Boards met with the approval of almost all present, the only objection being against the certificates remaining in force so long—15 or 20 years.

In reference to this P. Pearce, Esq., of Belmont, thought the people from the west were becoming very exact about the time of certificates. Heretofore they had not been so, as there were certificates now in the County that no one knows when they were issued; and he hoped that the new Board of Instruction would see to it, and rail in all those old certificates that were actually so old that the paper on which they had been written was now worn out.

The subject of cancelling those Provincial certificates provoked some strange remarks, for which we regret we have not space. Some would have them cancelled during good behaviour; some for 15 or 20 years; one would cancel them if the holder left off teaching for two years; another would make the period of cessation five years.—The following motion was put and carried:—

Moved by Mr. Edwards, seconded by Mr. Dumble,—That the proposition of the Chief Superintendent of Education, as to composition of County Boards of Instruction and the methods for the examination and classification of Teachers, has the approbation of this meeting; suggesting, however, that the Teachers' Certificates be good only for five years.—Carried.

The second proposition for compulsory education met with strong opposition. The first motion being:

Moved by Mr. Edwards, seconded by Mr. Stratton,—That in the opinion of this meeting the progression of the Chief Superintendent of Education, for the amendment to the School Act in making the education of children compulsory on the part of parents, is at variance with the principles of civil liberty and should be strenuously opposed.

Moved by Mr. Dumble, in amendment, seconded by Mr. Clinton,—That the proposition of the Chief Superintendent of Education for the amendment of the School Act, in making the education of children compulsory on the part of the parents, is worthy of the hearty approval of this meeting; provided always, that free education be provided for the children of the indigent.

Mr. Edwards supported his motion by shewing that compulsory education could not and would not bring about all that the Rev. Dr. had set forth; that it was contrary to the principles of civil liberty, would be evaded, and for want of informers would be a dead letter.

Mr. Stratton opposed compulsory education unless in the case of vagrants and those entirely neglected by their parents, he also opposed it as useless, unless in Reformatory Schools where the children would be separated from the unhallowed influence of dis ken and thieving parents, and where they would be trained the whole time, morally as well as intellectually, contending that six hours hours at school and three times six at the more potent and palatable school of rice of every description, would be a long time emptying our jails of criminals or our penitentiary of convicts.

Mr. Dumble for the amendment contended that such ideas were behind the age and ought not to be advanced, that every child should be educated, and if the parent would not, the state should.

Mr. Clinton as seconder of the amendment, contended that Mr. Stratton's views would leave the vicious uneducated, would allow them to grow up in vice and crime, and forbid them the blessings of education entirely.

Dr Poole, in support of the motion, said that education did not do away with crime, only changed its value, that the murderers were not the greatest criminals as the criminal records of London, C. W. would testify, as there the sons of judges, wealthy merchants, and of those who would most likely educate their sons, had been engaged in the greatest, deepest crimes.

Mr. Rutherford contended for education for all as a sure preventive of crime.

Mr. Stratton remarked that Mr. Clinton had misrepresented his views, as he (Mr S) contended for the education of all; but a compulsory education would not bring that about, unless Reformatories were provided, where the vicious could be properly educated; as mere education did not make men moral, never did, never will, never can.

Mr. Grover, Norwood, would go for compulsory education, and the penalty he would inflict would be: not to allow the parent who did not educate his children the right to vote for anything.

Rev. Mr. Peck thought that as all were taxed for education, all should be educated; and therefore he would go for compulsory education.

Several things away from the question being introduced, on the cry of "question," the amendment was put and carried.

The third proposition, namely:—For Township Board, then came up; but as it was late and many had gone away some were of opinion it would be as well to let the question alone. Mr. Pearce, Keeve of Belmont, thought the question ought to be left to the Township; gentlemen from Town he thought should not interfere. It was then Moved by Mr. Grover, seconded by Mr. Read,—That the suggestions of the Chief Superintendent of Education for Upper Canada as to the abolishing of School Section Boards for the Common Schools, and the substitution therefor of Township Boards meet with our approval.

In amendment, moved by Mr. Stratton, seconded by Mr. Dundass,—That inasmuch as it is believed that the introduction of Township Boards instead of Sch ol Section Boards, as at present, would not advance the cause of Education; it is therefore desirable that the School Section system, as at present, be retained in any new Act.

For the motion Mr. Pearce thought that Township Boards would do away with the heat and quarrels of Trustee elections, as at present and would remove many of the evils of the present system.

Dr. Poole thought it would do away with one set of evils, but cause another set worse than the first.

Mr. Rutherford said Township Boards would be best as they would be more economical.

Mr. Stratton remarked that it was easy to say "more economical," but that required proof, which he thought could not be adduced.

Mr. Dundass remarked that the present system had worked well, good Trustees were generally chosen, often better men than would be chosen at a Township election, and as there were few faults, thought the present school remain untouched.

The amendment being put was carried.

THE CONCERT.

The Complimentary Concert to Mr. Heathfield was given on Thursday last, and was, in every respect, a decided success. The Hall was crowded, and the audience in the back part of the room, much quieter than usual. The performance commenced with the Overture of "The Caliph of Bagdad," by Miss Claxton and Mr Heathfield, which was given with marked ability. Miss Gray's song, "Robert toi que j'aime" was the gem of the evening and was sung superbly.—Miss Young lady passes a magnificent voice, over which she has complete control, and more than this, her singing is in good taste. Of course she was encored, when she sang "Kate Kearney." "The Maid of Athens" (in the second part) with the encore of "Coming thro' the Rye" were also beautifully sung by the same lady, and deserved the applause which greeted her. The songs of the Warblers were "Jolly Dogs," "Rest lady rest" "Annie Lee" and "Father come home." This last was their best and they paid full justice to it. Mrs. W. W. Smith sang "Not for Gold or precious Stones" in her usual pleasing manner, and her Duett was given with taste and effect. The Misses Kennedy's duett "The Wood Horn" with Horn accompaniment was well sung. The Comic Songs by Messrs. Harry Nicholson and F. Boswell kept the house in bursts of laughter and were encored. Miss Claxton's piano Solo "Home Sweet Home" as also Miss Cause's "The Storm" were admirably played. The violin Solos of Mr. H. D. Smith field and of Mr. Philp were beautifully rendered. The Peterborough Glee Club deserved most excellent music, and they will be a great acquisition to the Town. The Duett of Messrs. Heathfield and H. H. Smith "Les Dames de Seville" was brilliantly played. M. Leon gave a specimen of his powers as a Ventriloquist in which he exhibits a marked improvement. We must not omit to add that the grand piano kindly lent by Mr. Caisse for the occasion contributed largely to the success of the Concert.

In last week's Review we find a carefully prepared article on the religion, crimes, and nationalities, of the unfortunate creatures that have been compelled to stop a while now and then in our Jail. Of these, the Review, on the strength of some Register, no doubt, classes thirteen as Methodists, some others as Presbyterians, and some as Episcopalians. We would remark, however, that the classification, while according to information obtained from the convicted, is not according to fact. It is a well known fact that many of those who have been sent up for being drunk, disorderly, selling liquor without license, keeping a house of ill-fame, &c., are some of the worst characters that infest the streets, and swamp round Town, such as Mary Nix and Louisa Potter. To class these as Methodists is simply absurd. And the same might be shewn of some of the Presbyterians. There is L—— P—— also G—— C——, for selling liquors without license, classed as Methodists. The public have only to learn the names to see the absurdity, and the slander that is thus sought to be cast on our Christian denominations. Of course not by the Review or the Jailer.

A mere novice in Church matters knows that as soon as a member of the Methodist or Presbyterian Church begins to walk disorderly, he ceases to have any connection with such body, and has no more claim to be called by their name than if never connected with the Church at all. The Church discards the idea of membership, unless, after sorrow for sin and promise of a walk such as becometh the Gospel, they may have been taken into membership again.

Protestantism and its opposite may be retained with any character; the religion of the cross never allies itself with crime or lawlessness: none but the followers of Christ are acknowledged by the Methodist, Presbyterian, or Evangelical Churches. This should be borne in mind by every one (it is well enough understood by almost all) and then such classification will be easily understood.

One thing struck us forcibly while reading the names and the religion of those convicts, namely, was it not malice against the purity of those bodies that provoked them to record themselves as members of Associations which they most devotedly persecute? We think our neighbor might have made the distinction. We are willing to presume it an oversight.

Anniversary of First Presbyterian Church.

The services on Sabbath were conducted by Rev. J. McTavish, Woodville; and Rev. D. Tully, Ralston Spa, N.Y. Mr. McTavish preached in the morning from the text—"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that you present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." In the afternoon, Mr. Tully spoke from the words—"I have hallowed this House which thou hast built to put my name there forever, and mine eyes and my heart shall be there perpetually." In the evening Mr. McTavish addressed the congregation from the passage "Unto Him that loved us and washed us from our sins in His own blood, and hath made us Kings and Priests unto God and His Father; to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever, amen."

These sermons are among the finest ever delivered in Peterborough. Few men hold an audience as firmly as Mr. McTavish—fluent, graceful,—displaying the most minute analysis—a cogent reasoner—possessing a keen insight into human character, and thoroughly alive to the ways of men,—he is indeed an able Minister, and one is not less struck with his masterly powers of mind than with the heart moving earnestness of the preacher, who having been himself pricked into "The life that is in Jesus,"—spoke of and for his master with no small measure of his master's spirit.

Mr. Tully's sermon was a most excellent one. He made interesting allusion to the history of the congregation, presenting himself as a convert to Christ under the ministry of Mr. Roger, who came to the woods with the Gospel, and had at first but two or three to meet with him, and who has since witnessed many, many, fruits of a faithful and devoted life.

We may well pause to thank God for that religion that appeals to the understanding minds and feeling hearts of his intelligent creatures, and rest not in miserable outward observances which leave the character of the worshipper wholly unchanged.

The Victoria Mutual Fire Insurance Company.

W. C. Nichols, of Lakefield, is agent in these parts for the above Company, and from the well known character of Mr. Nichols, and his straight-forwardness in business the Company need not fear results around here.

Of the Company itself, the Hamilton Spectator says: "The Victoria Mutual is entitled to confidence and support on more grounds than one and some of them, we are sure, will strike the reader at once. It is a Canadian Institution and on that account is deserving, other things being equal, of a degree of preference. Although established only a couple of years, it has achieved a position in public confidence, and commands a fair share of business. The names of the gentlemen who compose the board of managers are a guarantee against bad management." Because of these and some other peculiarities the Spectator "with the greatest confidence, recommends this Company to the support of the public." And we can recommend most cordially, the agent, Mr. Nichols, feeling assured all business will be honorably managed as far as he is concerned.

Canadian Messenger.

We have been favored with the first and second Nos. of the first volume of a neat little periodical of the above title. It is published fortnightly by John Dougall & Son, proprietors, Montreal, at the low rate of twenty five cents per annum, and goes postage free. For its size it contains a large quantity of reading matter which promises to be both interesting and instructive. There is some thing on Temperance, Education, Science and Art, besides an instructive story, and a corner for children. The Canadian Messenger deserves to be extensively circulated, and at so cheap a rate cannot fail to be.

Literary Club.

The evening the following Subject will be discussed:—"Is it desirable in the interests of the British Provinces of North America that the existing connection with Great Britain should be changed." Leaders—in the affirmative, Col. Haultain, M. P. P.; on the negative, W. H. Scott, Esq., Mayor.—There will be readings from 7½ p. m. to 8; debate to commence at 8 precisely. Doors open at 7½ p. m.

TOWN COUNCIL.

SPECIAL MEETING.

Thursday, Feb. 8th, 1866.

The Council met pursuant to notice, by order of the Mayor.

Present—Messrs. Burnham, Chamberlen, Millar, Ormond, Doherty, Stevenson, Wrighton, Toole, and Wilson.

The Mayor stated that the object in calling the Council together was, that he had been served with a rule to show cause why By-law No. 187 should not be quashed, and he wished the Council to say what should be done as to defending the appeal or not.

After some discussion it was moved by Mr. Burnham, seconded by Mr. Stevenson, that the Mayor be and he is hereby required to cause defence to be made against the proceedings now taken in the Court of Queen's bench at Toronto, for the purpose of quashing the By-law No. 187, passed by this Council, and further that the Mayor do immediately give notice to Messrs. Covert & Fowler of said proceedings—and transmit them a copy of any rule or paper served or which may be served in reference to this matter.

In amendment it was moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Millar,—That the consideration of the action in the matter of defending By-law No. 187, against the proceedings taken by certain parties in reference thereto be postponed until to-morrow evening, and this Council do now adjourn to meet at 7 o'clock for the purpose of coming to a conclusion in the matter.

Carried on the following division.

Yeas—Messrs. Toole, Wilson, Wrighton, Doherty, Millar, and Chamberlen.

Nays—Stevenson, Ormond, and Burnham.

The Council adjourned.

Friday, Feb. 9th, 1866.

The Council met as adjourned from yesterday.

Present—His worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Burnham, Chamberlen, Ormond, Stevenson, Toole, Wrighton, Millar, Doherty, Ewing, Wilson and Hamilton.

The Minutes of yesterday's meeting were read over and confirmed.

The Clerk read over the Rule served on the mayor, for the information of the councillors not present.

The original motion moved yesterday by Mr. Burnham was then read from the chair, and on the Yeas and Nays being taken, the "Yeas" were Messrs. Ormond, Stevenson and Burnham—3. "Nays"—Messrs. Toole, Wrighton, Wilson, Doharty, Ewing, Millar Hamilton, and Chamberlen—8.

The motion was declared lost.

The Council then adjourned.

Monday, Feb. 12th, 1866.

The Council met. Present—his worship the Mayor, Messrs. Chamberlen, Ewing, Cox, Stevenson, Ormond, Millar, Hamilton, Wilson, and Doherty.

The minutes of last meeting were confirmed.

A Communication from Hon. Sidney Smith, was read, informing the Council that he had been instructed by H. Covert, Esq., President of the P. H. L. and B. Railway Company, to take steps to oppose the Rule Nisi to quash By Law No. 187, and futher Notifying the Mayor on behalf of Mr. Covert and others interested that in case the By-law is quashed they will look to the Corporation for all damages and expenses they may sustain thereby.

A Petition from the Roman Catholic Separate School Trustees was read, setting forth that there were sundry matters connected with amounts of Interest and sinking fund for School Debentures, due to supporters of the Separate School which they were unable to manage with Town Treasurer, and praying that the matter be referred to the Town auditors.

The Petition was referred to the Committee on Finance and Assessment.

Two communications were read from the Secretary of the Fire Company, one asking the Council to appoint their chief and assistant Engineers for the present year, the other asking for the usual allowance to members of the Fire Company. Both communications were referred to the Fire Committee.

Accounts from Geo. Stethem & Co., for nails $10.70, were referred to Committee on Finance.

On motion of Mr. Cox, seconded by Mr. Stevenson, the Hon. Sidney Smith was heard in reference to the matter of quashing the By-law.

Mr. Smith remarked he had come to hear what the Council would do in the matter, that the matter was a bona fide one, and that Mr. Covert was determined, if possible, to have the legality of the By-law tested. But that if the Council refused to have the By-law tried in Court Mr. Covert would hold the Town responsible for all damages. This he (Mr. Smith) thought ought to be carefully considered by the Council as these damages would be considerable. Already the company had spent over $7,000 in the extension, and the iron for a mile and a half of the road had also been agreed for, and if the Council allowed the By-law to be quashed by default, which would be the case if no defence was set up, then Mr. Covert would try to recover damages from the Town. The By-law had been passed and the work done on the faith thereof. Mr. Covert on behalf of the company had acted in good faith in the matter; he was determined to carry out the junction or amalgamation of the roads, as contemplated, and was also determined to live by the Town, having no interests apart from the Town, and expected to live by the Town, he in return expected the Council would afford an opportunity of seeing whether the By-law was legal or illegal. It it was legal Mr. Covert asked nothing more; if it should turn out illegal the Town would not be to blame; but if quashed by default the Town must bear the consequences. Mr. Covert, however, had instructed him to say that he did not desire the Town to bear the expense of defence. He (Mr. C.) would do that; all he desired was to be put in a position to defend the By-law.

Having heard Mr. Smith, it was moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Millar,—That H. Covert, Esq., be and he is hereby authorized to defend the By-law for the Railroad connexion, and to use the name of this Corporation for that purpose, Mr. Covert indemnifying the Corporation against costs.—Carried.

The Collector having seized and offered for sale certain goods the property of J. Lethegow, for taxes, was directed to take the advice of the Town Solicitor and to take what action he then thinks best.

A CHURCH OF FANATICISM.—In support of the allegations of Bishop Lynch upon the persecution to which the Catholics of Upper Canada are exposed, Le Canada publishes a fact which it asserts to have from the most reliable source. It is alleged that the village of Bolsegyson in the township of Vernham, Victoria County, is inhabited exclusively by fanatic Orangemen of the worst kind; that an inoffensive French Canadian and his wife who were in the service of the most wealthy proprietor of the place, and attentive to their duties, have been prosecuted for no other reason than their being Catholics. The man was ordered to leave the place, and threats made at him, and, finally as he could not be frightened away, that a band of those Orangemen seized him, dragged him to the canal, and gave him a ducking in the icy water. The men at last left in order to save his life. This act was certainly most disgraceful if the statement be correct, but we trust that Le Canada has been misinformed.—Montreal Witness.

His Excellency the Governor General arrived in New York on the 14th last, in the Australasian. It is understood that Lord Monck, will at once proceed to Montreal, from whence he will go to Ottawa, probably in the course of next week. Nothing is definitely arranged, however.

Phelps, agent of the American Express Company, at St. Mary's, has absconded, taking $12,000. It is supposed that he has gone to Europe.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Mr Buchanan, the Chief Emigration Agent, has forwarded to me the following letter I think it would be well to give publicity to it. The writer of it has been recommended to send his boys out this spring, in order to put them to work with some farmers in the neighborhood. If any of your readers feel disposed to take them, or if those who have farms to let or sell would communicate with me, I might have an opportunity of communicating the same to the writer of the letter in question. I have long urged that we should at end our system of Free Grants to bonafide settlers.

Faithfully Yours,
FRED. W. HAULTAIN.

Peterboro', Feb. 12, 1866.

4, WELLINGTON TERRACE,
South Shields, 12th January, 1866.

A. BUCHANAN, Esq.,
Chief Commissioner of Emigration.

DEAR SIR,—It being my intention to emigrate to Canada next year I shall be much obliged by your giving me some information as to the quantity of land I and my family might be entitled to as Free Grants, and how much we would be allowed to purchase, that is, if we should be limited, if it was convenient for us to purchase wild lands, and if we so decided. My family consists of nine sons and one daughter; of these three sons and one daughter will be of the age of 18 and upwards, these lads have been put to handicrafts with the special view of their being useful in Canada.

I hope to bring with me a small capital of from £500 to £6 0, so that I hope to have a fair start in the western world.

I have settled, so far as I can do so without actually seeing the land the locality in which I will pitch my tent: is either the County of Peterborough or Victoria, and in one of these Townships, Minden, Snowden, Lutterworth or Sommerville. I presume that all the good lots even in these Townships, will not be disposed of by the middle of 1867, by which time I hope to be in Canada. Might I ask you to give me an opinion on this point?

I have not been an inattentive observer of the progress of events in Canada for the last two years, and am glad to note the dawning greatness of this magnificent country. I believe that there is a grand future in store for it. The settlement of the country has a very, an all-important bearing upon the future prospects of Canada; and I think the Government will do wisely to offer all the inducements they possibly can to intending emigrants to locate themselves on its wild lands, as they appear to be alive to the national importance of this question.

I hope that legislative action will speedily take place, and that much greater inducements to settlers will be offered than now exist.

I may state that I have written four letters to Crown Land Agents in Canada West, asking for information, but I have not had a reply from any of them. Probably by later may never have reached them, or they may not have considered themselves at liberty to answer my questions; however that may be, I hope to hear from you. Mr. P. Alger, of the London Canadian News has recommended me to apply to you, as the recognized head of the Emigration Office, for the above information.

I have thought of sending out my three eldest sons this next Spring, in order that they may gain some knowledge of Canadian farming, before the rest of the family come out; and in the event of your recommending it, would you kindly assist my boys in getting a respectable place?

I am, dear Sir,
Yours very respectfully.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—Within the last four months some cases of great physical suffering have come under my notice, which in England would be attended to by the parish authorities; and while it is a matter of thankfulness that we have so little necessity for those institutions so indispensible in older countries, yet I think there is one (a domestic institution in almost every town in Great Britain and Ireland) which we might safely adopt—an institution which, while not encouraging the slothful or harboring the dissipated, would be a source of merciful relief to those whom it might please the Almighty to afflict through accident or disease. I mean a Dispensary. In my mind there is a vast distinction between the pauperage handed down as an heir-loom through generations, and that crushing poverty which comes through accident or disease, upon the honest, industrious, hard-working poor, who, always battling manfully with the trials of life, and earning their bread with the sweat of their brow, when grim gaunt want lays his icy hand upon them, have been known to hide themselves in their cellars and die, rather than beg.

Often taxed with an improvidence which can have no existence when there is scarcity—or with acts imprudence, which in many cases are only different types of habit indulged in by ourselves—we should always remember that, whatever their feelings, how many their faults, they are the creatures of the same Omnip tence that created ourselves.

And, Sir, when we meet with cases in our daily walk through life, whom we find surrounded with great want, loathsome, fearful diseases—where physical suffering, almost (must I say it?) entirely neglected, has reached such an extent as to dethrone reason and deprive humanity of its last consolation, penitent communion with its God—I am not asking too much of a charitable professing Christian public to take the matter into their most serious consideration. And, with a population of nearly 6000 inhabitants, I think we might well afford to support a Dispensary, where the partial services of an efficient and zealous medical practitioner might be secured at a moderate rate of remuneration, and medical and surgical assistance and advice given to those who are really unable to pay for it. Should you think this project possible as my experience and my conscience tells me it is charitable, I feel that in placing the matter in your hands for promulgation, I am enlisting those sympathies which will not be displayed in frothy ebullition, but in energetic support such as you have always given to every good and holy cause.

One word more. Not long ago we all had fever in this town, and for a time shares of $5 were at a premium, for the purpose of burying the sigh the hard sock. An opportunity now offers for taking shares in an old and tried Company, with inexhaustible funds, unlimited credit, eternally remunerative. The Company is "The Saints and Angels in Heaven;" the Banker is The Lord Jesus Christ, and the locality for boring is the Mercy Seat of God, from whence oceans of oil may be pumped on the troubled waters of the life of our suffering brotherhood. Who'll put a hand to the pump? Who'll take shares? I am in for $5 worth.

AN ARAB.

Peterboro', Feb 12, 1866.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

MR. EDITOR,—For your edification and the edification of your readers, I will give a synopsis of an election for one of the Wards of Otonabee, held not many miles from Peterborough, a short time ago. I the most extraordinary piece of fun occurred. A certain party—a neat little logical fellow, named Tom Thumb in his own locality—went a canvassing. He went to one and requested his vote; as an ever-spurring inducement to secure the vote, he took ten cents worth of whiskey; this whiskey proved very offensive, and caused the party to vote in the opposite side to Tom Thumb. Mr. Thumb, feeling indignant at his non success in having votes, in revenge did his utmost to have the Tavern-keeper from who he had purchased the ten cents worth of whiskey, fined; inasmuch as it had been sold in a Township where the Dunkin bill was in force (by neighbor took a notice to the polling place, but because when there he voted contrary to Mr Tom's view, names far too vulgar to appear in print were used; thus shewing how far opposition to the best public men is carried. All this opposition arose about a piece of land through which a public road had been run by the Council, of which one of the candidates had been a member, while every body knows the Reeve is only Chairman of the Council, and cannot be responsible except when there is a tie, then he gives his casting vote. But the case is a bad one that requires vulgar language, whiskey, bribes, and offensive cards to support it. And what of the man who will first buy whiskey to purchase votes, and then endeavor to have the man who sold it to him fined.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.,

The Loss of the Steamship London.

HEART RENDING INCIDENTS OF HEROISM AND SUFFERING.

English papers give details of the wreck of the Australian emigrant ship London, with the loss of over 200 lives. On Wednesday, the 10th ult., the London was about 200 miles south-west of lands end, when the Captain determined to put back to Plymouth, but it seems it was then too late. On that night a tremendous sea swept the ship, broke into the engine room and put out the fires. All the passengers were working at the pumps, while the gale became a hurricane, and the ship was losing all control. At ten o'clock on Thursday, the Captain called the passengers together and told them they must prepare for the worst. The ship was fast sinking. A coat that was lowered was swamped and five men that were in it had to be dragged on board. No more attempts were made to launch other boats. The passengers then gathered into the chief cabin and having been calmly assured that there was no hope left, they all quietly joined with a clergyman in prayer. There was no wild and selfish terror; no screaming; no rushing to the boats; there was the agony of sudden partings and of everlasting separations of parent and child, and husband and wife; but with the example of Capt. Martin before them, all these dying men and women were composed, and all seemed resigned, while the children wondered and asked why their fathers and mothers looked so sad.—Captain Martin remained at his station on the poop, once or twice only going forward, and once or twice into the saloon to join in the devotions of the passengers. At two p.m. the few men who were destined to survive to bring the sad story home—sixteen of the crew and three of the passengers—determined to trust themselves to the chances of the sea, lowered away the pinnace, and launched her clear of the ship. These men called to the Captain to come with them, but the brave and steadfast English seaman declined, saying, "No, I will go down with the passengers; but I wish you God speed, and safe to land." The boat then pulled away, and, five minutes after, the London, with 270 souls on board, went down, and all was over. It seems that after the pinnace came away, an ineffectual attempt was made to get the other boat out, but it was too late.

PICKING UP WIFE AND CHILD.

One of the passengers in the boat—Mr. John Wilson, a native of Montrose—went down into the cabin and endeavored to persuade a friend—Mr. John Hickman, from Ballarat, and brother to Mr. Hickman, sub-editor of Southampton—to attempt to save his life by going into the boat; but after being entreated, he said: "No; I promised my wife and children to stay by them, and I will do so." The water was then a considerable depth on the ice side of the saloon, indeed over the top of the bulwarks; and he asked Mr. Wilson to help him in removing his four children to the windward side of the water. This was done, and then he shook hands with Mr. Wilson with "Good-bye, Jack," and parted from his friend for ever. When last seen Mr. Hickman was standing in a row with his wife and children.

ROOM FOR ANOTHER.

When the men were all in the boat, one of the seamen cried, "There may be still room; here's a lady." Mr Wilson then sprang over a portion of the deck in search of a lady he knew, but not seeing her and knowing that every moment was precious, he said to a young girl, "Will you go?" She did not refuse; therefore Mr. Wilson seized her and took her to the bulwarks; but when she looked over the rails and saw the distance which she was to spring, she said in despair, "Oh, I cannot do that." There was no time for persuasion or parley, and Mr. Wilson was obliged to drop the girl and jump from the steamer to the boat, which he fell into safely. The ship was then swung over to the boat, towards which it lunged heavily.

A THOUSAND GUINEAS FOR A LIFE.

At that moment those in the boat were piteously called upon by a lady about 23 years of age, who with a face which was, it is stated, livid with horror, shrieked out, "I offer a thousand guineas if you will take me in." But in that solemn hour millions of money would have been accounted valueless, and to return not have resulted in destruction to all. One of the seamen has stated that when the boat was pushed off, and the Captain had wished those in her "God speed," the men resolved that no danger must be allowed to accrue to them from further crowding, and that some of them drew their knives with a determination of cutting off the hands of those who might leap from the ship and endeavor to cling to the boat's gunwales. It is also stated that long before this, when it was first known that the vessel must go down, a passenger brought on deck a carpet bag, and that on buckling on the captain gave a short melancholy laugh, and then smiled, as one of the passengers expressed it, "at the preposterous idea of the man's thinking at such a time of his property."

THE LAST GLIMPSE OF THE DOOMED.

Two passengers were seen with lifebelts, but probably none were alive when they came to the surface. The spectacle was only to be seen, for in the din of the tempest no cry from the sinking multitude could be heard, and soon not a vestige was visible. As the ship sank, it was seen that all on deck were driven forward, not by water, but by a tremendous and overpowering rush of air from below, which, as it escaped through the deck as well as the hatches, impelled all on deck forward with violence, and their dreadful struggle must have been soon ended. It was remarked that the chief officer, who was named Angel, stood to the last at the donkey engine, which was employed in working the pump, and that his hands were on the engine even as the final disappeared.

THE PASSENGERS SHOOTING THEMSELVES TO AVOID DROWNING.

Several revolvers were seen in the hands of passengers, who did not conceal their intention of shooting themselves when the last moment came, preferring to meet their death, when inevitable, by a bullet rather than by drowning. The steward, indeed, overheard an offer by the owner of a yacht, to a friend, that he would shoot him if he desired. The well-meant offer was at that time declined, and whether these intentions were carried into execution is not known, but no reports of firearms was heard as the steamer

A Fearful Story of Hydrophobia.

Mr Henry Drew, Assistant Superintendent of Public Property, has related to us the particulars of a case of hydrophobia at the village o' a Waterloo, which surpasses in tragic interest almost any story of the kind we ever read:

Some six or seven years ago a mad dog went through the village of Waterloo, Jefferson County, and bit a number of animals. Among others it snapped at the leg of a cow belonging to Mr Babcock. The animal was examined but no mark was found and it was supposed that it escaped being bitten. The animal was afterwards sold to a man by the name of Garrison, who used her milk very freely, as did two of his children. Some of the neighbors including Mr. Drew's family, were also supplied with the milk of this cow.

At different time during the time since the cow was bitten there has been inexplicable and fatal sickness among those using her milk, and two children of Mr. Garrison a two of Mr. Drew's and two others, have been attacked with spasms. The mystery of this sickness was solved by the death, with every symptoms of hydrophobia, a short time ago, of the cow so slightly bitten seven years ago, and in whose system madness had been latent ever since.

THE HORSE.

"Of the great number of animals under the control of man, the horse is unquestionably the most serviceable;" but is not strange that so many who own horses, and on whom are dependent on their labor for a living, should neglect to give them that care and attention which their own interests no less than the safety and comfort of the horse demands. The best medicine for horses is "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine," of this there can be no doubt—it is safe and easily given.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

PRESCOTT, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry I will cheerfully assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article well myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,

Poetry.

HE'S A JOLLY GOOD FELLOW.

He's a jolly good fellow,
And spends his money free,
He's stored song and story,
The best of company.
True, his little ones are shabby,
Scarcely fit to go to school;
Though he's a jolly good fellow,
No doubt he is a fool.

They say that his home lacks comfort,
That he is despairing wife
Is weeping for her absent one,
Pining away her life;
But what is that to us my boys,
Let us pass the drink along,
For he's a jolly good fellow,
And here's his health and song.

He makes all merriment and glee,
Wherever he may turn,
Except around the deadened hearth,
Of his neglected home;
There the little frames afraid of him,
Creep close to mother's side,
Or he's a jolly good fellow,
Who'll not miss the prize.

He has humour in a good one,
And though he's kept his place,
He don't say that there is something up
That's not exactly his disgrace;
Let not these his wrong and change
Our feeling still more fast;
He's a jolly good fellow,
We'll stand nim to the last.

And so the poor misguided one
Had passed over the brink,
And his jolly companions every one,
Excuse me for I'll drink;
They do not we may surely learn
Let us correct school,
Is he a jolly good fellow—no,
But a misguided fool.

The Irishman and Deacon Ingalls.

A few months ago as Deacon Ingalls, of Swanpost, R. I. was travelling through the western part of the State of New York he fell in with an Irishman who had lately arrived in this country, and was in quest of a brother who came before him, and settled in some of the diggings in that vicinity.

Pat was a strong man, a true Catholic, and had never seen the interior of a Protestant church. It was a pleasant Sunday morning that brother Ingalls met Pat, who inquired the rode to the nearest church.

Ingalls was a pious man. He told Pat he was going to church and invited his new made acquaintance to keep him company thither, (his place of destination being a small Methodist meeting-house near by) There was a great revival there at the time, and one of the Deacons (who by the way was a very small man in stature) invited brother Ingalls to take a seat in his pew. He accepted the invation and walked in follow'd by Pat, who looked in vain to find the elder, &c. After he was seated, he turned to brother Ingalls and in a whisper that could be heard all around, inquired:

'Sure, and isn't this a Black church?'

'Hush' said Ingalls, 'if you speak a loud word they will put you out.'

'Did a word will I speak at all, at all,' replied Pat.

The meeting was opened with prayer by the pastor. It was evening I can very closely, when an old gentleman who was standing in the pew directly in front of Pat stood Glory!'

'Hist, ye clear divil,' re joined Pat, with his loud whisper, which was plainly heard by the minister, 'be decent and don't make a blackhead of yerself.'

The parson grew more fervent in his devotions. Presently the Deacon uttered an audible groan. 'Hist, ye black-guard, have ye no dacency at all?' said Pat, at the same time giving him a punce in the ribs which caused him to lose his equilibrium. The minister stopped, and extending his hand in a supplicating manner, said:

'Brethren we cannot be disturbed in this way. Will some one put that man out?'

'Yes, your riverence,' shouted Pat, 'I will!' and suiting the action to the word he collared the Deacon, and to the utter horror and astonishment of the pastor, brother Ingalls, and the whole congregation he dragged him through the aisle, and with a tremendous kick he landed him in the vestibule of the church.

In Search of a Retail Store.

A green appearing genius, on his first visit to Boston, spied a sign over a store thus, 'Wholesale and Retail Store.' He worked his way through the crowd of men until he found one of the clerks, who was cobbing some articles to a young lady, when he broke out with—

'Say Master, wh' boss bear?'

'The proprietor has just stepped out, sir.'

'Well is this a retailing shop?'

'No sir, a wholesale and retail store.'

'Guess you need not send your trade.'

'Oyes, replied the clerk weighing out a bundle for his lady customer,' what can I do for you?'

'Well 'tis the cold weather is coming on I thought I might as well come and get 'em early.'

'I don't understand you sir,' replied the clerk, who began to think the fellow was in the wrong box.

'Vastly so; well I'll tell you.'

'Explain what you mean, my friend' said the clerk, and he says box produce in the boun'ries of the east.

'Why as I said before the cold weather's coming on I thought I ought to work in first, for I see Commodity near here rather warm, I have left; but—

'I have come to tell what you want so I may serve you.'

'Certainly, sqeire, I always do business in a hurry; and just as quick as the old master will let you, I want you to remove those shirts. Let em come down to the knees, base I don't wear drawers.'

The effect may be imagined. The loud burst of laughter which followed served to convince the poor fellow he had committed himself, and his long legs were put in motion for the door.

In the Wrong Place.—An old Methodist very great at responses, which were not always appropriate, but always well meant, went one day hear a popular preacher. The preacher, usually lucid, was rather perplexed and felt it himself.—He laboured through the first part, and then said:

'Brethren, I have reached the conclusion of my first point.'

'Thank the Lord,' ejaculated the old man, who sat before him profoundly interested, in a voice that was heard in every part of the church.

'The last part of that sermon was harder to preach than the first.

'Will you take the life of Gen. Grant or Admiral Farragut this morning?' asked a newsman of an elderly lady who had stopped to look over the publications at his stall.

'How much?' she replied, 'they have lives to them as well as other boys, for all I know I don't got anything against 'em.'

A WORD TO THE LADIES.

AT the commencement of a New Year, the proprietors of

Frank Leslie's Lady's Magazine

Appeals, confidently, to his fair subscribers to assist him in increasing its circulation. The simple fact that they them selves patronize it is sufficient proof that they consider it the best; a distinction which the publisher has endeavored to deserve, by spairing neither pains nor expense.

The double Steel Fashion Plate, exquisitely colored, surpasses that of any other Magazine while the other Fashion plates exceed in number and beauty those of all other Lady's Magazines combined.

The commencement of a New Year and New Volume, induces us to ask our Lady friends to recommend this, their favorite publication to their friends. This would enable the proprietor to render Frank Leslie's Lady's Magazine still more deserving.

The present number contains two features of great interest:—a new series of Lith graph cuttings, free from all ocular Parisian Pictorial red ink or sensational action of the original, to be found in all the dearer and coarser kinds of second rate. And the other a Pattern Doll Fashion so arranged to be cut into separate pieces, so as to form a perfect Doll with change of dress. Other pictures and models are in course of preparation and will appear in succeeding numbers.

TERMS,—One copy one year, or 12 numbers $3.50; four copies one year, in one wrapper to one address, $10, with an extra copy to the person getting up a club.

Subscriptions to be sent to

AMERICAN

Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering

SEWING MACHINE!

COMPANY,

627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLE Stitch made by this entirely simple and novel machine are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or gut side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a series of flat braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses; besides imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary.

The Needle and Two Threads are only Used

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that beauty finish and strength can not be attained by the most skilful Hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, there is not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will sew a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and work it in a manner indispensible for Buttonholes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, gold or silver silks, of purple of various colors most used for beauty and taste.

For ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak Makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c., &c., it is their possible; it is also admitted to be of great value to those engaged in Agricultural Implement Manufactories, and spoke and nancy work all kinds of Clothes-mens Linen, Velvet Hea lines, &c. &c.

Directions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our Sewing Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleaker Store Instruction Rooms are reserved for ladies.

P.S.—A novel patented BUTTON HOLE cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

Machine, $125.00, Button Hole Cutter, $8.00.

See what the most prominent and widely circulated periodicals say of our Exhibition:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865

Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we were sure to say that no more elegant goods ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The building through their whole extent was crowded, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and sleet. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Jewelry, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated wares superb and numerous, casts into the shade the establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS—constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other. The construction is simple and rational, all the expensive humbug in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, the latter consisting wood the object of which is obtaining a perfect resonance. Bridges, preserving at the same time the Overstrung Bass, of which Mr. D. was the inventor. By these improvements we gain an immense additional power, at the same time preserving all the purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the most and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
M. A. Strakosch,	S. Hadley,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Hermann Wollenhaupt,	A. Parilli,
Francis H. Brown,	M. Stanekovich,
m. Henry Eve,	Charles Fradel.

Mr. EGMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. I anticipate, by using great increase of vibratory power to be obtained, being very simple and perfectly diffused. The tone is good and pure; it has a great evenness of tone throughout the scale, and will wear a long time without getting out of order, and is very elastic to the touch.

The above testimonials are but a few of the many we have received, and we feel confident that those who favor us with a call will be convinced that we have not overrated the merits of our instrument.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles, and has recently undergone many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most rigorous and experienced and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, no rotating shuttle or cog, moves the cloth or shuttle stitch, which will unrip or ripper and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Swiss muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to give it motion than any other Machine in the market. A girl of twelve years of age can use it as easily, without fatigue or injury to health, as the strength and widest latitude of construction renders it almost impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite those who may desire to supply the market with a machine of merit, to come and examine the UNRIVALLED Machine.

In a manner especially adapted to the use of

Merchant Tailors,	Corset Makers,
Coach Makers,	Gaiter Fitters,
Hoop Skirt Manufacturers,	Shoe Binders,
	Vest and Pantaloon Makers,
Shirt and Bosom Makers.	Dress Makers.

Religious and Charitable Institutions will be liberally dealt with.

One lesson's instruction is sufficient to enable any person to work the Machine to their satisfaction.

Agents wanted in all Towns in the United States, where none are now established. Also for Cuba, Mexico, Central and South America, to whom a liberal discount will be given.

$10 A DAY to AGENTS.

LLOYD'S GREAT TOPOGRAPHICAL MAP RAILWAY and COUNTY MAP of NORTH AMERICA, SCOTLAND and WALES—is the largest, most correct and complete, and cheapest Map ever published for agents to work with. Size 24 by 36 inches, is the best map ever made since the world was first shown 200,000 cities, towns, villages, market places, post offices, rivers, counties, canals, railroads and railway stations, with the distance between each station mark'd plainly, and the official name and postal length of the railways in actual operation up to June, 1865, is given. The railway stations are all numerically and alphabetically arranged. The lakes, rivers, hills and mountains are exhibited, with the altitude of each in feet, made from trigonometrical surveys by our own engineers, draughtsmen and Photographers sent to England expressly to make a superior one of the country; the whole engraved on steel, colored superbly in counties, in outline and varnished. Price $3 sterling ($12) so unsurpassed for cheapness and quality. Also, with a small capital, to go to Canada, Chicago, Cincinnati, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, East and West Indies, Australia and California, to open offices. Can make a fortune wholesaling this and other maps to subagents. Eighty thousand copies of this map were subscribed for in England before going to press, so can be shown to any agents letters from Ten thousand now under way.

BRYAN'S

PULMONIC WAFERS!

The most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered for all diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza,

Hoarseness, Difficult Breathing, Sore Throat &c. &c.

THESE Wafers give the most instantaneous and prompt relief, when preserved with according to directions never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health who have tried other means in vain. To all classes and all constitutions they are a blessing and cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or how severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly diseased. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

TO VOCALISTS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS: these Wafers are peculiarly valuable, they will in one day remove the most severe hoarseness and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and inflexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass, and clearness, of which purpose they are regularly used by many Professional Vocalists.

Peterborough and Ashburnham.

THE unnersigned beg to announce that their New Map of the Town of Peterboro' and of the Village of Ashburnham, is now complete and ready for publication.

This Map has been compiled with great care from the original registered plans and surveys, and its entire accuracy secured not only by those means, but by actual survey and careful admeasurement In the two corporations named, not only is every Lot given and its subdivisions where divided, but the names of the owners, as contained in the last Assessment Roll, are neatly printed on each lot. All public buildings, manufactories stores, and private residences, together with the existing and proposed railways, streets, mill-races, water-courses dams, bridges, &c, are laid down from actual measurement. The built-up portion of the town is so colored as to distinguish at a glance the materials used, whether of wood, stone or brick, while the whole is finished in a superior manner, so as to be both useful and ornamental, in securing which neither pains nor expence have been spared.

During the ensuing week, the undersigned will be prepared to receive the names of intending subscribers, at their office, Scott's Buildings. Early application is desired, as but a limited number of copies will be published.

GUARANTEE.—After a fair trial, if any purchaser does not regard the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine as superior to any machine in market, he can return it and have his money. It has taken many of the highest prizes—is less complicated than any other first class machine,—does a wider range of work without changing,—requires no taking apart to clean or oil, and no "lessons" to set needle, regulate tension, or operate machine.

N B. Any Clergyman sending us two orders for Machines, shall receive one for himself as a present The same proposition is extended to Professors and Teachers.

We have now completed our New Manufactory at a cost of some $250,000, including New Patents and important improvements; and the object of the above proposition is to secure the immediate introduction of our improved machine into every town in the United States without incurring the great expense of a travelling agent.

This proposition cannot avail in towns occupied by our own agents.

Original Poetry.

Lines on the death of Mr. R. E. Elliott, Scottish B. P. Missionary, Siam, Farther India.

He stood alone, amid a stranger race—
The wild, untutored savage gazed on him,
And knit his fierce and swarthy brows in scorn,
And scowled upon him in his loneliness.
He looked around on Nature—all was fair,
For everlasting summer gilds the land;
Birds, with sun-tipt plumage, round him sung;
Flowers of a thousand hues perfumed the breeze,
That drooped like exiles in a colder clime.
The curse had left no trace, except on man,
The Savage lord of all: but there it lived
In all its darkest melancholy features.
He saw the human victim on the altar,
And heard the howlings of the sacrifice,
The barbarous offering of idolatry!
And his heart beat with sympathy divine;
He toil'd and suffered and resented not,
And meekly bore his suffrings and his wrongs:
And like his Master on the mountain side,
His locks were wetted with the dews of night,
While wrestling with his God in heart-felt prayer

The years rolled slowly on, and changes came,
The sable child of Afric paused and listened
To the strange tidings of the Man of Peace;
On his benighted soul the light of Heaven
Dawned, with its softening influence, touched his heart,
Melted away his fetters, and he stood
Reclaimed! redeemed!! and wondering at his freedom.
This was the missionary's hour of triumph,
O! humble triumph, and of glorious hope;
It nerved the heart for great and firmer daring.
He saw the alter of their gods forsaken,
And heard the hymns of holiness ascend
From many a rude-built hut, in praise of God.
Oft had the man, who, numbering many years,
Thus newly born to Christ, breathing farewell
To earth, poured forth a dying prayer for him;
Then soared with angels on celestial wing,
To add another triumph to their song.

The burning influence of that sunny clime
Wasted away his weak and toil-worn frame;
There was no parent's hand to smooth his pillow,
There was no kindred face to smile on him;
Yet there was love in every eye around,
And every movement spoke benevolence.
He leaned upon his God and found repose,
While many a voiceless prayer was raised for him
And sweetly cheeks were glistening with their tears,
He smiled his last farewell—and died!

They bore the pilgrim father to his grave—
There was no great one's pomp, no mockery of sorrow,
But there was weeping hearts that would have died
To ransom back a life of so much value.
They scooped his grave amid a flowery spot,
Where shady palm-tree, date, and orange grew;
They laid him gently in his home of rest,
And as they laid him, thus they weeping sung:

Farewell now! but not forever!
Death will break life's feeble chain;
We shall meet thee yet, and never,
Never shall we part again.

The sire shall teach his child to love thee,
With a love that cannot fade;
The brightest flowers shall bloom above thee,
Sheltered in the palm-tree's shade.

Here we lay thy sacred ashes,
While thy spirit's far away,
Where the light of glory flashes
Round thee in eternal day.

Literature.

A LESSON FOR THE TIMES.

'Aunt Malinda, please give me a pin,' said a bright looking but shabbily dressed little fellow, opening the door of Mrs. Lane's kitchen.

'Just see here,' he added, pointing to a large rent on the leg of his trowsers, 'me and Will Brown were playing tag and I fell down and tore this.

'Why don't you run home, Johnny?' said Mrs. Lane, as she did her best to bring together the several parts.

'Oh,' cause mother ain't to home. She's gone to the Society for Clothing Destitute Children.'

'Destitute children!' ejaculated Mrs. Lane, as she surveyed her nephew from head to foot. 'If you don't come under that class, then never a child did! Why, my dear, you are rags and tatters!'

'I know it, a nt,' responded the boy, moodily; 'but it ain't fault. Mother says she has no time to mend my clothes and if she did they would be just as bad next day; so what's the use? Father said last night that I looked like a heathen, and he almost wished that I was, for mother would think I was worth looking after a little.'

'Have you had any supper, Johnny, you look hungry?'

'No,' said the boy, casting a longing look at a generous piece of pumpkin pie that his aunt was cutting; 'mother left some cold victuals on the table for father and me, but'—

'Well,' interrupted the good woman, placing the pie upon a plate, and adding to it a couple of doughnuts she was frying and a slice of cheese, 'you just take this and mind you don't leave a bit of it.'

John lost no time in obeying his aunt's peremptory but by no means unpleasant injunction and the contents of the plate rapidly reappeared before the energetic assault.

'I wish mother stayed at home, just as you do, aunt, he said, as he opened the door, casting a longing look back upon the cheerful, cozy-looking, kitchen.

'I declare,' exclaimed Mrs. Lane, as taking up the rolling pin, she resumed labors, 'if it isn't a shame for many to neglect him; I am actually ashamed of him, and his mother an active member of half a dozen societies! As for brother John he's clean discouraged, and I don't wonder at it. I dont believe he comes home to a warm supper once a week. It's my belief its a woman's business first to look after the comfort of her family; then if she has time to do for others, well and good.—Charity ought to begin at home, if she don't stay there!'

'There's Aunt Nancy, now just coming in the gate,' said her daughter Betsy, as looking up from the apples she was paring she ceased to glance out of the window.

Indignant as she was, it was not in good natured Mrs. Lane to refuse a kindly greeting to her sister-in-law, who was evidently too full of her own concerns to have noticed any lack of cordiality, had there been any.

'How do you do, sister Lane; how do you do Betsy,' said she seating herself in the first chair she came to, as if quite exhausted, though her keen black eyes looked as bright as ever. 'Always cooking, I do declare! Ah! now it makes my heart ache to see you spending so much precious time in caring for the poor perishing body!

'Folks can't live without eating,' replied Mrs. Lane a little tartly, as this remark called to mind what she considered her sister's remissness in the care of her family 'Least-way, I haven't yet found out the other way of living.'

'You always did make nice dough-nuts, Malinda,' said Mrs. Shaw, very composedly helping herself to one.

'They are as light as honey-comb,' she added, as she broke it open, and proceeded to dispose of it with evident satisfaction.—'I don't know when I have made any kind of pastry. Professor Spare, who lectured here last winter, said they were unhealthy naturely destroying what he called the digestive aparatus.'

'Yes, I know,' returned Mrs. Lane dryly, 'husband invited him home to tea one day, and I could'nt perceive he had any particular objections to my pies and cakes. Indeed I remember thinking if that was his ordinary way of eating, I shouldn't like to be the one to cook for him. And let folks think what they may, I never will think that plain light pastry, eaten moderately, ever hurts anybody. I always let my children have it, and they are as healthy and robust a set of boys and girls as you can find anywhere; as I'm sure they would'nt be if they were fed on cold, bake-cooked vituals, given to them any way and just when it happened.'

'It isn't always the rosiest and freshest looking children that are the healthiest,' said Mrs. Shaw, helping herself to another dough-nut.

'Now I think of it, I'm certain I can see a pimple on Betsy's nose—a sure proof of over-eating; and John Thomas is not nigh so strong as my Johnny, who is not more than a year or so the oldest. But I guess I'll do my errand and be going. I called to tell you that we are going to have a Fair for the benefit of oppressed Poles. I'm on the Committee of Arrangements, and really hope, sister Lane, that you will take right hold and do everything in your power to forward this noble, praiseworthy object.'

'No, thank you,' returned her sister-in-law, 'I think I can find objects of charity nearer than Poland. But there is a society of which you are a member, that I think I should like to join,' she resumed after a moment's thought; 'the one for clothing and providing for the destitute and neglected children.'

Mrs. Shaw's countenance brightened.

'We shall be delighted!' she exclaimed.

'The imitation fee is only two dollars, together with a weekly payment of eight cents.'

'I believe I paid the imitation fee about a year ago, when it was first organized. I did it cheerfully, though what I then considered to be duties nearer home prevented my doing more. I will pay it over again, however, only I must have the privilege of bringing a destitute child with me. I often see a little boy roaming about the streets, whose forlorn and destitute appearance fills my heart with pity.'

'That's what we expect and desire every member to do when she has an opportunity. We have a number of little jackets and pants on hand, and there will be some among them that will fit him. Our next meeting is just a week from to-day, remember, at Squire Mayo's.'

There was a merry twinkle in Mrs. Lane's eyes that night, as she superintended preparation for tea, which ever and anon deepened into a smile. But though the children were anxious to know 'what mother was smiling about,' she kept her own counsel.

The next Wednesday afternoon a score or more of ladies were seated in Squire Mayo's parlor with busy fingers and still more busy tongues.

'There is Mrs. Lane coming up the walk!' exclaimed Mrs. Mayo who was seated near the window. 'Just see what a wretched looking boy she is leading by the hand! It can't be one of her boys, for I know they are all models of neatness.'

Mrs. Shaw was too busy distributing work to even glance out of the window.

'I forgot to tell you, ladies,' she said, 'that my sister-in-law joins our society this afternoon. The boy with her is no doubt the one she spoke to me about the other day as a fit subject for our charity. I take considerable credit to myself,' she added complacedly, 'for persuading her to take this step. Sister Lane is such a home body so wrapped up in herself and family.'

'Mrs. Lane is a kind-hearted woman, replied the old lady who was knitting in one corner of the room, 'and does a great deal of good in her quiet way.'

By this time Mrs. Lane was in the room.

'Good afternoon, ladies,' she said, glancing around with a smile. 'You see, sister Shaw, that I kept my word and did not come alone,' she added, as that individual fixed her eyes in unfeigned astonishment upon the boy whose reluctant hand she held.

'I found this poor lad,' she continued in an airy way playing marbles with some profane and vicious boys, who were uttering words that I shudder to think of. The black eye he has got in a fight with one of them, in which it appears he had the worst of it. He is very dirty and ragged, as you see. But I offer no apology for bringing him to you in this condition, as your society was formed for the benefit of such, and I trust that under your kindly care he will soon present another appearance.'

Twice did Mrs. Shaw essay to interrupt the speaker, but anger and shame choked utterance. When she had concluded she sprang to her feet.

'Malinda Lane!' she exclaimed, 'do you mean to pretend that you don't know that is my boy?'

'Your boy!' exclaimed Mrs. Lane, starting with well dissembled amazement, 'is it possible?' Now that I look at him closer, it does look like Johnny. But who would have though it? I leave it to you, addressing the other ladies, if the mistake was not a very natural one, or if ever a child, apparently, stood more in need of your friendly offices?'

This assertion could not be denied by any present, certainly not by Mrs. Shaw, who was completely silenced, though she was looking unutterable things.

Not long after she could have been seen with poor Johnny 'in tow,' taking a round about way in the direction of home, for unlike her sister-in-law, who escorted him thither, she went by the darkened and most unfrequented streets.

This sharp, but much needed lesson, had a most happy result, and was evident not only by Johnny's improved appearance but by the increased comfort of the whole family. Mrs. Shaw learned what, it is to be feared, too many forget, that no object, however praiseworthy can excuse the wife and mother in home duties; that as these lies her truest happiness, so there are found the dearest objects of her care, who have the first claim upon her time and affections.

The Curate who Mended Cloaks.

A curate in the south of France was accused before his Bishop of degrading his sacred functions by mending cloaks for hire.

"Does he neglect his official duties?" was asked by the Bishop.

"No," replied he who had brought the impeachment; "he is a good preacher and a good man, kind to the poor, attentive to administering to the afflicted; but it seems scandalous to us that the holy office should be de-cerated by mechanical labors and sordid gains."

"Summons him before me," then said the Bishop.

The curate obeyed the summons and stood before the Bishop.

"Monsieur le cure," said the Bishop, "I have received a grave charge against you It is that you degrade the priestly functions by mechanical and mercenary labors."

"It is not to be denied, my lord," replied the curate, "that I have performed such labors. My salary was so small as scarcely to suffice to keep body and soul together, and left nothing for hospitality and charity. Having a mechanical turn, I have attempted without infringing on my ministerial duties, to piece out my scanty income by mending clocks, for which I did not disdain to receive compensation."

"Your own confession," said the Bishop, renders further process unnecessary. I cannot permit the holy office to be associated with a trade. The care of souls demands all our time and thoughts. It becomes my duty to administer to you an effectual admonition to devote yourself in future wholly to your ministry. You will find your sentence in this paper." So saying he handed him a paper which he had been meanwhile writing.

The poor curate took the fulmination of episcopal wrath and withdrew. When he opened it, he found it to be a presentation to a handsome living.

Some congregations would do well to act on the principle which prompted the Bishop to this just and welcome act of severity. The best way to prevent the desecration of the sacred office by incompatible pursuits is to make it unnecessary.

THE PEACHES.

A countryman brought home from the city five peaches, the finest that ever were seen. But his children saw this fruit, for the first time, therefore, they wondered, and rejoiced in the pretty peaches with their reddish cheeks and delicate down. The father then divided them among his four boys, and gave one to their mother.

In the evening when the children went into their sleeping chamber, their father asked:—Well, and how did the pretty peaches taste? Finely, dear father said the oldest. It is a beautiful fruit, so tartish and so delicate in taste. I have carefully kept the stone, and will raise me a tree from it.

Bravo! said the father; that is providing economically for the future as becomes a landsman.

I ate mine at once, the youngest cried, and threw away the stone, and mother gave me half of hers. Oh, it tasted so sweet, and melted in my mouth.

Well, said the father, you have not acted very wisely, but naturally, and in a childish manner. For wisdom there is yet room in the course of your life.

Then the third son began:—I hunted up the stone my little brother threw away and cracked it. There was a seed in it that tasted as a nut. But my peach I sold for enough, when I go to the city that I can probably buy twelve.

The father shook his head and said:—That is wise enough, but childlike and natural it was not. Heaven guard you that you do not become a merchant.

And you Edmund? asked the father.—Self possessed and frank, Edmund replied, I carried my peach to our neighbor George who is sick of a fever He would not take it, then I laid it upon his bed and came away.

Well said the father, who has made the best use of his peach?

All three exclaimed:—Brother Edmund But Edmund was silent, and his mother embraced him with tears in her eyes.

A gentleman who had lost his wife, whose maiden name was Lattle, addressed the following to Miss Moore, a lady of diminutive stature:

'I've lost the Little one I had,
My heart is sad and sore;
So now I should be very glad
To have a little Moore;'

To which the lady sent the following answer:—

'I pity much the loss you've had,
This grief you must endure;
A heart by little made so sad,
A little Moore won't cure.'

WOMEN AND LITTLE CHILDREN STARVING.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

For some days past we have endeavored to lay before the readers of the Inquirer a truthful idea of the sorrows and sufferings of the poor of our city, and more especially of those dwelling in the memorable victimties of Bedford, Spafford and Baker streets. Desirous, however, of seeing for ourselves, we joined an expedition fitted out on Wednesday evening last.

Reaching Seventh and Bedford streets we proceeded to explore cellars, garrets and hovels in search of the sick, the sorrowful and the destitute, though in truth from the moment we entered the street we were literally surrounded by just such persons as we sought. "Kind sir, won't you please give me some bread for my little children, they have not had a mouthful to-day?" and said a wretched looking woman. "I have three little ones in that cellar, sir, they're cold and hungry," cried another half-clad mother. "Please to give me a piece of bread, I'm so hungry," cried a dozen childish voices, the owners of which, barefooted and bareheaded, crowded around us in that icy street. We gave to all who applied, and the eagerness with which those shoeless children, as they stood upon the ice, devoured the little pittance we were able to give them, attested the sincerity of their appeals.

Great God! is it not terrible to think that scenes like this should be witnessed in Philadelphia, the city above all others noted for its wealth and benevolence? Returning to the Home, our bags and baskets were replenished, and we once more entered Bedford street.

Notwithstanding the number that had been supplied a few minutes before, the crowd had not in the least lessened, nor were the appeals for food any less earnest or touching.

Leaving the streets for a moment or two the whole party would clamber down un safe stairways into dismal cellars, where grim poverty and fell disease reigned with undisputed sway. Oh! the scenes of sorrow and suffering we witnessed. Once strong men, lying in filth and destitution, and seeing hunger slowly gnawing the vitals of their wives and children; mothers pleading for food and fire for their perishing little ones, and little children piteously crying for bread and something to protect them from the sharp, biting frost.

In one cellar we found three females, all with children, all without fuel, save the handful of coals which smouldered in their poor apology for a stove. God's daylight never visits this abode of misery, save through the open cellar door. Plunging into a dark, narrow and filthy alley or court along Baker street, we found a two storied shed, the rooms of which were not more than eight feet square. This shed contained some ten or twelve of these rooms, all of which were occupied.

We ascended to the upper tier and knocked for admission. It was at first refused, but when we uttered the magic word "bread," doors flew open, eager faces welcomed us, and eager hands grasped the precious morsel. Children were wakened from their cheerless sleep, and received the proffered bread with glistening eyes. Oh! how they seemed to enjoy the little we were able to divide with them, and with what more comfortable feelings they gathered the few rags with which they were covered around them, and sought sleep once more. Mothers in countless numbers implored God's blessing upon those through whose kindness we were able to dispense the welcome food.

Every one of these eight feet square comes, with a single exception, contained from three or five inmates. They cooked ate and slept there. Let us describe the last one we visited. The husband sat upon a box, in front of what we supposed was a fire. We saw none, as he was crouched over the furnace in such a manner as to hide it from view. The wife, a fine, comely looking woman, clad in a thin summer dress, bade us enter. We did so, and will it be believed, that in that desolate room, the habitation of a man and wife, the only furniture was the box upon which the husband, and the frame (without the seat) of a hickory white chair.

No sign of bed, table, cooking utensils, food or clothing was visible. Bleak, grimy walls, and that chair-frame and little box were these poor creatures only possessions. A child had died in Spafford street, near Shippen. Mr. Segee's friend had learned of it in the afternoon, and informed us that the mother had not had only neither food nor fuel, but was utterly destitute of every thing necessary for the child's burial. These were provided by him. We visited the house, reaching it by a dark alley and an uncertain flight of steps. Entering the room, we saw at a glance where the dead child lay.

Removing the clothing from its little face, it was plainly and painfully evident that starvation, not disease, had done the work. We learned from the sister of the child that they were wholly without food, and yet on the table at the foot of the corpse a plate of smoking tobacco and a half a dozen pipes were placed; and in that little room, not more than ten feet square, no less than fourteen men and women were crowded, waking the dead child. In another hovel near by we found a woman and two pretty little girls sleeping upon a scanty pile of dirty straw in the corner. The mother informed us that she paid twenty-five cents per night for the privilege of sleeping there. The children were wholly without cover, and the room was as cold as it was desolate looking in other particulars. Accompanied by three police, we descended into a cellar on Bedfore street where lodgers are taken at five cents a night. A soldier who had lost both legs in the war had taken quarters there for the night, while a number of vicious looking men were lying around.

In the corner next the cellar door covered with rags, three children were lying.—We gave them bread, which they ate greedily. The mother who seemed to have temporary care of the place, stood guard over them. We asked her where she slept, as there was not the shadow of a bed in the den. "Down there by the children," said she; "just there, sir, on them boards." "Where do you sleep?" We inquired of another woman who stood near. "Oh, sir, I sleep with her," pointing to the mother of the children. In this den as many as 36 men, women and children have been quartered at one time.

THE MEANING OF MASONRY.

Many persons suppose that the institution of Freemasonary is altogether benevolent in its character; that its constitutions and general regulations require that certain provision shall be made weekly for the sick, the disabled, or the distressed. This is a mistake. No Masonic Lodge is bound by constitutional law to contribute to the support of any sick or disabled member any stipulated sum per week. Neither are they called upon, to incur expenses on behalf of deceased brethren in liquidating funeral expenses, &c. Nor are they called upon, by any recognized law, to support the widow of a deceased brother, or to foster and educate his children. Freemasonry is not an insurance company. It does not require of those who knock at her door for admittance that they all pay so much per week and have it returned to them again in the form of benefits when they are really sick, or would feign the reality of indisposition.—Nothing like this is Masonry. And it has never deceived any of its initiates by telling them that the constitutional rules and regulations of the order required that a few dollars should be doled out to them per week, and that the order was bound to furnish funds for their decent interment.

Freemasonry is a brotherhood. The order recognizes and maintains the sublime principle, that as one God created us all, we have a common parentage; and as God is the "father of the spirits of all flesh," those who were created in "His own image" are brethren. The tenets of Freemasonry, in inculcating and enforcing these sentiments, establish a principle that does not require stringent laws to show the brethren their duty; nor are promises of pecuniary advantage necessary to excite the selfish propensities of our nature. The whole system of Freemasonry is designed to purify the heart; to make a man deserve the station of that race who were created but a little lower than the angels, and, while the fraternal fire warms his breast, and makes him feel that a man is his brother, that, no law, save that of love, is necessary to force him to the path of duty. The one who understands Masonry as a sublime moral science, will here perceive that the duties which he is called upon to perform in the fulfilment of his Masonic obligations, rise from a dignified sense of his relations with his fellow men. The suffering man is his brother, and he should assist him. It requires no law of lodge or council to enforce the injunction, "If thy neighbor hunger, give him meat; if he thirst give him drink; and if he lack raiment, clothe him." —Wiggin.

A SHREWD EDITOR.

At a Welsh celebration in New York, Dr. Jones told the following amusing anecdote:

"The speaker said the editors were like other shrewd men who have to live with their eyes and ears open. He related a story of an editor who started a paper in a new village in the West. The town was infested by gamblers, whose presence was a source of annoyance to the citizens, who told the editor that if he did not come out against them they would not patronize his paper. He replied that he would give them a "smasher" next day. Sure enough his next issue contained the promised "smasher," and on the following morning the redoubtable editor, with scissors in hand was seated in his sanctum cutting out news, when in walked a large man with a club in his hand, and demanded to know if the editor was in. "No sir," was the reply; "he has stepped out; take a seat and read the papers, he will return in a minute."—Down sat the indignant man of cards, crossed his legs, with his club between them, and commenced reading a paper. In the meantime the editor quietly vamoosed down stairs, and at the landing below he met another excited man with a cudgel in his hand, who asked if the editor was in. "Yes sir," was the prompt response. "You will find him upstairs reading the papers." The latter, on entering the room with a furious oath, commenced a violent assault upon the former, which was resisted with equal ferocity. The fight was continued until they had both rolled to the foot of the stairs, and pounded each other to their heart's content."

A Little too Ripe.

As many of our readers are doubtless aware, it is the custom for planters at the South to purchase clothing for their slaves at wholesale; and as they cannot examine each article, they are sometimes swindled by a few bad ones thrown in among the good. On one occasion a box of shoes was opened, and distributed among the negroes. A few days afterwards Old Bob, a favorite servant, found that his shoes were bursting out. So, going to his master, he said:—

'Massa, where you buy dese shoes?'

'I bought them in New Orleans, Bob,' responded our friend.

'Well, whar did de New Orleans people buy 'em?'

'They bought them from the people up North—from the Yankees.

'Well, whar do de Yankees get 'em?' persisted the negro.

'The Yankees?' why they pick them off trees, Bob.'

'W-w-w-well,' responded the darkey, looking up his shoes, 'I reck'n de Yankees dido' pick dese pair soon enough, massa; I reck'n he wanted till dey be a little too ripe.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1866.

The Convention and Dr. Ryerson's Position.

It is much to be regretted that the subjects of the Dr's. remarks had not been more thoroughly ventilated. The people generally have allowed the few to manage their business and with the result their does appear a degree of satisfaction, as there is evidently a disposition to allow the few to continue to do so. This we consider is very unwise on the part of the people, as it will leave room for abuse, and generally without remedy, as when about being applied, it is often too late.

The Chief Superintendent of Education has had school matters committed to him by the Government, and very many are willing to allow him to do as he pleases, perhaps he would do so anyway, but nevertheless, he should be warned that if he treads too heavily on the right of private judgement and civil duties and obligations, he will find that the Canadian people are not prepared to let him go on without opposition. One thing the reverend Dr. dreads, and that is, consultation and orderly union. He dreads holding preliminary meetings, as wherever held, there no pet schemes were negatived. The Chief Superintendent knows that where preliminary conventions have been held, the changes have been discussed, and the benefit and disadvantages weighed, and the public mind at large set to assert its right to decide in cases affecting the public. He, however, has a disregards the opinions of men. He will just attach such weight to the representations of the people as he in his wisdom may think fit. These are almost his words, and and are only the emotions of the inward man. The reverend Dr. might as well have stand at home, in Toronto, and not troubled himself, he is determined to have his own way at any cost. At Port Hope he went so far as to abuse George Brown and the Globe, because forsooth, Mr. Brown chooses to think for himself, on school matters. "Casual advantage" seem still to be haunting him. Is it not bad taste to find a man abusing his position, and demeaning himself by meddling with the Globe or its proprietor.

But a word in reference to his proposed changes. The change in the County Boards of Instruction, he insinuates will be less expensive than the present system. Let us see. According to his own words, the work is now done by three or four, the rest taking no interest in the matter, therefore those only have to be paid. Will the six of the Dr.'s choice be less expensive than the three or four? Surely not on principles of proportion. So much for his logic. We readily admit that something must be done to keep pace with the advancement of the age but certainly this does not exhibit advancement. The Chief Superintendent's new certificates are too exist during 15 or 20 years, hence the advancement of 20 years is to be ignored—during that period there can be no legal redress.

His Questions for Examination will be prepared in Toronto, and hence Teachers that never attended the Normal School will have more difficulty in solving them than those who have been specially trained. However, if this should elevate the Teacher no one will rejoice more than ourselves.

His compulsory scheme is the worst feature of the whole, and we would refer our readers to the figures of our correspondent J. E. in to-day's issue, to prove the falseness of the Chief Superintendents figures. We would not be understood as opposed to educating the mass—by no means; we say educate every child in Canada; every child in the world if possible. But what we do say is, educate them properly. This merely 20 months at school can never do. At the most, 4 months a year for 5 years in 19 cases out of 20 will scarcely enable the child to read, and if so very poorly, while the child will be in the midst of vice for the rest of the time. We would further ask, does the honest mechanic or the industrious farmer require to be compelled to send his child to school 4 months in the year? Not a bit of it. The law is not for any of them. The law cannot be for any but the vagrant, and the child of the vicious unnatural parent, and therefore we say it is a stain on the character of Canadians generally to enact such a law. But the law will prove so much waste paper, a dead letter, no one will enforce it. Hear the Leader on this matter, an article that should be read by every one. "In our remarks heretofore on this vexed question, we remarked that a compulsory law would be of little value without food and clothing in almost every case in which the law would require to be enforced. This we still assert, and hence we say unless the government will provide these things for those requiring them, they should not dare attempt to compel naked, hungry, and neglected children to appear at school." We say, educate them; but first you must satisfy hunger, again we would quote from the Leader.

But if society may assum to exercise compulsion in the matter of education, it has no right to demand impossibilities. The establishment of public system of education is itself a living protest against the assumption of such a right. It assumes that you cannot fairly command obedience to laws by men who could not possibly become acquainted with their requirements; and it comes in as a preventive of such an anomaly. But impossibilities may take various shapes; and in requiring the attendance at schools of all children of certain ages, you must be careful not to demand what is impossible. Now it is evident that a simple enactment that all children of certain ages should attend school, unaccompanied by any other provision, would in effect order what is impossible of execution. A poor child reduced, from whatever cause, to the necessity of earning, begging or stealing the means of its subsistance, is in no condition to attend to a public school, unless some public provision is made for its physical wants; and to enact that it should do so would only be a cruel mockery of its condition. We have frequently insisted on this point, and we are glad to see that our views are beginning to be widely adopted by others. The Hamilton Times in an article, some parts of which are we think overstrained, makes very judicious observations on this subject.

The practical difficulty of carrying on this system would probably be very great; the chief consisting of the sectarian cry that would be liable to be raised if children were taken from vicious parents with a view of rescuing them from a life of crime. If they were the children of catholic parents, no matter how vile, it would be said they were being taken to a protestant institution for the purpose of being proselytized. The old difficulty of common and separate schools would revive in its worst form, unless some way of obviating it could be found. But it is not merely the vagrant child to whom compulsion would be applied, for besides them there must be large numbers who attend no school at all; there must be large numbers for whom the present common schools would be well enough suited, perhaps the great majority of the non-attendants.—Pauperism, in this country, concentrates in the cities, and is little known in the rural districts. If we are to introduce the principle of compulsion into our public schools, we must accompany it with some provision for the juvenile poor. What form that provision should take is properly a subject of discussion; but whatever may be decided upon compulsion cannot be decreed without some accompanying provision for rendering it possible.

To further prove that we are not alone in our views, we quote from an ably written article on the subject in the Hamilton Evening Times, an influential paper in Hamilton:

"If the welfare of the State demands the education of those vagrant children and only the State can enforce the demand, let it be done, but we claim that the education be such as shall answer the end required. It must be no mere education of the head at a common school for a few hours each day, leaving the heart in Devil's company for the balance of the time and ending in transforming the youth from an uneducated into an educated villain. If the State must peremptorily interfere between parent and child, it must do so for good and all. It must take him away from the parental influence that is so vitally affecting him and give him not merely the arts of reading and writing but the art of earning his own livelihood, and as far as human means can affect such an object, the will to do so. In other words, the schools for vagrant children must not be the common schools of the land, but industrial schools where the idle habits which are the chief curse of the youth shall be overcome, some trade taught him by which he can make his way hone-tly through the world, and such moral and religious instruction superadded to the secular as shall teach him how much better is an honest than a criminal life. Honest labor is the lesson he most needs to to be taught; habits of industry will alone save from a life of crime. Education, or rather educationalists have run mad in their glorification of our system if they think that our common school alone can do this for him in the face of the fact that the spirit of modern secular education, if not hostile to industrial pursuits, are at the least not provocative of them."

UNION SCHOOL REPORT.

Through the courtesy of the Secretary of Board of Trustees, we have been favoured with a reading of the Annual Report of the Board, from which we gather the following items:—

PAYMENTS.

To Principal	$860 00
For Prizes	9 00
School Books and Stationery	12 00
Fuel and other expenses	129 45
	$1010 45

The last item is unsatisfactory; the fuel could not cost one eighth of that sum. The balance went to the Common School Fund, no doubt, and should be shown. It is necessary to appear in this account, however, to show balance.

From the above it will be seen that education per pupil costs at least $20.24—perhaps a fraction more, as 50 being the total number of pupils on the Register, there could hardly be an average attendance of 50, which we have assumed.

From the Annual Report of the state of the Schools in the city of Toronto for 1863, (the latest in our possession) we find that the fee per quarter, for the Grammar School, was $5 per pupil, or $20 a year. But as there are other sources of income, we may fairly presume that Grammar School education in Toronto costs over $20 per pupil.

Visits during the year are reported, none, except those made by the Board, as visiting committees, from month to month.

Total cost of Common School Department $3371 95; average attendance, 302; rate per pupil, nearly $10 94.

Taking the whole School, cost of Grammar School Department, $1010 45; Common School Depart., $3301 26; total, $4311 71; cost per pupil of whole School per annum, $12 25; or if total of school age be considered the basis, the Town pays $4 31 towards every child of school age in the Town. But we presume some of the statistics are only approximations, and then these figures will be so too.

Estimated value of property, $28,000; in Grammar School Report, 24,000. Children of school age in Town, 1000; attending the School, 628, or nearly 63 per cent; number either not attending or at other schools, 372, nearly 37 per cent. If we take into consideration the number (265) attending the Separate School, also private Schools, almost all the children of school age in Town attend some school more or less during the year.

We regret that an error of $4.45 crept into our calculation of "other expenses," which we could not detect, owing to the Report being required before we were through with it; this, however, will not change the results very materially.

RECIPROCITY.

The subject of Reciprocal trade with the United States has been before the public for some time. Many looked forward to the continuance of the treaty although notice had been given for its repeal. The Canadian people have done all that could honorably be done—and some say more too—to obtain a renewal thereof; in this they have been disappointed; yet not a word of complaint is heard unless it be against the Delegates for offering too much. We give below certain documents that enable our readers to understand the offers made, and the unjust demands of our cousins.

For whatever reason, the Americans have certainly been very illiberal in their ultimatum to the Commissioners from the British Provinces. In advance of any official report the New York papers place us in possession of the terms upon which each party proposed to meet the other, and word of the final refusal.

The proposals are in the form of memoranda A. B. & C.

MEMORANDUM A.

Washington, D.C., Feb. 2, 1866.

"The trade between the United States and the British Provinces should, it is believed, under ordinary circumstances, be free in reference to their natural productions; but as internal taxes exceptionally exist in the United States, it is now proposed that the articles embraced in the free list of the Reciprocity Treaty should continue to be exchanged, subject only to such duties as may be equivalent to that internal taxation. It is suggested that both parties may add certain articles to those now in the said list.—With reference to the fisheries and the navigation of the internal waters of the continent, the British Provinces are willing that the existing regulations should continue in effect; but Canada is willing to enter into engagements with the view of improving the means of access to the ocean, provided the assurance be given that the trade of the Western States will not be diverted from its natural channel by legislation; and if the United States are not prepared at present to consider the general opening of their coasting trade, it would appear desirable that, as regards the internal waters of the continent, no distinction should be made between the vessels of the two countries. If the foregoing points be satisfactorily arranged, Canada is willing to adjust her excise duties upon spirits, beer and tobacco, upon the best revenue standard which may be mutually adopted after full consideration of the subject, and if it be desired to treat any other articles in the same way, the disposition of the Canadian Government in to give every facility in their power to prevent illicit trade. With regard to the transit trade, it is suggested that the same regulations should exist on both sides and be defined by law. Canada is also prepared to make her patent laws similar to those of the United States.

MEMORANDUM B.

In reference to the memorandum of the Hon. Mr. Galt and his associates, Hon. Mr. Smith, Hon. Mr. Henry, and the Hon. Mr. Howland, the Committee on Ways and Means, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, are prepared to recommend to the House of Representatives for their adoption a law providing for the continuance of some of the measures embraced in the Reciprocity Treaty, soon to expire, viz:—For the use and privileges as enjoyed now under said treaty in the waters of Lake Michigan, provided the same rights and privileges are conceded to the citizens of the United States by Canada in the waters of the St. Lawrence and its canals, as are enjoyed by British subjects, without discrimination as to tolls and charging rates proportioned to canal distance; also for the free transit of goods, wares and merchandise in bond, under proper regulations, by railroad across the territory of the United States to and from Portland and the Canada line; provided equal privileges shall be conceded to the United States from Windsor, or Port Sarnia, or other western points of departure, to Buffalo or Ogdensburg, or any other points eastward, and that the free ports established in the Provinces shall be abolished; also that the bounties now given to American fishermen shall be repealed, and duties not higher imposed upon fish than those mentioned in Schedule A, providing that all the right of fishing near the shores, existing under the treaty heretofore mentioned, shall be granted and conceded by the United States to the Provinces, and by the Provinces to the United States. It is also further proposed that the following list of articles shall be mutually free, viz.:—Burr millstones, unwrought, cotton and linen rags, firewood, grindstones, rough or unfinished, gypsum, or plaster, unground."

"SCHEDULE A.—Fish—Mackerel, one dollar and fifty cents per barrel; herring, pickled or salted, one dollar per barrel; salmon, two dollars and fifty cents per barrel; shad, two dollars per barrel, all other fish, pickled, one dollar and fifty cents per barrel, provided that any fish in packages other than barrels shall pay in proportion to the rates charged upon similar fish in barrels. All other fish, one-half cent per pound.

"As to the duties which will be proposed upon the other articles included in the treaty, the following are submitted, viz:—Animals, living, of all sorts, twenty per cent. ad valorem; apples and garden fruit and vegetables, ten per cent. ad valorem; barley, fifteen cents per bushel; beans, except vanilla and castor oil, thirty cents per bushel; beef, one cent per pound; buckwheat, ten cents per bushel; butter, four cents per pound; cheese, four cents per pound; corn, Indian, and oats, ten cents per bushel; corn meal, Indian, and oatmeal, fifteen cents per bushel; coal, bituminous, fifty cents per ton; all other coal twenty-five cents per ton; flour, twenty-five per cent. ad valorem; hams, two cents per pound; hay, one dollar per ton; hides, ten per cent. ad valorem; lard, three cents per pound; lumber, pine, round or log, one dollar and fifty cents per one thousand feet; pine, sawed or hewn, two dollars and fifty cents per one thousand feet; planed, tongued, grooved or finished, twenty per cent ad valorem; spruce and hemlock, sawed or hewn, one dollar per one thousand feet; spruce, planed, finished or partly finished, twenty-five per cent. ad valorem; shingle bolts, ten per cent. ad valorem; shingles, twenty per cent. ad valorem; all other lumber of black walnut, chestnut, bass, whitewood, ash, oak, round, hewn, or sawed, twenty per cent. ad valorem; if planed, tongued and grooved or finished, twenty-five per cent. ad valorem; ores, ten per cent. ad valorem; peas, twenty-five cents per bushel; pork, one cent per pound; potatoes, ten cents per bushel; seed, timothy and clover, twenty per cent. ad valorem; trees, plant and shrub, ornamental and fruit, fifteen per cent. ad valorem; tallow, two cents per pound; wheat, twenty cents per bushel."

MEMORANDUM C.

"Washington, Feb. 6, 1866.

"In reference to the memorandum received from the Committee of Ways and Means, the Provincial delegates regret to be obliged to state that the proposals therein contained in regard to the commercial relations between the two countries is not such as they can recommend for the adoption of the respective legislatures. The imposts which it is proposed to lay upon the productions of the British Provinces on their entry into the markets of the United States are such as in their opinion will be in some cases prohibitory, and will certainly seriously interfere with the natural course of trade. These imposts are so much beyond what the delegates conceive to be equivalent for the internal taxation of the United States, that they are reluctantly brought to the conclusion that the committee no longer desire the trade between the two countries to be carried on upon the principles of reciprocity. With the concurrence of the British Minister at Washington, they are, therefore, obliged respectfully to decline to enter into the engagement suggested in the memorandum; but the present views of the United States may soon be so modified as to permit of the productions of the two countries upon a more liberal basis."

Destructive Fire in Port Hope.

On Sunday morning, about four o'clock, a fire broke out in the building on Walton street, owned by C. Quinlan, Esq. The fire is supposed to have originated in T. R. & C. A. Hagerman's grocery store. The engines were promptly on the spot, but were useless, owing to their works being frozen up.—Messrs. Hagerman, grocers; Mr. O'Donnell, bookseller; Mr. Hoffman, tobacconist; Mr. Coots, boot and shoe maker; and Mr. Stitch, tailor, were the sufferers. O'Donnell and Hoffman succeeded in saving the greater part of their stock, although in a damaged condition. The others saved nothing. The buildings were insured, but the policy had run out about two weeks previously. Hagerman's stock was insured for $2,500, and O'Donnell's for $800. The rest were uninsured. A large brick block, also owned by Mr. Quinlan, was very near sharing the fate of the others, and sustained considerable damage. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Modification of the Cattle Law.

In the House of Representatives on Monday last the committee on commerce reported a bill, which was passed, amending the act prohibiting the importation of cattle, by giving the Secretary of the Treasury power to suspend its operations in cases where it will not tend to the introduction of infectious diseases among cattle. The President is also authorised to declare the act inoperative whenever in his judgement the importation of cattle will not be injurious. Punishment is also provided for offenders against this law.

To Correspondents.

If "One from the Country" will abridge, be less personal and be more to the point, we will most gladly insert his communication next week. It came too late for this week's issue.

We regret that a portion of the manuscript of our correspondence J. E. was in some way mislaid.

His Excellency the Governer-General with his brother, Colonel Hon. R. Monck, Military Secretary, and Captain Pemberton, A. D. C., accompanied by Rev. Dr. Lundy, of Canada, attended divine service at Trinity Church New York, on Sunday last. His Excellency and suite occupied the pew which was assigned to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, when he visited New York in 1860. In the afternoon, His Excellency and suite attended the service at the Chapel of the University.

PETERBOROUGH RACES.

The winter meeting of the Peterborough Race Club came off on the ice on the Little Lake, on Tuesday and Wednesday. The weather was all that could be desired; the course, which, by the way, is really a splendid one, happened to be in not very good condition the first day, owing to the drifting of snow the previous night. The managers deserve a great deal of credit, however, for having it so very well prepared, and for the arrangements generally.

A large number of the people in town, and also a great many from a distance, were present to witness the sport. Mixed promiscuously through the great crowd were an unusual number of "roughs." This Town and Ashburnham is unfortunately at the present time the temporary residings of a number of those unmitigated scoundrels; they represent the scum of Yankee cities, and were in full furce on the race course. It would be hard in any collection of people to find a greater variety—thieves, pick-pockets, black legs, and pugilists.

FIRST DAY.

At about 2 p. m., the horses were called together for the first race, which was a trot, in harness, mile heats, best three in five, for a purse of $20. There were three entries: Thos. Beaty's "Shamrock," J. Simpson's "Otonabee Maid," and J. Martin's "Queen" After the first heat the "Otonabee Maid" was ruled out for not being able to comply with the rules of the Club; consequently the two remaining horses had to compete for it. "Shamrock" was the winner in three straight heats. The following is the score:

Shamrock	2	1	1
Otonabee Maid	1 ruled out.
Queen	3	2	2

The second race was also a trotting race, for a purse of $30 for all horses owned in Peterborough, Victoria, Northumberland, and Durnham. There were six horses entered, viz:—Casy's "Lady Curling," Henderson's "Brown George," Lipsy's "Pin Tail," Simpson's "Otonabee Maid," Spry's "Spry Mare," and Brownham's "Honest John." The number of horses and the beautiful start, created a good deal of excitement, which gradually died away as the horses got down to their work. "Honest John broke up at the first quarter, which apeared to be infectious, as they were all immediately on a gallop, except Spry Mare, who took the lead and kept it steadily to the winning post. The second heat was also won by the same animal, Honest John close at her heels; this heat was more closely contested than the former. Third heat—Pin Tail subsides, leaving the honors and emoluments in the hands of the other five; at the start the Otonabee Maid took the lead, but was soon overhauled and passed by Honest John, who won the heat, Spry coming in second, Lady Curling third, and the Otonabee Maid fourth. The next was a false start; they were called back, but did not obey the summons. A good many trotted the course, Spry Mare came in ahead, and claimed the race. The Judges could not see it in that light, and called for another start; Spry refused to go, and Honest John was started and trotted over the course alone. The race was not decided, but was to have been trotted next morning by Spry Mare and Honest John.

The third and last race of the day was a running race for a purse of $30, mile heats, best three in five, which was contested by J. Simpson's "Maggy Simpson," H Grimshaw's "Clip," and N. Grimshaw "Flower of the Valley," The last named won the race in three straight heats, but was closely followed by Maggy Simpson. The following is the score:

Clip	2	3	3
Flower of the Valley	1	1	1

This race, the best and prettiest of the lot, finished the day.

SECOND DAY.

Martin's mare, "Queen," was the winner of the first race, $15.

"Spry Mare," Port Hope, winner of the second race, $100.

Simpson's Mare, "Otonabee Maid," was winner of the third race, $10.—Rep.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Monday, Feb. 19th, 1866.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Present—His worship the Mayor, Messrs. Toole, Wilson, Doherty, Ewing, Millar, Cox Hamilton, Wrighton, Stewnson and Ormond.

The Minuter of last meeting were read and confirmed.

A Report from the committe on Fire was submitted, read and adopted. It recommended the appointment of Edwin Poole, as Chief Engineer, and Robert Walton, as assistant Engineer of the Fire Company for the present year; and also recommended the usual allowance to the members of the Company.

SMITH COUNCIL.

Smith, February 19th, 1865.

The Council met—all the members present.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The tenders received for the offices of Assessor and Collector were as follows:—

Garritt J. Galvin, for the Assessorship $40.

Matthew Waram, for the Collectorship, $48.

Thomas Hutchison, for both offices, $160.

A By-law appointing Garritt J. Galvin Assessor, and Matthew Waram Collector, received its several readings and passed.

The Auditors' Report was read and adopted, and the Clerk directed to have the same printed in sheet form for distribution among the rate payers.

The Arbitrators appointed to arbitrate between the Corporation of Smith and Harvey and Jno. W. Moore for damages received by a horse the property of said Jno. W. Moore while travelling on a crossway on the 12th con. line, Smith, presented their award allowing Mr. Moore $75 damages, he the said Mr. Moore to pay $17 towards costs.

The Reeve was directed to issue his order on the Treasurer in favor of Mr. Moore for said sum.

A new road division was established commencing between lots 24 and 25 in the 11th con. line, thence east on said line to the line between lots 28 and 29, and Wm. Nicholls appointed Overseer.

Andrew Bredin made application to have the road between lots 25 and 29 in the 11th con. located in its proper place.

The Clerk was directed to advertize, in the manner provided by law, the passing of a By-law to establish a road on the side line between lots 28 and 29 in the 11th con.

A By-law was passed providing for the appointmen of Overseer of Highways, Poundkeeper and Fence viewers.

A Communication from the Clerk of the Township of Harvey, requesting a settlement between the Municipalities, was read.

The Clerk was directed to inform the Clerk of Harvey that the Council of Smith requests a deputation from the Council of Harvey to meet them at the Town Hall, Smith, on Wednesday, the 28th inst. for the purpose of making arrangements for the disposition of the property of the late union, as provided for by statute.

A petition was read from some of the inhabitants of the Village of Lakefield and neighborhood, praying that the timber growing on the south of the 8th con. line at the rear of lots 26 and 27 in the 7th con. be cut in conformity with the provisions of a certain By-law of Council.

The Clerk was directed to notify the owners of said lots to cut the timber growing thereon in the manner provided for by said By-law.

The Council then adjourned till Wednesday, the 28th instant.

MONAGHAN TOWNSHIP COUNCIL.

Monaghan, February 17, 1866.

The Council met at ten o'clock. All the members present.

Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

The following petitions were received and read:—

A petition signed by S. J. Carver and four others, praying that their statute labour might be wholly confined to the line between the 11th and 12th concessions, part of which very much required repairs, and further, stating that they had prepared a By-Law far regulating the License for selling liquors for the present year was read, received and acopted.

A petition from W. S. Scott, signed by thirty-two rate-payers of the Municipality, recommending him as a fit and proper person to receive a tavern license for present year.

A petition signed by Joseph Hunter and sixteen others, directing the attention of the Council to the distressed condition of Patrick Keefe, and praying that some relief would be given to assist him through the present severe weather. On the motion of Mr. Collins, seconded by Mr. Robson, a barrel of flour was to be sent, and an order given on the Treasurer for the amount.

BY-LAWS.

The By-laws to appoint Pound keepers and Fence viewers; to define the duties of Path-masters and other Township officers with regard to statute labour; to define the amount to be paid for tavern licenses (twenty-five dollars); and for fixing and defining the duties of the Inspector of licenses, received their final readings.

A By-law appointing Path-masters for the several Road Divisions in the Municipality received their readings and had the 15th Rule temporarily suspended for that purpose.

Mr. Bothwell addressed the Council at some length respecting school matters in his Section, when a very desultory conversation ensued, during which several of the members expressed their opinion on the subject, all wishing for an early settlement of the differences so unhappily existing. On the motion of Mr. Collins, seconded by Mr. Robson, the Council recommended the Rate payers of No. 4, School Section, to use such means as they might deem best to induce an amicable feeling in order to work their Section in union with Cavan as formerly.

The auditors, Messrs. R. W. Shaw and John McIntosh, gave in their report. The Council finally audited the accounts and directed the Clerk to have the usual number of copies printed for distribution.

The finances of the township appear to have been well husbanded during the past year—only $42 for roads and bridges, and $36.82½ for charities. No tax was levied for township purposes, and still a balance of $395.79 lies in the Treasurer's hands to the credit of the municipality.

Orders for the sum of $2 each were given to the auditors for their services.

The Assessor was limited to the 10th of April to have the assessment roll given into the Clerk.

Should the Inspector of Licenses report favorably, Mr. Scott to have a tavern license for the year.

Council adjourned to Saturday, 5th day of May, at 10 o'clock, a. m., then to meet as a Court of Revision.—Com.

THE LATE SCHOOL CONVENTION.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—The important subjects introduced to the consideration of the people by Dr. Ryerson, on Wednesday last, owing to the short time allotted for the discussion, were not sufficiently ventilated; nor was there anything like a fair expression of opinion obtained, especially on the subject of compulsory education and Township School Boards. It was a cause of regret that the Dr. was so short a time with us, as he might have assisted in removing some of the objections that were raised against the matters submitted to us. The most objectionable topic to me, was the one on compulsory attendance at School, and it was also the keenest opposed and advocated at the convention. It is chiefly upon this subject I wish to say a few words, with your leave. On this as on all other questions argued, if certain masters are granted as premises the sequence is easily arrived at; but in the argument used by the Dr and those who concurred in his views, the premises are faulty in several particulars. For instance, he says the parent has no right to deny his child an education. I ask then who has the right to compel the parent to send his child to school? Not the State,—not a soul. Then the parent has the right to keep him from school. This is irrefragable.—When he says the parent has no right to starve, murder or mutilate his child, he says what is correct. The law denies him that right, and punishes him if he dares to infringe upon that law. It is clear from this simple way of putting the question that the conclusion arrived at by the coercive party is fallacious. But says the Dr. "Society has a right to defend itself from a vicious, incendiary and dangerous class," and therefore it is proposed to alter the law so as to drive the parent of the control of his child for at least four months in a year, unless he sends him to some school. If the advocates of this measure would show me that the "dangerous class" is confined to the uneducated, they would have a strong argument in favor of their views. But, until they do, I beg respectfully to deny their conclusion. Do not our newspapers daily teach us that every form of crime is enacted by the educated as well as by the unlearned—that no deed, however appalling, but is perpetrated by the educated classes. In fact, the large majority of "fearful tragedies," "extensive forgeries," "crim cons," "scandals," &c., &c., are enacted by this latter class; whilst the uneducated are chiefly chargeable with the minor crimes of "assault," "larceny," &c., &c. Is it not an uncontroverrible fact that a mere intellectual training, without a moral or religious education, will not restrain from vice? Let then the advocates of the elevation of the "vicious class," provide this religious training, otherwise the more teaching them to read write and all the other branches of a common school education, is no guarantee of their reclamation By all means educate them intellectually, morally and religiously, both for their own sake, as well as for the sake of society, but let it be done not by coercion, but by suasion. The parents of the class we are speaking of are taxed for the school, and compelled to pay, whether they send their children or not; but let one act of compulsion ensue. If the advocates of this compulsory education are consistent, they must go a step further, and insist also that these "Arabs" shall be sent to Church at least the four months they are to go to school. I am sure the most ardent advocates of this coercive measure are not prepared to go for this. But look at it fairly. What is all the common knowledge that a child can learn, compared to a moral and religious education? Which will effectually cure him of his vicious propensities—the former or the latter? Why so anxious about mending the law to punish the parent for neglecting the lesser evil, and we take no notice of the greater? But Dr. Ryerson says:—"It is desirable that some religious instruction should be combined with secular, and hence the teaching of the Lord's Prayer and the Ten Commandments was embraced in the ordinary system of education." This is nothing but a make-believe. How can children who attend school at home have the advantage of this "religious instruction?" If the Dr. calls this a religious education, he is very easily satisfied. Again he says:—"The statistics of all countries go to show that ignorance is the parent of crime. In the City of Toronto, during the past year, out of 800 criminals only 65 could read or write." I quote from the report of the Dr.'s speech in the Review. A table before me gives the number of prisoners confined in the Toronto City Jail during 1865, and their offences, education, &c., from which I transcribe as follows:

Total committed	1445
Number who could neither read nor write,	490
Read only	254
Read and write imperfectly	657
Read and write well	40
Superior education	4

A New York paper thus refers to the Concert Saloons in that city:—"Number of places, 223; number of girls, 1191; visitors per day, 29950; Receipts per week $31564. There are nearly 1200 daughters of perdition, and their number is daily increasing; their dupes and victims are counted by thousands. The philanthropist and Christian would be pained and even men of the world would be astonished at learning the class and character of the customers of these dissipated places. What seems the best, most cultivated, and highest circles of society, has more than its share of representatives among the frequenters of shameful haunts of dissipation and debauchery."

From the above exhibit, compiled from the Jail Registry for 1865, it appears that nearly two-thirds of the prisoners had some education, and but about one-third were without any. This is quite different from the Dr.'s figures. From the statistics of the Peterbotough Jail, we find that out of 59 prisoners only 11 are returned as unable to read or write. And among the frequenters of the Concert Saloons referred to above, we find that the educated classes have more than their share of representatives.

It is plain from the above statistics and from others that could be adduced, that a mere school education is not a preventative against crime. The "vicious class" has its fair share—in fact, more than its share of the educated, and what is required for society to defend itself from this "vicious, incendiary and dangerous class," is moral and religious training. It is absurd to suppose that learning to read, write, or cipher, will necessarily lead to virtue. In educating the individual the you invest him with a power that he may use for a bad purpose as well as a good one. It is desirable that every individual should have a common school education. The State has gone a long way to secure this; it has taxed the entire property for this purpose and some think it has gone too far. There are certainly many hard cases of taxation under this imperious law; but let it not go further to attempt coercing a parent to send his child to school whether he sees fit or not to do so. If such a measure becomes law in Canada, it requires no prophet to predict that it will be inoperative and ut

THE FENIAN BOY'S HARE-O-O.

Ye Flag Shall Wave.

The Shamrock flag shall wave aloft,
Without the Saxon rose;
And Ireland's flag shall welcome friends—
We shall defy its foes.

We'll catch John Bull we'll shake him up
We'll make him cry ta-hoo;
For och! the Fenian Boys are up—
The Fenian Boys hurr-o-o.

Ye John Bull has Bleedabliad.

Old Ireland's wrongs shall be redressed,
Its blessings on the day;
Back t' that cheer! Och! by my soul!
John Bull has run away!

We'll catch, etc.

Ye Saxon Boste.

Kilmore we'll see the Saxon boste
Trespassing on our sod;
Kilmaine you'll see the Irishmen
A-groaning 'neath the bod.

We'll catch, etc.

Ye Childer', etc.

Each day we'll live upon the best,
Each night have happy dreams;
The childer shall have butter milk—
Potein shall flow in streams.

We'll catch, etc.

Ye Grand Climax.

Redad, ye'll toast ould Ireland yet;
Come, boys! drink, boys, wid we,
We've knock'd her chains to smithereens—
Ould Ireland now is free!

Come, boys, etc.

Signs of Cold Weather.

Punch notes the following of a cold snap. It is probably sharp winter weather;—

When you think that you don't know whether the first bell has been rung or not.

When it strikes you that your watch is at least ten minutes fast; so if you get up when the minute hand is "at a quarter to" you'll be in capital time.

That if you could only be taken out of bed to be washed and dressed in a second by machinery, you would'nt mind getting up.

That another five minute's sleep will make you all right for the day.

That it's three minutes to the half-hour, and you'll get up exactly at the half-hour.

That 'tis just one minute past the half-hour, so you'll get up exactly at the thirty-five minutes.

That as five minutes won't make much difference, say, get up at the quarter punctually.

The following considerations will also lead you to the conclusion that the winter has come at last:

That you can't get up without hot water.

That you don't think that the water is quite hot.

That he had better bring a little more water, please; and take care its quite hot.

That you can't get up until your clothes are all ready for you.

That a little snooze while James is bringing the clothes (and while he fetches some more hot wate) will do you all the good in the world.

That when you do get up you won't be a second dressing.

That you'll get up in exactly two minutes from now.

That (the two minutes having passed) you'll just settle what you're going to do to-day, and then get up.

That, if that's the first bell, you've plenty of time; and if it's the second, it's no good hurrying up now, as you're late anyhow.

Mr. J. T. Fields, of the firm of Ticknor & Fields, publishers in Boston, is said to have a wonderful memory and knowledge of English literature. The London Review tells this anecdote of him:—"One day, at a dinner party, a would-be wit, thinking to puzzle Mr. Fields, and make sport for the company, announced prior to Mr. Fields' arrival that he had himself written some poetry, and intended to submit it to Mr. Fields as Southey's. At the proper moment, therefore, after the guests were seated, he began; 'Friend Fields, I have been a good deal exercised of late, trying to find out in Southey's poems his well known lines running thus: (repeating the lines he had composed) Can you tell us about what time he wrote them?' 'I do not remember to have met them before,' replied Mr. Fields, 'and there were only two periods in Southey's life when such lines could possibly have been written by him.' 'When were those?' gleefully asked the witty questioner 'Sometime,' said Mr. Fields, 'about that early period of his existence when he was having the measles and cutting his first teeth; or near the close of his life, when his brain had softened and he had fallen into idiocy. The versification belongs to the measles period, but the expression clearly betrays the idiotic one.'—The questioner smiled faintly, but the company roared.

A young Englishman, while at Naples, was introduced at an assembly of one of the first ladies by a Neapolitan gentleman. While he was there his snuff box was stolen from him. The next day, being at another house, he saw a person taking snuff out of his box. He ran to his friend. "There," said he, "that man in blue with gold embroidery is taking snuff out of my box that was stolen from me yesterday. Do you know him? Is he not a sharper?" "Take care," said the other, that man is of the first quality." "I do not care for his quality," said the Englishman, "I must have my snuff box again. I'll go and ask him for it." "Pray," said his friend "be quiet and leave it to me to get back your box." Upon this assurance the Englishman went away, after inviting his friend to dine with him the next day. He accordingly came, and as he entered, "There," said he, "I have brought you your snuff box." "Well, how did you obtain it?" "Why," said the Neapolitan nobleman, "I did not wish to make any noise about it, therefore I picked his pocket of it."

A negro about dying was told by his minister that he must forgive a certain darkey against whom he seemed to entertain very bitter feelings. Yes, sah, he replied, if I dies I forgive dat nigga; but if I get well dat nigga must take care.

Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering.

SEWING MACHINE!

COMPANY,

627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLE is made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses; thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary

One Needle and Two Threads are only Used.

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indispensible for Button-holes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, shaded or chine silks, and produces a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste.

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c., &c., it is indispensable; it is also admitted to be of great value, to other branches as it Brands, Embroiders, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c., &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleaker, where Instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P. S.—A novel patented BUTTON-HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

Machine, $125.00; Button-Hole Cutter, $5.00.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs Devaugh & Co, No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches Chains, Rings, Barrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate, showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $3, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

To Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

☞ Write your name and address distinctly and say only what is necessary.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMETS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old heavy form of stringing by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Dunton is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfield,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Baril,
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry,	Charles Fradel

Mr. EGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes. They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal versimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5—Upon a careful examination of Dunton Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilliancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr S. B. Dutton, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection as the instrument thus has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN

SEWING MACHINES.

EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB. 14th, 1860.

Salesrooms, { 536 Broadway, New York, / 252 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles of mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shuttle stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nainsook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it aim at impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply themselves with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

But in a more especial manner do we elicit the patronage of

Merchant Tailors,	Corset Makers,
Coach Makers,	Gaiter Fitters,
Hoop Skirt Manufacturers,	Shoe Binders,

LLOYD'S GREAT TOPOGRAPHICAL RAILWAY and COUNTY MAP of ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND and WALES —Six feet large, mounted and varnished; cost $100,000 and four years time; was finished July 28, and is the best map ever made since the world was formed; shows 200,000 cities, towns, villages, market places, post offices, castles, country seats and 38,000 railways and railway stations, with the distance between each station marked plainly, and the official name and total length of each railway in actual operation up to June, 1865, is given. The railway stations are all numerically and alphabetically arranged. The lakes, rivers, hills and mountains are exhibited, with the altitude of each in feet, made from trigonometrical surveys by our own engineers, draughtsmen and Photographers sent to England expressly to make a superior map of that country; the whole engraved on steel, colored superbly in counties, in united and varnished. Price 6 shillings sterling ($2). No map at $10 can compare to this one. Canvassers throughout the world wanted. Also men, with a small capital, to go to Canada, Chicago, Cincinnati, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, East and West Indies, Australia and California, to open offices. Can make a fortune wholesaling this and other maps to sub-agents. Eighty thousand copies of this map were subscribed for in England before going to press, as can be shown by our agents letters to us. Ten new maps now under way

The Great English Remedy!

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever, and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorised Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

Fenian Independence.

The Fenians are rapidly progressing toward the achievement of Irish independence. Quite a number of Irishmen who were lately chivying cigs for the means to pay their weekly board, have been provided with elegant mansions and lifted into absolute independence and freedom. But lately they were ground under the heel of the Saxon, which, being interpreted from the original Finnigan tongue, signifies the landlady. Now they bid defiance to the Saxon with the pride of becoming a Fenian, cigars are smoked and whose patent leather is worn is the cause of Irish liberty. Who shall say if this process goes on, and one by one the Fenian leaders shall be lifted into independence, that ultimately the same freedom which the contributions of the chambermaids have given to the followers, and the entire Irish people will be made independent by the voluntary contritions of each other. Such at least appears to be the plan. The Irish are too generous a people to impose upon each other, and too shrewed to be imposed on by anybody. They would not adopt this plan of freeing Irishmen, if experience had not proved that it works to a charm. Is not O'Mahony free? Is not Roberts free? Is not Killian free? Last their bands of music and hotel bills unpaid. So far as they are concerned the hated Saxon is already expelled, and by reasonably prompt contributions can be kept expelled for several months to come. Let them, the bold Fenian war go on. Ambulances and artillery will keep to the rear and chambermaids and music will still maintain the front. Possible there may be a Fenian who fears to meet death, but is there one that shrinks from a contribution? Poor in the contributions, therefore, and by one, beginning with the leaders, and working gradually downwards, the Irish people will be pleased in the condition if not of independence, at least of competency.—Chicago Tribune.

A Horrible Tragedy in Florida.

The most heartrending occurrence we have ever been called upon to chronicle, took place at Monticello, the 9th ult. A young lady of education and refinement has been gradually losing her mind. On Tuesday night at about ten o'clock she retired to her room. An hour later, a youth who was boarding in the same house having occasion to pass the lady's door, heard her offering up to the Throne of Grace an unusual fervent prayer; and pausing to listen imagined he smelt burning rags.

Immediately notifying the gentleman of the house and family, rushed to the door of the young lady's room, burst the door open, when, oh! horror of horrors! there sat the maniac in the centre of a feather-bed enveloped in the flames, while with hands clasped together, she petitioned the God of heaven and earth. Upon entering the room the rescuers heard a voice, in tones of rapture issue from the flames: "Oh! ain't this glorious! Ain't I a martyr!"

The fire was promptly extinguished, when it was found the poor lady must have been burning for some time; for from her waist down every vestige of clothing was destroyed, notwithstanding she was dressed in woolen fabric, and had on a broadcloth cloak. The character of clothing she wore was all that protected the upper portion of her body and limbs, which were baked brown, and notwithstanding, we are assured she did not suffer pain. She was conveyed to her home, and by this doubtless has passed to that land where the weary find rest.

From all the circumstances attending this truly lamentable tragedy, it is evident, the unfortunate maniac premeditated her own destruction. She moved all her clothes from her own home, destroyed her ambrotypes and letters, and after all was ready, set fire to her clothing, (hanging in a wardrobe in her room,) and thus deliberately igniting herself, jumped into bed.—Quitman (Ga.) Banner.

The Washington Negotiations.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Herald writes as follows, under date of the 11th:—

"Since the departure of the Canadian delegation it has transpired that Sir Frederick Bruce is immensely pleased with the denouement.—His chief fear appears to have been that such trade facilities would have been accorded the British provinces as to build up an identity of interest, and thus weaken their attachment to and dependence on the home government. It is also suspected that our refusal to establish any equitable regulations for exchange of products will lead to confederation between the provinces for self-protection, and thus delay the operation of such natural laws as tend to their absorption by the United States. It is furthermore, coming to be understood that the prevailing objections to a just system of trade regulations between this country and Canada are more political than commercial, and are almost solely inspired by England's perfidious behaviour during the war. When time has softened this asperity and the commercial advantages of international trade are better understood, some reciprocity treaty will be a necessity."

Marshal Canrobert Reviewing the British Troops.—At Compiegne, some two or three years back, Marshal Canrobert related a fact which redounds to his credit. At a review of the British Army in the Crimea, the Duke of Cambridge, who was to have inspected the troops, observing the Field Marshal approaching with his staff, requested him to assist, and to take the right, whereupon the Marshal acquiesced. When they came to the drooping of the colors, Canrobert's blood thrilled in his veins at seeing the names of several of our victories over the French; however having undertaken the task of reviewing our troops he accomplished the arduous and painful duty imposed upon him, and went down the line without evincing the slightest emotion. When he related this incident there were several general officers present, some of whom ventured to expostulate. The Marshal said, "There is no use in expostulating and endeavoring to conceal the fact; but those victories inscribed upon the colors were won by British troops against us."—Capt. Gronow's Last recollections.

Heavy Debt.—When the debt which the American people have incurred in their efforts to subjugate the Southern Confederacy is spoken of, we are apt to forget, that, in addition to the general Federal debt, nearly three thousand millions, each of the States incurred large debts, the burdens of which they are called upon to bear by direct taxation. The following are the figures as furnished to the Committee on War debts: Maine, $13,600,000; New Hamshire, $18,800,000; Vermont, $8,700,000; Massachusetts, $24,000,000; Rhode Island, $6,500,000; Connecticut, $17,000,000; New York, $111,000,000; New Jersey, $6,700,000; Pennsylvania $54,000,000; Delaware, $1,100,000; Maryland, $8,000,000; West Virginia, $2,000,000; Ohio $65,000,000; Indiana, $2,500,000; Illinois, estimated, $3,000,000; Wisconsin, $12,200,00; Minnesota, $2,500,000; Missouri, $9,500,000; Kentucky, $16,000,000. An aggregate of $414,400,0001. It will be seen that the State war debt of Ohio is equal to that of Canada, and the State war debt of New York is over two-thirds more. These are some of the beauties of the war of subjugation.

The Titusville Herald says that "during the progress of a conflagration at Pithole, on the 6th, a very astonishing circumstance occurred. There are two water wells on the hillside, about fifty feet above Holliden street. Several parties were engaged in pumping water and throwing it upon the fire, when it was discovered that the flames were increased instead of diminished by the application. Upon examination it was found that one of the wells of water had been exhausted, and the pump was yielding a stream of pure oil. The operation was continued, and, when our informant left, the well was producing at the rate of 100 barrels per day.

The Dublin correspondent of the London Times, draws the following rose-colored picture of the state of Ireland:—"Ireland enters the year in 1866 in better circumstances and with brighter prospects than she experienced for many years. There is a steady improvement in the condition of the farmers, who receive good prices for their produce, and are enabled for the most part to meet their engagements with punctuality. There has been during the past year a considerable diminition in the number of small farmers, and the land is gradually passing into the hands of men who have the means of making it productive. There is no cry of distress from any part of the country.

The opposition to Confederation in Nova Scotia is wearing out, and some of the journals hitherto bitterly hostile are calling for another Convention to arrange terms of Union.—The anti-press probably begin to find out that the people are in advance of them and that it is not safe to persist longer in their opposition to that which the people recognize as the true policy for the British North American provinces.

The recently terrible shipping disaster continues the leading theme of English journals. The weather continues stormy. The steamer London which foundered at sea, was valued at £85,000 sterling, and her cargo was insured for £130,000 sterling.

Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein.

We gather from the German papers the following notices of Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, the future husband of Princess Helena:—

According to the Gotha Almanac, the highest authority on such matters, Prince Christian was born on the 22nd of January, 18—, so that during his stay at Osborne he has just celebrated his thirty fifth birthday. He is the second son of Duke Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, who is still alive, but who has resigned in favor of his eldest son, Duke Fredrick. His early years were spent at the Castle of Augustenburg, in the island of Alsen, where the father possessed large estates, celebrated both for the fertility of their soil and the beauty of their scenery. No cloud at that time seemed to threaten the happiness of the Ducal family; and under Dr. Steffens, now Professor at the University of Basle, Prince Christian, with his brother and sisters, received a careful education. Danish was spoken in the Duke's family almost as much as German, and the young Prince soon acquired a mastery not only of these two languages but likewise of French and English. Political events, which from the year 1840 began to assume great importance in Schleswig-Holstein, were not allowed to interfere with the studies of the young princes, although they had to accompany their father to Schleswig whenever the meetings of the Estates required the presence of the Duke. In 1848, however, the quiet family circle of Augustenburg was broken up.—Prince Christian, though only seventeen years of age, followed the example of his older brother and served as a cavalry officer in the campaigns of 1848, 1849 and 1850. In 1852, when the Schleswig-Holstein army was delivered by Austria and Prussia, Prince Christian had to share the exile of his family. Together with his elder brother he went, in 1852, to the University of Bonn, where he attended chiefly the lectures of Dahlman and Moritz Arndt. It was here that Prince Christian met the young Prince of Prussia, who has ever since remained his faithful friend.

After leaving the University the two Princes of Schleswig-Holstein travelled for some time in France and Italy. At Rome, in particular, they made a protracted stay, and devoted themselves to the study of Roman antiquities, under the intelligent guidance of Dr Karl Lorentzen, the learned editor of Vitruvius. After their return to Germany, Prince Christian decided on entering the Prussian army. He first joined a regiment of Cuirassiers, and afterwards the Cuban regiment of Guards. Like his father, whose stud was one of the most famous in all Germany, Prince Christian soon became one of the leading members of the Jockey Club of Northern Germany. He even contributed to a sporting—or, as the Germans call it, hipp logical—journal, which was published under the title of The Stour.

In 1864 he again saw active service, and took part in the occupation of the Island of Alsen by the Prussians. When Count Bismarck, after defending at the Conference of London, the rights of Duke Frederick, concluded the Treaty of Vienna, and disclosed the ulterior objects of Prussia, or at all events his own policy, with regard to the Elbe Duchies, Prince Christian, although more of an officer than a politician, felt it due to his brother to resign his active service. He remained, however, a Prussian officer till the conduct of Gen Manteuffel, the Prussian Governor of Schleswig, towards his elder brother, and the approval of the conduct by the organs of Count Bismark, left him no choice but to send in his definite resignation. He is, therefore, no longer in the Prussian service, and, to judge from the remarks of certain official papers, his marriage with an English Princess is anything but welcome to those at present in authority at Berlin.—Times.

The Dog Act of last Session.

Among the number of laws assented to at last session of Parliament, perhaps that relating to dogs, and which is now in force, may be worthy of notice, especially to our farming readers. We therefore subjoin a synopsis:—

Clause I.—There shall be levied a tax of one dollar upon every dog.

II.—Assessors to ascertain the number of dogs and enter the same in a list, with the name of the owners, and the amount of tax.

III.—When required to do so by the assessor, the owner must deliver to the assessor a written description of every dog owned by the party applied to, under a penalty of $5. A false description will incur a like penalty.

IV.—Assessors to make out a duplicate of the dog lists with the name of owners and amount of tax. Collectors to be furnished with such lists signed by the Assessors, and Collectors are bound to levy the amounts.

V.—When the tax is collected the money is to be handed over by the collectors to the Clerk or Treasurer of the Municipality.

VI.—The money thus collected shall form a fund for the payment of damage done to sheep by dogs. The overplus to form part of the assets of the Munic pality.

VII.—The owner of any dog killing sheep to be held liable, even although he has had no notice of the propensity of his dog to kill sheep.

VIII.—The owner of any sheep or lamb killed by dogs may apply to two Justices of the Peace, who are to examine witnesses, and certify to the damage sustained.

IX.—Such certificate to be prima facie evidence in any suit the injured party may bring against the owner of the dog, provided the latter received notice of the case before being inquired into by the Justices of the Peace.

X.—If the injured party fail to discover the owner of the dog or dogs which the damage was done, he must make affidavit and leave the Justices certificate and affidavit with the Clerk of the Council, who is to lay the case before the Municipal Council at its next sitting.

XI.—If the Council be satisfied that the owner of the dog or dogs cannot be discovered they shall order the Treasurer to pay the damage from the "dog fund."

XII.—The injured party to repay the money back to the Municipality should he discover the owner of the dog, and recover damage from him for the injury done to the sheep.

XIII.—Any person may kill a dog which he sees chasing, worrying or wounding sheep, unless the dog be so employed by the permission of the owner of the sheep or his servant.

XIV.—On notice being given the owner or possessor of a dog doing damage to sheep, if notified of the fact, must kill or cause to be killed, the dog, within forty-eight hours after such notice has been given, or forfeit $2 50, and a further sum of $1 50 for every forty-eight hours thereafter, until the dog shall be killed, unless it can be proved that it was not in the power of the owner to kill the dog.

XV.—On complaint to the Clerk of the Municipality of any penalty imposed having been incurred, the Clerk shall sue in the name of his office for the penalty, and when recovered place it to the credit of the "dog fund."

XVI.—Persons having dogs twenty days in their possession to be deemed the owners thereof and held liable.

Watching the Frontier.—We take the following from the Niagara Mail: "We are pleased to know that the American government has taken the necessary precautions to put a stop to Fenian and other raids which may be attempted on this Province by giving instructions to the officers stationed at Fort Niagara to be on the alert and fire upon miscreants who may make any attempt at a raid on this side of the river. The other side of the river is regularly patrolled by efficient guards, and should any attempted raids take place the parties concerned will have a warm reception both back and front."

Heroes and England's Champion.—We hear that Heenan has again challenged England's Champion for a very heavy sum, but whether the challenge will be accepted or not we cannot say, negotiations are still pending, and should it come to a battle, our advice to all parties concerned is to be well supplied with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," the finest thing for bruises out, it soon cures sprains, and flesh wounds, and relieves pain almost immediately. Price 25 cents per bottle. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

THE HORSE.

"Of the great number of animals under the control of man, the horse is unquestionably the most serviceable;" but is not strange that so many who own horses, and who are dependent on their labor for a living, should neglect to give them that care and attention which their own interests no less than the safety and comfort of the horse demands. The best medicine for horses is "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine;" of this there can be no doubt—it is safe and easily given.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY.

Prescott, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence to its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

New Map

OF

Peterborough and Ashburnham.

THE undersigned beg to announce that their New Map of the Town of Peterboro' and of the Village of Ashburnham, is now complete and ready for publication.

This Map has been compiled with great care from the original registered plans and surveys, and its entire accuracy secured not only by those means, but by actual survey and careful admeasurement. In the two corporations named, not only is every Lot given and its subdivisions where divided, but the names of the owners, as contained in the last Assessment Roll, are neatly printed on each lot. All public buildings, manufactories, stores, and private residences, together with the existing and proposed railways, streets, mill-races, water-courses dams, bridges, &c, are laid down from actual measurement. The built-up portion of the town is so colored as to distinguish at a glance the materials used, whether of wood, stone or brick; while the whole is finished in a superior manner, so as to be both useful and ornamental, in securing which neither pains nor expense have been spared.

During the ensuing week, the undersigned will be prepared to receive the names of intending subscribers, at their office, Scott's Buildings. Early application is desired, as but a limited number of copies will be published.

FINKLE & LYON

SEWING MACHINE CO.

OFFICE 591 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

GUARANTEE.—After a fair trial, if any purchaser does not regard the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine as superior to any machine in market, he can return it and have his money. It has taken many of the highest prizes—is less complicated than any other first class machine,—does a wider range of work without changing,—requires no taking apart to clean or oil, and no "lessons" to set needle, regulate tension, or operate machine.

N. B. Any Clergyman sending us two orders for Machines, shall receive one for himself as a present. The same proposition is extended to Professors and Teachers.

We have now completed our New Manufactory at a cost of some $200,000, including New Patents and important Improvements; and the object of the above proposition is to secure the immediate introduction of our improved machine into every town in the United States without incurring the great expense of a travelling agent.

This proposition cannot avail in towns occupied by our own agents.

Please send for descriptive Catalogue, with samples of sewing.

DREAMING.

Dreaming, dreaming, always dreaming,
Is the little child at play,
Dreaming all the world an Eden,
And this life a holiday,
Straws and shadows, birds and flowers,
While away our childhood's hours.

Dreaming, dreaming, ever dreaming,
Is the maiden full of glee,
Deeming all things for her pleasure
In the heavens and earth that be;
Till her idol—formed of clay—
Crumble one by one away.

Dreaming, dreaming, always dreaming,
Is the youth in ardent prime,
Chasing each seductive phantom,
Luring him from deeds sublime;
Till he finds her fancies—air,
And his pleasures false, though fair.

Dreaming, dreaming, looking backward
Through the narrowing links of years,
Sits the old man by the fireside,
Resting from life's hopes and fears;
Thinking of the struggles o'er,
And the unknown life before.

Dreaming—so, we all go dreaming,
On through childhood, youth, and age,
Meaning ever to awaken;
Yet through each succeeding stage
Gliding idly o'er life's stream,
Dreaming still the self same dream.

STAPLEFORD GRANGE.

I heard the following narrative at a dinner party in a country-house about five miles from the place where the events referred to occurred, and it was related to me by the chief actress in it,—a pretty, lady-like girl of twenty, the daughter of the rector of the parish in which Stapleford Grange is situated. I had sprained my ankle in the morning, and instead of going in to dinner with the rest of the party, was made to lie on a sofa in the drawing-room; and it was after the ladies came in from the dining-room that pretty Cissy Miles, at her hostess's urgent request, related it to me. I give it, as nearly as I can remember, in her own words.

It was Saturday afternoon before Christmas day, nearly two years ago, when my six brothers, all younger than myself, and I were skating on our squire's fish-pond. We had been skating since dinner, and it was not till the wintry daylight was beginning to wane that the recollection gushed across me that I had entirely forgotten to do a commission my mother had given to me in the morning. This commission was to walk to the Grange, a big farm-house, and bespeak some geese for dinner on New Year's day. My mother had said decidedly, 'Those geese must be ordered to-day, Cissy,' so I knew that I should have to go; although the Grange was a mile off, although it was very cold, and darkness was coming on, and although I was terribly afraid of a big black dog which was chained up just in front of the Grange back door.

'Who'll go with me to the Grange?' I called out quickly, as this remembrance occurred to me, sitting down and beginning to unstrap my skates. 'I've forgotten all about the geese, and mamma said I was to order them to-day.'

No one answered. The next day was Sunday, and it might thaw before Monday. Every boy, big or little seemed laudably desirous of making the most of pits at opportunities.

'I daren't go myself,' I called out in a pathetic tone; 'it would be quite dark before I got home again.'

'Tell the truth, Cis,' called out Charlie, a quick, good-natured boy of fifteen, 'and say you're afraid of Jip. Never mind, I'll come with you if you must go.' And he joined me on the bank, and proceeded to take off his skates.

'What'll you bet, Jim,' he called out during this operation, 'that we ain't at home by a quarter to five? It's exactly four now.'

'A bob,' was the answer, as Jim whirled by.

'Done; and remember you dub up.—Now, Cis, come along, and I can tell you you'll have to run.'

Thanks to all my brothers, I was a pretty good runner, and we sped across the squire's fields, and through the narrow lane towards the Grange as fast as possible. When we got to the last field, which joined the farm yard, we slackened our pace a little, and when we got into the big court-yard itself we were walking almost slowly.

'How dreadfully lonely it looks, Charlie,' I said, almost with a shiver at the desolate aspect of the place which had been a grand gentleman's house forty years ago, but had been suffered to fall almost into ruins. 'I am glad I'm not Mrs. Johnson, particularly as she has no children, nor anybody to keep her company when Mr. Johnson is away.

'Well, don't you stop and prose to her for ever such a time, Cis, do you hear?' returned Charlie, good-humoredly. 'I want that bob of Jim's, and we've only five-and-twenty minutes to do the jaw, and get home in.'

'All right,' I said, and we went up to the back door.

I must try and describe a little of the geography of the Grange now.

The court-yard was a big square place, much bigger than farm yards usually are, and it must have been an imposing entrance in the old gone by days. There were two entrances to it, the one we had come in by, leading to our village, the other exactly opposite on the other side of the court-yard leading over a quarter of a mile of fields into the road to our market town of D. To the left hand of the court-yard was a long straight line of what had once been stables, but were now farm-buildings; and to the right, the north side—a long straight line also—of the house itself.

The front door, which was exactly in the middle of the straight line, and which was flanked on either side by several windows was now never opened; but the back door, which was the entry to a little bit of a building standing back from the line of the house, and which looked almost as if it had been stuck on to the big square mansion as an afterthought, was on this Saturday afternoon standing a little ajar.

Jip did not greet us with his usual noisy welcome, and there was no sound of any sort about the place except the gabbling of some turkeys in the rear of the farm-buildings. I don't know that I felt any particular fear, but as we followed the path under the shadow of the old elm trees to the half-open door, a sort of oppressed feeling came over me, indeed I suppose, by the utter silence of the place, and I felt almost as if Jip's bark would have been a welcome sound. We went up and knocked at the door, and when I turned round, I observed that Jip's kennel, which stood exactly opposite, in a line with the front of the house, was empty.

'Where can Jip be?' I said; 'I thought they never let him loose;' and I walked forward a few steps, and became aware that the dog's chain and collar were lying beside the kennel. I stood for a moment or two wondering, whilst Charlie, getting impatient at Mrs. Johnson's non appearance, knocked again at the door. Suddenly, some marks on the flagged pathway in front of the kennel arrested my attention, and upon stooping down to look more closely, I saw that they were—drops and smears of blood.

I raised myself in sudden terror, and called Charlie; and when he came to my side and examined the pathway, we found that there was a bloody trail up to the door.

'What can it be, Charlie?' I said in a whisper.

'I don't know,' Charlie returned, thoughtfully; 'poor Jip come to grief, perhaps. It's odd Mrs. Johnson doesn't come; I think I'll go on a voyage of discovery; stay here till I come back;' and he pushed the door further open.

'No let me go too,' I said, hastily, half frightened. I am a coward at the sight of blood.

'Well! don't make a row then;' and we entered the little passage together.

On the left hand was the kitchen door, which was shut; and I observed that Charlie hesitated for a moment before he put out his hand to open it. Only for a moment though; then he unlatched the door and the bright farm kitchen was before us.

There was a big blazing fire in the grate, which showed that on the table the tea-things were set for tea; the kettle was fussing away merrily, and some tea-cakes stood to keep warm a low stand before the fire. Everything looked snug and cosey. Evidently Mrs. Johnson had prepared everything ready for tea when the farmer should return from D. market; and was now gone up stairs to 'clean' herself.

I had time to make all these observations, over Charlie's shoulder, before he gave a sudden start, and strode with a low exclamation to a bundle of clothes which lay at the further and darker side of the kitchen, on the smooth stone floor. A bundle of clothes it looked like with Jip, lying asleep beside it in a very strange attitude.

I shall never forget the horror of the next moment. Huddled up, evidently in the attitude in which she had fallen, lay Mrs. Johnson, with a gaping wound across her throat, from which the blood was still trickling, and Jip, with a large pool of blood near his head, lay dead beside her.

I stood for a moment, too paralyzed with horror,—such intense, thrilling horror, that only any one who has experienced such a feeling can understand it,—and then, with a low scream I sank on the floor, and put up my hand to try and hide the horrible sight.

'Hush!' whispered Charlie, sternly, taking hold of my hands, and forcibly dragging me on my feet again; 'you must not make a sound. Whoever has done this can't be far off; you must run home, Cissy, as hard as ever you can. Come!'

He dragged me to the floor, and then I turned sick all over, and tumbled down again. I felt as if I could not stir another step.

'It's no use, Charlie, I can't stir,' I said. 'Leave me and go without me.'

'Nonsense! Try again.'

I tried again, but it was no use; my legs positively would not move, and precious time was being wasted.

'You fool! Charlie said, bitterly and passionately. 'How was a boy of fifteen to understand a woman's weakness? Then I must leave you. It's Johnson's money they no doubt want. They wouldn't murder if they could help it, and Johnson will be back directly.'

'Yes, yes. Go,' I said, understanding that he wanted to fetch help before the farmer came. 'I will hide somewhere.'

'In the kennel there,' he said, looking round quickly; 'and don't stir.'

He pushed me into poor murdered Jip's kennel, and then he disappeared, and I was left alone in the gathering darkness with those two prostrate forms on the kitchen floor as my company, and perhaps the murderers close at hand.

I combated the faint feeling by pinching my arms and sticking pins into them, and after a little judicious fortune of this sort, the sick feeling went off, and I could think again. 'I will take off my boots,' I thought, after a moment. 'They make such a noise, and I may have to move,' for already a glimmering plan had rushed across my brain of how I might warn Johnson. So I rose a little from my crouching position, unlocked them, and slipped them off. I had barely done this, when I heard the sound of voices, and the sick trembling feeling came on so strongly, that the pin fortune had to be again applied. In another minute three men came out of the back door, and I could distinctly hear every word of their conversation.

'He's late, I think,' said one. 'If he doesn't come soon we must go, that girl 'ill be home soon. I heard the old woman tell her not to stop.'

'What's it signify?' said another 'We can soon stop her mouth.'

'It isn't worth so much blood, Dick,' said the third. 'We've only got fifty pound by this, and the farmer 'ill not have more.'

'He ought to be coming by now,' said the first, anxiously coming a step or two nearer the kennel. 'Hallo! What's that?'

The tone made me turn sick again. Had Charlie found help already? No. The three men were standing close to the kennel, and during the moments silence that followed the man's exclamation, I remembered that I had dropped my muff I tried to stop the hard quick thumping of my heart, which I felt certain they must hear and then, as if fascinated, I raised my head from my knees,—for till that moment I had been crouching at the farthest end of the kennel,—and saw a hairy, fierce looking face glaring in at the entrance of my hiding-place. I tried not to scream, and I succeeded; but in another moment. I should have fainted if the face had not been taken away. To my utter amazement, as the face disappeared, its owner said,—

'I thought some one might be hiding. That's a lady's trumpery. What can it mean?'

Evidently I had not been seen, thanks to my dark dress and the gathering twilight. I breathed freely now; unless something very unforeseen occurred, I was safe.

'Some one has been, and has dropped it,' a voice said quickly. 'That's all on account of your cursed foolery. Dick,' it went on angerly. 'Why couldn't you stop at the door, as I told you!'

'Well, let's do something now,' the third said, anxiously, 'or we shall be hearing some one here.'

The three men then went back into the house again, and I could hear them speaking in low tones; presently the voices grew louder, and they were evidently quarreling. In another minute they came out again, and from what I could hear, they began to search in the farm-buildings and outhouses for the owner of the stuff.

'There's no one here,' at last one called out. 'They must have gone away again. Go to the gate, Bill, and see if anybody is that way.'

After a moment, Bill returned to the other two, who were now standing talking in low whispers at the back of the kennel, and said: 'No there's no one coming.' And my heart sank as I thought how long it would be before succor could arrive.

'He fellows late,' one of the others said, after a minute or two; 'but we had better be on the watch now. Mind, both of you, that he's down from his gig before he sees us.

They walked away along the line of house toward the other entrance by which Mr. Johnson would come; and I, thinking they had gone to take up their hiding places put my head cautiously out of the mouth of the kennel, and looked around.

Surely I could reach the house without being seen, I thought, and if I could but reach the big ruinous drawing-room which commanded a view of the fields the farmer would cross, I might be able to warn him back from the fate which awaited him. I must warn him if I could; it was too horrible that another murder should be done.

I was out of the kennel and in the kitchen, before I recollected that I should have to pass close to the murdered woman before I could gain the door leading into the hall, which I must cross to gain the drawing-room. I shuddered as I passed the table and drew to the horrible scene; but to my utter surprise and no little terror, Mrs. Johnson had vanished! the dark gleaming pool of blood and the dead dog was still there, but the huddled up bundle of clothes was gone.

What had they done with it? In spite of the urgent necessity there was for immediate action, I stood motionless for a minute hesitating to cross the dimly lighted hall. Suppose it should be there. I had never seen death before, and the thought of again seeing the dead woman looking so ghastly and horrible with that great gaping wound across her throat, was at that moment more terrible to me than than the thought of her murderer's return.

Whilst I stood hesitating, a shadow passed across the first window, and, looking up quickly, to my horror I saw the three men in another moment pass the second window.

I had no time for thought. In another minute they would be in the kitchen. I turned and fled down the passage and across the hall, rushing into the first open door which happened to be the drawing-room door, and instinctively half closed it behind me as I had found it. Then I glanced wildly round the bare empty room in search of shelter. There was not a particle of furniture in the room, and it was quite empty except for some apples on the floor, and a few empty empty hampers and sacks at the farther end. How could I hide?

I heard the footsteps crossing the hall, and then, as they came nearer, with the feeling of desperation I sped noiselessly across the room, laid down flat behind the hampers, and, as the door opened, threw an empty sack over me. I felt I must be discovered, for my head was totally uncovered; and I watched them fascinated, breathless from intense terror. They walked to the window, saying, 'We shall see better here,' and looked out, presently all exclaiming together, 'He's coming now; that black spot over there'; and without glancing in my direction, they left the room again. I was safe, but what could I do to save the farmer? Surely Charlie must be coming with help now, but would he be in time? I must try and save him, was the conviction that impressed itself upon me in a lightning thought, and as it crossed my brain I sprang to the window. All thought of self vanished then with the urgency of what I had to do. I was only eager—nervously, frantically eager—to save the farmer's life,

They say that mad people can do things which seem impossible to sane ones, and I must have been quite mad with terror and fright for the next few minutes.

Seven feet below me, stretching down the slope of the hill, was the garden now lying in long ploughed ridges, with the frozen snow on the top of each of them, and at the bottom of the garden was a stone wall four feet high. Beyond this, as far as the eye could reach, extended the snow-covered fields, and coming along the cart-road to the left was Mr. Johnson in his gig.

I threw open the window, making noise enough to alarm the men if they heard it, and sprang on to the window-ledge, and then, tearing off my jacket threw it on the ground, and, shutting my eyes, jumped down. The high jump hurt my wrists and uncovered feet dreadfully, but I dare not stop a moment. I rushed down the garden, tumbled two or three times in my progress, and when I came to the wall scrambled over it head-foremost The farmer was just opening the field I was in, and I made straight towards, trying to call out. But I could not utter a word; so I flew across the snow, dashed through the brook, careless that the bridge was a few feet farther down, and when I rushed up to Mr. Johnson's side, I threw up my arms and shrieked out 'Murder!' just as a loud report rang out through the frosty air, and I fell forward on my face.

'And were you hurt?' I asked as she paused.

'Yes, a little. Look here is the scar;' and she raised the flowing fold of tarlatane from her soft white arm, and pointed to a white oval scar. 'I was ill for several weeks afterwards, but Dr. B. said it was from fright, not from the shot. They told me subsequently, that just as I must have reached the farmer, the man Charlie had fetched entered the farm-yard at the other side, and took the murderers unawares; but one of them who was behind a tree near the outer gate, had just caught sight of me, and had fired in revenge, and they said that if I had not thrown my arms forward, I should perhaps have been killed.'

'And Mrs Johnson?' I asked.

The girl's face became very grave.

'She was quite dead. The men had put her under the dresser, which explains why I did not see her as I passed through the kitchen, and the poor husband went away directly afterwards. The whole house is uninhabited now. Nobody will live there and of course it is said to be haunted. I have never been there since that day, and I think I shall never dare to go there again.

The girl stopped, for the gentlemen had just come in from the dining room, and one, tall and black-bearded, who had been pointed out to me, by my hostess, as the Squire of Stapleford, and Cicely Miles's betrothed, now came up to her, an I laying his hand on her white shoulder with an air of possession, said tenderly, 'What makes you look so flushed, Cissy? Have you been transgressing again?'

'Yes, Robert. Mrs. Saunders asked me to tell Mr. Dacre,' she answered.

'And you will be ill for a week in consequence. I shall ask Mr. Dacre to write the story, to save another repetition of it. You know we wish you to forget all about it, dearest.'

'It was too horrible for that,' she said simply. And then the squire turned to me and made the request, of which this tale is the fulfilment.

Execution in Cleveland.

EXTRAORDINARY AND IMPIOUS SPEECH ON THE GALLOWS!

On Friday last, John W. Hughes, a native of the Isle of Man, was hanged at Cleveland for the murder of a young woman named Pamzen Parsons. Hughes was formerly connected in a medical capacity with the British army and served during the Crimea campaign. When the war broke out in America he served as a regimental surgeon. He obtained leave of absence 1864 for the purpose of visiting his son, who was sick in Cleveland. On returning to his home he found that his wife had fallen into disreputable habits. The effect of this discovery was to cause him to drink to excess. In one of these orgies he fell in with the deceased, and an all out love sprung up between them. This continued until the father of the girl hearing of it, ordered Hughes from the house, and the girl herself avoided him.

In August last Hughes, meeting her on the road, endeavoured to obtain a private interview with her, but she tried to escape from him, when he drew a revolver and shot her twice in the head, causing death. Hughes was arrested, tried and convicted, and up to the time of his execution bore his imprisonment with singular fortitude. He endeavoured, however, in order to avoid the shame of a public execution, to commit suicide by taking a dose of morphine. He had previously eaten some oyster soup and the milk in it served as an antidote, so that the poison did not have the expected effect. He acknowledged the justice of his sentence, but attributed his crime to the use of liquor. On the morning of his death he met a deputation of the Mans Benevolent Society of Cleveland, and making a speech to them said that he was impelled to the act by evil spirits during a fit of intoxication, and he added that he had in early life every advantage and wealth, education and position could give. Upon the scaffold the unhappy man delivered a speech of a very singular character. We give the following portions of it:—

"MY FRIENDS,—This is indeed a sad fate I would wish you to remember it, not as an example, but as the acme of human justice. Do you suppose that for a moment I think that the law of man is just in taking my life? No; man's law is but the law of a murderer like me. Who has made that law? Moses. And who was he? The greatest murderer we ever heard of. Look in the second chapter of Numbers and you will find some examples of murder, with premeditation, and purpose, and deliberation all combined in Moses in taking the life of an Egyptian, and then he comes out and proclaims himself a priest, prophet, and king, and by his law I suffer, and every other murderer. I will admit that life is dear to all and ought to be protected.—But if a man takes the life of another it is the greater madness to retaliate upon him in this manner. If the people of Bedford had taken my life at the time I committed that awful deed, I would have said, that is natures law and comes from the heart; but when, after six months of preparation and deliberation over the matter by the official position, I say then, they murder—they murder. Gentlemen, what is the advantage to society to take my life or any man's in comparison to employing him for the rest of his days in some useful employment? If J. W. Hughes has any ability for anything, then keep him in confinement and employ him in useful labor and make a good man of him, and and turn him out a reformed man, and give him an opportunity to atone for all the evil he may have done society. This death penalty is ridiculous, and if you will consider over it you will find it is wrong. One life is as good as another. What advantage is it to take my life? None. Is it not an example to deter others from the crime? Did I remember this in that wild, mad fit of drunkenness? No; I don't remember it to this hour. Yet it is the law, and we must abide by it—the law of man, but not of God, I am convinced of it. For six months now I have had every sect of religion to visit me, and they come in to tell me which is the way to heaven. Do I believe them? No!—What is man's way to heaven? The same as his way on earth. Do unto others as we wish to be done to. I have thought it all over fully and conscientously, and have concluded that my life to another would will be the same as in this, with the difference that there all will be pure. I have considered this over for six months, and intended to give my own life up to my exit out of the world. I intended to take my own life, but did not succeed. I took enough to take me out of the world, but it is the great Spirit's will that I did not, and I have not done it. Since I have been in this prison I have had every sect of religion visit me. You cannot tell me one that I have not had to talk to me: I argued with them on all their opinions and learned all the secrets of their heart on the matters of salvation, and dare I deny them!—No I have talked with my spiritual adviser not because I believe as he does. I love him as a father, but at the same time my mind is not his mind. I don't believe to-day—God forgive me if I say anything wrong—that Jesus Christ was the Son of God. My anatomical knowledge and everything says that the Immaculate Conception is not right. It is against nature and philosophy. It is against human nature. I believe that no purer spirit, no better man ever lived on earth, than Jesus Christ, and that in the spirit world he is next to the great Creator himself—as far as we know. At the same time I will own my experience tells what I know in my own soul. I know from my own experience that there is communion with those who have departed from this life. I am to-day about to suffer the extreme penalty of the law, but at the same time am sure I shall be with you after the execution as I am now. I don't believe in spiritualism particularly, because I have never seen any mediums, nor have I ever seen the indications of them At the same time every creature, I don't care who he is, will know that at some time in his life he has been influenced by some peculiar idea or sentiment he never would have thought of himself. So far as I know, I believe the doctrines of Spiritualism. I thank my spiritual adviser who has spoken to me in relation to heaven and the sufferings of Jesus Christ, and I believe in him as a mediator, but I don't believe in His miraculous birth. I believe in Him who is the purest man and the purest spirit that ever ascended on high. And I have taken the advice and counsel of Mr. Toone as a friend and father. He came here in a moral way to reform every one, and he laid such a foundation in my mind that I have finally taken the belief I now have given. If I thought for a moment but I was going to brimstone and hell and that kind of thing for all eternity, I should fear; or did I think I was going to heaven to sit there for all eternity, and nothing but sing, I should be a fool. They can kill this body but they cannot kill this soul. This soul soars aloft to the Great Being that gave it being. It has its work to do, and I believe this moment that I shall be as much here after this execution, as now, before it I believe I am here. I go, gentlemen, not to the land of perdition, but to the land of progression, and while I admit the justice of the law of Ohio, to-day I say it is foolish and vain. And if you should say to me that because the rope goes around my neck and chokes me to death that it is going to prevent any crime, I say it is foolish and vain, for in the condition in which John W. Hughes was when he committed this crime, no example on earth would prevent any man from doing just as he did. I submit to the law of the land, believing it is a cruel murder to take my life. From the time I fired that pistol up to this hour, I don't remember the firing of that pistol. Do you think all the examples on earth would have prevented any man in that condition from doing as I did? No, it is a mistake. No, I hope my example will not be remembered as an example of the death penalty, but for the folly of it. Gentlemen, good bye."

FENIANISM IN IRELAND.

The Dublin police, on the 1st instant, seized, in the building formerly used as a stable in Longford Lane, nearly 200 pikes, and about 300 incomplete pike handles. Small seizures of arms are also reported in private houses.

An influential meeting was held in Dublin on the 1st. The Marquis of Downshire presided. Resolutions were passed declaring that the Fenian conspiracy had produced a feeling of well-founded alarm, and that it was the duty of the Government to use the most effective measures to crush it, and afford full protection to loyal well-disposed citizens. Another resolution calls on the Government to increase the military force in Ireland. Both were passed unanimously.

On the evening of the 31st ult., during the progress of the Lord Lieutenant's drawing-room, several troops of cavalry were placed in various parts of the city. The military paraded the streets and the picquets were doubled. The Fenians, however, did not assemble, as was expected, and the crowd at the castle gates during the drawing-room was peaceable.—Another batch of 900 soldiers passed through Liverpool on the 2nd for Dublin.

Government Buildings—Arbitration.

For some months back, an arbitration has been sitting on the claims of the contractors for money alleged to be due them. The troubles seem to arise out of extra work and out of orders to stop the work. The building originally was to be erected for $278.810, the contractors agreeing to pay $200 per week for every week after the time for completion, until completed. The government, however, afterwards required work to be done not contemplated in the contract. It appears from evidence that the work was contracted for at 36 per cent below what it could be done for. The total amount of claims as set forth by the contractors is set down at $668.065. According to the evidence of Mr. Scott, a government architect, the whole cost should be $440.362. It is contended that the whole work would cost about $385 800; and they have been paid about $511.000. If this is so the contractors have made a nice little sum out of it. The matter is not yet decided.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON.

This remarkable man is again attracting public attention, and especially the attention of the people of the United States. For some time there has appeared a difference of opinion in reference to the manner of dealing with the South. The ultra party of the North are unwilling to admit the representative of the Southern States into the position they occupied before the rebellion. The President thinks that the Rebellion is over, the South beaten, and forced to submit.—They have taken, or are ready to swear allegiance to the general government, and President Johnson then thinks that they should be reinstated; and the people of the United States will agree with the President. If ever there is to be a re union it must be by mildness and forbearance on the part of the North or they will have a second rebellion greater than the first.

The great point where the difficulty of opinion came to a crisis was lately in the President vetoing the Freedmen's Bureau Bill. From what we can gather from our exchanges, it appears this Bill was alone to establish a system of quasi military rule in matters that would affect the Freedmen. This the President would not consent to, and would not allow the Bill to become law. It was afterwards sought to make it law over the will of the President, by a two-third vote, but this failed. This will produce a chasm between him and the party who elected him, and may throw him back on the opposition. Be this as it may, he has shown his pluck, and in the end will be admired for it. He has also been making speeches to the people, and salutes of 36 guns have been fired in his honour in various States.

Lumber.

This is one of the articles that was admitted into the American market duty free under the Treaty. After the abrogation of the treaty, March 17th, a duty will be imposed. This it was thought would injure the trade. The Hamilton Spectator says that contracts are being made for Canadian lumber at Canadian ports at $11.25, while last year it was not higher than $10. Thus we find the Americans are willing to pay for the lumber and pay the duty too.

Otonabee.

We learn that the electors of the Township of Otonabee repealed the Dunkin By-law of last year. 22 voted for the repealing By-law, 6 voted against it.

The regular quarterly Committee meeting of the Peterborough Auxiliary Bible Society, will be held in Col. Hautain's office, on Monday, the 5th March, 1866, at 4 o'clock, p. m.

Some time ago, we published a short extract from the Montreal Witness, in reference to some unkind treatment reported to have been suffered by some one (name not then given) at the hand of a wealthy citizen of Bobcaygeon. We felt persuaded at the time that the whole affair was a fabrication—entirely false; but we thought best to let some one more conversant with Bobcaygeon affairs than we are, contradict it. Mr. Boyd's letter in to-day's issue fully warrants the conclusion we then had come to. In fact, every one who knows Mr. Boyd, will agree with us in saying that he would not be guilty of ill-treating any one. This falsehood, however, must have been concocted to array different religious sects against each other, a course that should be frowned down by Le Canadien and every respectable journalist. Mr. Boyd, however, has still many Roman Catholics in his employment; why do they not speak out, if ill-treated? We have no doubt but they are as well treated as Protestants—perhaps better.

TOWN COUNCIL.

There was a meeting of the Council on Monday evening. The great matter for discussion was the proposed License By-law. The Taverns were well represented on the occasion, and obtained their desires—Tavern License is to be as last year. The debate fully equaled any thing of by gone days. The Chairman took the anomalous course that was taken to carry the Rail road By-law, viz., to vote after the rest of the council had voted. This one Legislators never accontemned, as they provided for any case of a tie by declaring that question negatived. The words of the statute are.—"The head of the Council or the Presiding officer or chairman of any meeting of any Council, may vote with the members on all questions, and any question on which there is an equality of votes shall be deemed to be negatived,"—22d vic. Cap. 54, Sec. 147.

Two important By-laws have been carried, lately, or thus violating the law, the Chairman voting after the members had voted. It is useless to say that the Chairman can vote if he but votes with the yeas—for that may produce a tie, and consequently lose the question, as far as the side he voted in is concerned, for if there are 5 yeas and 6 nays the question is lost—if the Chairman votes yea he produces a tie, and the question is lost, and, vice versa his vote will be useless. The fact is, that the Chairman cannot vote unless he votes when the members do—and it is a wise provision in the law to prevent a Chairman going with the strong party, wherever he should vote on the merits of the question. Let us hope that the Chairman in future will understand his duty and privilege and while performing the one—exercise the other, but let us have no shirking the matter, by any subterfuges.

At the importunate request of a correspondent from the country, we have inserted his communication. We wish, however, that every one desirous of corresponding through the press, would try and keep within half a column, unless on very important subjects. Our correspondent, "A young man from the country," is peculiarly serious and goes away from the point, especially in his reference to the opinions of others. His reference to the "civil rights" matter of Mr. Edwards, our correspondent, does not go far enough. He talks about many not "being capable of exercising these civil rights."—Mr. Edwards understands the people of Canada well; he fully knows the "incapacity of the many" for many things, and he desires to see them educated, as do all who spoke at the late Convention. But very few, we would say not one of the speakers believed that mere book learning will ever do away with crime. Mr. Scanlon also went for education, but would not wish to have a law that will never be enforced. He would educate all, if he could; but would only compel the vagrant to go to a training institution; not merely to a Common School, but to a Reformatory, where he would be separated from vice and the vicious, and receive a moral and intellectual training.

Our correspondent talks about drunkenness causing this disregard of family, children, regard for civil right, and much more. We would ask, why does not our government enact a law to compel men to be sober—since drunkenness is the root of the evil? This would meet the views of Mr. Edwards, Mr. Scranton, and a host of others, provided it can be enforced, but why create a disrespect for law—by enacting laws that no one intends to obey; nor would the advocates become the guardians of the erroneous system—not one of them.

We inserted his letter at his most earnest request, contrary to our first intentions, but we had to omit a part which we considered too personal. Should our correspondent write again, we urge that he confine himself to the matter at issue.

UNION SCHOOL MATTERS.

In our last issue we gave a synopsis of the Report of the School for the past year which so far as we are conscerned we believe to be substantially correct. The accounts have been kept by Mr. O'Beirne, a gentleman whose integrity none will impugn, no matter how they may differ from him on other matters. The Auditors also have examined the accounts and declared them correct, &c, which is a further guarantee of the truthfulness of the statements as far as money matters is concerned. In comparing them we found no material error. We thought that there were expenses under headings that, although theoretically correct, was not literally so. This we still think.—Yet this does not in any way impugn the correctness of the figures.

As we published the synopsis of the report, we felt ourselves called upon to make the above remarks, as there appears to be a little unnecessary quibbling concerning what has been published. When the public, however, learn the name of the author, they will draw their own conclusions concerning the motives that induced the deliberated queries.

We took the trouble of going to the Union School, on Monday, and of spending several hours in taking down the attendance at the Grammar School for the past year, and also of taking an account of the fees that should have been collected by the Principal. We also went to the Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. O'Beirne, and he kindly showed us the monthly reports of attendance, and fees which we compared with the accounts of the regular register of the pupils kept by the Principal; and on comparison found no material difference. The only difference being in January, June and December, all months during which pupils attend, very often only a part, and have to be allowed abatement. The whole difference amounted to $2, and to explained this we find that some pupils had paid only five cents for some months, and others sixty-five cents, these having attended but a part of the month, so charged and paid for.

We further found the names of several from the girls Division who go up for lessons in Latin, as well as other subjects and these only pay (in the 5th Division) 25 cents per month; yet with the consent of the Grammar School Inspector these names were enrolled on the Grammar School Register. On enquiry from the members of the Board, this was found to be the case, with the consent of the Board also; and if the word average, an error in copying no doubt, be read total, the whole apparent difficulty can be easily explained.

Since writing the above we have received a note from Mr. O'Beirne, stating that during the year one bad dollar was received—thus bringing down the apparent discrepancy to one dollar. And this, do doubt, could be explained very easily; there is not a merchant in Town who might not make such a mistake.

There is a prevalent error of opinion concerning the apportionment of Government grants to Grammar Schools that it would be well for the people to note. Many suppose that the apportionment was according to attendance, but this is not the case. All the money is apportioned to the counties according to population, hence has had nothing to do with attendance. The Senior Grammar School of the county receives first $400, if the attendance averages ten pupils; if the attendance averaged 40 it would receive the same sum. The Junior Grammar Schools receive $200, if our memory serves us right. The balance is divided according to regulations provided by the Council of Public Instructions, and will no doubt be on equitable terms. Under the new Grammar School Act, the apportionment will be according to attendance.

All the fizzle about corruption will be seen to have no foundation except in the mind of an old Teacher who feels sore over his dismissal, and now wishes to vent his enmity on the Principal, and on one or two members of the Board who took sides with the Principal. He should go to Toronto and persecute Professor Young also. Why pour out his wrath all on one or two? The whole Board should suffer. He is trying to be dog in manger, he could not remain in the Union School and he would, therefore, not allow any one else to do so in peace, especially if such person or persons ever said a word against him.

It would, however, be more satisfactory if the Board would give a full annual report. They are not bound to publish it in a newspaper, yet such would be acceptable to the people. The accounts are, it is true, in the hands of Mr. O'Beirne, who will take pleasure in explaining them to any one who really desires information. Yet if the people desire to have them published, they might be gratified; they foot the bill.

The following is the attendance of pupils at the Grammar School, for the year and months indicated:—

The Churchman's Family Magazine.

This Magazine, for the month of February, has just been received. The contents are:—Oxford Story, Innocent's Day, One Thousand and Sixty-five, On the Baalim and Phœnician Worship, Sketches in the Desert, On the Indiscreet Silence of Folly, Coming Lemenades, The Church in Norway, Bishop Hall, The English Seneca, Benefit Societies and Village Schools, The Parable of the Widows, Our Clerical Club. The present number equals the others in interesting matter. For sale by Chewett & Co., Toronto, also by Graham & Scranton, Peterborough.

Sergeant McDowell again.

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Sergeant McDowell, of Toronto notoriety, also for the arrest of Detective Mack. They are implicated in the Galt Bank robbery, also as being intimates of several burglars and rowdies. The Sergeant cannot be found, Mack allowed himself to be taken.

Personal.

Our readers will be gratified to learn that Mr. George Burnham, son of the Rev. Mark Burnham, has succeeded in passing a highly creditable examination as a Doctor of Medicine at Bellevue Medical College, New York. He was, we believe, a pupil of Dr. Burnham, of this place. We wish him every success in his profession.

The Orange Soiree at Ottawa, which the Fenians threatened to disturb, proved a grand success. There were 800 present and speeches by the Grand Master, Mackenzie Bowell, and others were the general order. The meeting was orderly, no Fenians appeared to disturb them.

THE SCHOOL LAW AS IT IS.

A Public Meeting was held in the Sons' Hall, in the village of Mount Pleasant, on the 13th February, 1866. Thomas Shield in the Chair; John Thexton, Secretary.

The Chairman stated that the object of the meeting was to discuss the changes in the Common School law proposed by the Chief Superintendent of Education for Upper Canada.

It was moved by James McLean, Esq. seconded by the Rev. J. Ewing, and resolved.—That it is the opinion of this meeting that it would be injurious to the best interests of Common Schools to change the present law as regards the appointment of Trustees to office.

James McLean, Esq., in moving the resolution, spoke favourably of the present School law as regards the appointment of Trustees to office in rural Sections, and pointed out the various evils that would be likely to follow the changes proposed by the Chief Superintendent of Education.

The Rev. J. Ewing, in seconding the resolution addressed the meeting for a length of time on the various changes advocated by the Rev. E. Ryerson, showing that it would be impossible to carry out the law compelling children to attend school; he viewed it as Anti-British. He concluded by saying it was better to throw schools open to all and induce them to come.

Councillor Webster, F. Gardiner, and G. Jamison, Esqrs. followed. They spoke in favor of the law remaining as it now exists.

The Chairman then put the resolution which was carried unanimously.

And it was resolved that the minutes of this meeting be sent to the Toronto Globe office and Peterborough Examiner office for publication.

THOS. SHIELD, Chairman.
JOHN THEXTON, Secretary.

The Committee of the Protestant Home beg to acknowledge with thanks the following donations, received during the past month:—Thomas Donnelly, 1 load of wood; Mr. Green, 24 small loaves of bread; Mrs. Hilliard, a parcel of clothes; Mrs. Wellar, 1 quilt; Mr. Leeb, an order for $3; Mrs. James Hamilton, 1 load of wood; Mrs. Haultain, a parcel of clothing; Mrs. Heather, 8 heads of cabbage; Mrs. Wallis, a large piece of beef and shin bone for soup; Mr. A. Easton, Otonabee, 50 lbs. beef; Mr. John Robinson, Smith, 1 shin bone and 2½ bushels potatoes.

We are requested to state that a number of pairs of excellent Socks for sale at the Home, knitted by the inmates.

The North Monaghan Intellectual Improvement Society.

The Rev. Walter Roger, of Peterborough, delivered the second lecture of the season under the auspices of the above Society at the Town Hall, on Monday evening, the 26th ultimo. Subject—The Geology of Upper Canada. Col. Haultain, M. P. P., occupied the chair.

The Chairman made some very appropriate remarks, during which he said that it had been announced that he himself would lecture there that evening; but fortunately he had obtained the consent of one to take his place, who had lately made Geology his especial study, and was therefore well qualified to do justice to the subject.

Mr. Roger on rising was warmly received, he said that if Col. Haultain had been unvigled by their Secretary to give a lecture on the subject named, for his own part he must confess that he (Mr. R.) had consented during a moment of weakness. He had long seen the account of the proceedings of the society, but never had the pleasure of meeting them till now, and he considered that they deserved great credit for the spirit in which they had sustained the Association so long a time—probably now the oldest society of the kind in this part of the country; he hoped that it might long continue to flourish.

The lecture began by reviewing briefly the general principles of the science of Geology, representing an outline of its classification of the rocks—comprising our Globe, and pointing out the order in which they are found to occur. The Igneous Rocks, proceeding on the action of fire, form the great mass of the Globe, and from them must originally have been derived the Stratified Aqueous Rocks, which overlie them. Between them are found in Canada another class, the Metamorphic or Altered Rocks, which partake of the nature of both. Of course this may be disputed by volcanic action, but as no trace of such agency has been found in western Canada, it holds good in this part of the country, and greatly simplifies its investigation. Its simplicity is heightened by the fact that only a few of the lowest formation of Stratified Rocks are to be met with, viz:—First, the Laurentian, seen at the Thousand Isles and throughout the country lying north of a line drawn from that point to the Georgian Bay.—Second, the Lower Silurian, consisting of Limestones, Sandstones Shales, &c., occupying the country north of Lake Ontario between the line already mentioned and another drawn from near Collingwood to the western end of the Lake. Continuing westward we find these strata overlapped by the Upper Silurian, and they in turn by the Devonian, extending to the verge of the Province. Next in regular order comes the Carboniferous or coal-bearing formation, which is not met with, however, till after crossing into Michigan, a bare suspicion of it only occurring in the form of dark shales at Kettle Point, &c., on the Canadian coast of Lake Huron. Strangely enough, a small patch of coal-measures is also found at Gaspe, the eastern extremity of the Lower Province. They are also largely represented in our maritime Provinces, and would doubtless in case of Confederation constitute much material for intercolonial commerce. Between these two extremes the strata all belong to lower formations. This fact was easily recognized by our Geologists, from the character of their organic remains, such as the trilobite &c., enabling them to speak with confidence of the facility of expending capital in the search for coal in Canada. We have some compensation however, in the valuable deposits of Petroleum, Oil, &c, found in the Devonian strata of the West. The lecturer proceeded to discuss at some length the various theories advanced to account for these deposits. The chemico-mineral theory and but little to support it beyond the material appearance of the coals of the carboniferous limestone. The vegetable and animal origin was much more likely to succeed. Both agencies were undoubtedly; but the probable explanation lay in the organic remains of both kinds, which abounded in the oil-producing rocks. Under the immense pressure of overlying masses and other favoring influences, these decaying organisms might, in the chemistry of nature, readily assume bituminous or oily form. The coniferous limestone (one of the minor groups of the Devonian) was also largely made up of the fossil corals and other marine remains as to be regarded as one vast coral reef. The Hamilton shales, which overlie the oil-bearing limestone in the Counties of Lambton, Middlesex, Essex and Kent, are also rich in organic remains and bituminous deposits. The wells at Enniskillen are these strata and tap the only means secured within and beneath. These places lie as it were over the centre of the basin and as you come eastward you soon catch its edge and thus lessen the chances of striking oil in any profitable quantities. The probability is that it will not be found to abound to the east of a somewhat irregular line drawn from the eastern end of Lake Erie north west to the Huron coast near Saugeen, this being the boundary of the Devonian series. Many of the beds of limestone and shale in our section of the country are also largely fossiliferous and some bituminous, especially that band of dark shales extending from Whitby to Collingwood, and indications of oil may be met with, but its existence in profitable quantities is very doubtful. However, it is well that the matter should be fairly tested, and we should watch with interest the operations now going on at Peterborough, Napanee Ottawa, and other places.

The lecturer then proceeded to discuss the drift beds which cover the surface of this country, in the form of layers of clay, sand, gravel, and boulders of very various dimensions. The mineral characters of these indicate their derivation from the Laurentian rocks composing the country to the north. They present all the appearance of having been deposited under the action of water and ice; this is evident both from the arrangement of the materials themselves, the occurrence of arctic shells and other remains among them and from the worn and polished appearance of the limestone floor beneath. These inscriptions were visible in many places about Peterborough, near Belleville, St. Mary's, Owen Sound, Collingwood, &c. At the latter place they appear on the summit of an escarpment about 500 feet above the level of Lake Ontario. This fact, with the occurrence of shells upon the mountain at Montreal and other elevations, show how much the land must have risen in passing out of the Drift Epoch into the present.

The character of these shells is further significant as much as those of the Lower Silurian are marine, while none but fresh water remains have been obtained west of the Laurentian ridge which crosses at the eastern end of Lake Ontario, producing the Thousand Islands and the Adirondac Mountains of the northern part of New York State. The conclusion pointed at by these facts is, that during the Drift Epoch the lower bed of the St Lawrence was occupied by a large inlet of the sea, while its upper or western portion including the area of the Great Lakes and the whole of the western Province was occupied by a vast fresh water sea where Arctic Phenomena prevailed. From this the land gradually emerged and the climate became modified to its present state.

Many interesting remains have been discovered in these drift beds, such as the shells already referred to, and the tusks and bones of extinct elephantine monsters from the gravel of the Burlington Heights. This field of observation is within the reach of all, and as much doubt still lingers about these periods immediately preceding the appearance of man on the globe, every finding or excavation should be closely watched for fresh evidence. Interesting questions as to the age of the human race and the state of the world at the time of its appearance were now being discussed and as the clearness of the conclusions depended much upon the number and accuracy of the observations, any intelligent observer may hope to contribute to the result desired.

None need fear any apparent conflict between these results and the statements of the Bible. The "testimony of the rocks" as to the world's history is inscribed upon them by the same divine finger that wrote the sacred page and any apparent contradiction between them arises from our blundering interpretations. Mature investigation will ever issue in their perfect harmony as it has done heretofore.

During the lecture which occupied better than one hour and a half in delivery, Mr. Roger frequently used the black board to good effect, and as far as possible stripped the subject of its technicalities, thereby interesting and instructing the audience, whose undivided attention he secured throughout.

Rev. Mr. Blain moved a vote of thanks to the lecturer which was seconded by Mr. Wood, and carried unanimously.

The proceedings terminated by singing the Doxology.—Com

COMPULSORY EDUCATION.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—As some of my remarks on the subject of compulsory education did not appear in my last communication, be pleased to allow me to say a little more. It is a subject upon which I could write a great deal, and the difficulty I find in treating of it is not what to say, but how properly to condense what I have to say. Our School system is based upon compulsion. A provision is made for education, and says the person taxed, "Since you compel me to pay for education, compel all those who run vagrant in the streets to accept the education thus provided." So might the reluctant payer of a Church rate in England say to the Government "Since you compel me to pay for keeping up the Church, compel those who keep away to attend Church." Now if the object of education is to correct the vicious class among the moral and religious training is more likely to reclaim these than mere secular education, and therefore the law should be altered in England to compel the hundreds of thousands there to attend the religious instruction provided for them. In the proposed change of our School system, it is intended that the State shall educate the youth, or at all events interfere if they are not educated. It is not a moral or religious training that it insists upon, but a mere intellectual one—a secular training. If this is attended to the parent escapes the pains and penalties. The parent may send his children to the public school, or a private school, or educate them himself, for four months in a year; they may not get further than school, during the term, yet the letter of the law is fulfilled. The parent may give his children either of these forms of education—may entirely neglect their moral training—nay, may even teach them to curse, lie, cheat and steal, both by precept and example, and he cannot be touched. Or we will suppose that a parent does embrace the opportunities afforded him, and gives his children a good common school education, but neglects their moral and religious training; can I believe that children having merely their intellects cultivated in this manner, are necessarily moral or virtuous? Evil passions and viciousness have their seat in the heart, not in the head. The evils complained of that affect society originate and proceed from the neglected cultivation of the heart, not of the head. "Out of the heart," says the Old Book, 'proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, covetousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, deceit, pride, foolishness.' If really the object of a State system of education be to make the people virtuous, it must adopt some other means than any yet employed to accomplish the end. But here is the rub: If the vagrants of the cities are to be taken hold of and reclaimed, they must be separated from the pernicious influence of the example they have been trained in; provision must be made for their temporal wants, and notwithstanding no more of a moral or religious training may be given them than teaching them to cease from vice and love their neighbour, possibly the cry of sectarianism will be raised, and they must be returned whence they came. The germ of truth lie in this view of the matter: God has committed to the parent the task of training his offspring, and He says "Train up a child in the way he should go," and "Bring up them in nurture and admonition of the Lord." If the State, or even if the Church, interfere with the duty of the parent, they go beyond their prerogative; and pains or penalties imposed on the parent or either, for a neglect of its duty in this thing in bringing up his children, is an assumption of power which is not authorised in the Word of God. Under the Jewish economy the parent was directed to teach his children the words which God commanded him, "to talk of them when he sat in the house or walked by the way, when he lay down and when he rose up." In no solitary instance is the training duty transferred from the parent to the State. If the parent had a son which parental instruction and punishment did not reclaim from dissoluteness, he was directed to bring him to the elders of the city, and then and there impeach him, when the men of the city were to stone him to death. There is much about this compulsory education that I dislike, believing that it is wrong and opposite principles of freedom; I should like if I could make it as clear to your readers as it is to myself. I love the voluntary principle. Our school system is antagonistic to it. This new measure is another stab to this heaven-born principle. I could adopt as a motto "Let every man pay for the education of his own children, and let every man pay for his own creed and for his own religion." If, as is admitted, the system inflicts one act of injustice, in enforcing compulsory taxation, do not seek to attach another to it, that of compulsory attendance at school.

I am, yours, &c.,

Peterboro, Feb. 27, 1866.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—A paragraph in your paper, of the 15th instant, copied from the Montreal Witness and emanating from the Le Canada attracted my attention and as it makes a statement calculated to create much ill feeling, as well as conveying an imputation on the conduct of the inhabitants of this place, I feel it incumbent upon me to say that the statement is perfectly void of truth. I am the person alluded to as the employer of the "French Canadians," said to be cruelly and harshly treated and the victims (?) are Michael Powers and his wife, Irish Catholics, who came from Quebec to enter my service. I now declare that I never had any persons of the hundreds in my employment to whom I have shewn more indulgence, and I know that they have been treated with kindness and respect by the inhabitants of this place. I had a letter from Powers the other day asking my opinion in reference to the purchase of a farm of 100 acres, adjoining the Corporation of Lindsay. He was in my employment about five years and did not leave on account of any ill treatment, or threats of such, for he was desirous of remaining; but I discharged him at the end of his year, after due notice of one month, (not because he is a Roman Catholic for I have many such in my employment) but in a friendly manner knowing him to be perfectly independent and possessed of means sufficient to establish himself comfortably, and I wished to give others the opportunity of doing the same.

Faithfully yours,
M. BOYD.

The Education Convention.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Some of the speakers at the Convention on Education, held in Peterborough last week, with regard to a compulsory Education, spoke a great deal about "Civil rights"—for instance, Mr. Edwards says,—"He was opposed to such a proposal, regarding it as a direct violation of the civil rights of the people." Does not Mr. E. know that there are hundreds of our population not capable of exercising that "civil rights" even towards their own children, and that it would be a charity in the strictest sense of the word to exercise those rights for them? Or in other words, that the government should give them to understand that they have duties to perform towards their offspring and that perform them they must. Mr. Scranton remarks—"Besides, if you compel them (the children) to attend school you will have to clothe and possibly feed them as well." I would like to know to what description of Parents this applies. Is it to the children of the industrious Mechanic? No. Is it to the hard-working and sun browned toiling Farmers, the credit of the country? No. It applies to no one but the dissipated, slothful drunkard, who cares nothing for his children and in fact makes of being his Family's adviser, stay and support, he sells the rum too often, and in the generality of cases lives off them and take his children's clothes, &c., and sells them in order to quench his dissipated cravings, and if we look at the court records we see this he gives them not only the worst of ill tongue but cruel and unnatural thrashings. These, and these only unnatural parents are they who have not their children at school. The drunkard only, is he to whom Mr. Scranton's words apply. Now, Mr. Editor, I think it is plain, and must commend itself to every reasonable party that it would be a blessing to the country, if the law would say to such as I have described—if you do not do your duty to your children, you must to the penitentiary with you, and it would not only clean our streets of habitual drunkards but it would be the means of many abuse sold, such as Mr. S. refers to, instead of as he paints it, it would be a home of comfort and a blessing to many a heart-broken mother and her little ones, as they would be able to retain what they did work for and live in quietness. We all know that Canada is a young country, not at all thinly populated, with its fields of enterprise open to all, and that every one who has the will can find the means to support his Family, and that comfortable. I consider that beyond dispute.

But Dr. Poole utters the most spurious doctrine I ever heard; he remarked, "a great deal has been said about Education diminishing crime, but he had the authority of at least one eminent historian, (Alison) as well as daily experience to show that Education did not diminish crime, it only changed the character of the crime." Now, I am really at a loss to understand how a man, of the Dr's. learning, could so forth such a theory, as he does, in these remarks. I for one associate no mean idea of a desire on his part against the education of the poor man. He endeavors to keep the poor man under.

* * * He quotes the London C. W. affair, in reply to which I say that the numbers of crimes are committed by the ignorant and uneducated for the one committed by the educated and enlightened. We all know what were the exposures to all intents and the London one was an exception. But the Dr. quoted English authority, and I may do so also as I did but a few months from Scotland, and in that table of England quoted by me, as the Dr. no doubt has, I could give him more exact words; but I commend to the Dr. the words of George Combe one of the most talented and enlightened lawyers who can also pass a Court, also Palmerston, Brougham, Gladstone Cobden, Bright, Milner Gibson, Dunlop Lord Advocate for Scotland, Moncreiff, Lord Aberdeen and Cairns, and many more of Britain's noble and enlightened sons, who have their speeches teeming with evidence that Education is not only the first and principal step towards the diminishing of crime. As regards my remark, as well as daily experience," I would refer him to the English papers of the commencement of last year, to the great London jewelry robberies, perhaps the greatest robberies that were ever known, and ask if they were committed by the educated? No, they were not; but were the work of the ignorant, the dissipated, the degraded and the drunkard, and were not only great robberies but were "scientific" on a grand scale. I add that if the Dr. likes to examine the statistics of the City of Edinburgh prisons, he will find, beyond a doubt, that it is the most ignorant and illiterate of that city's inhabitants who fill the prisons, and if he takes the prison returns of Peterborough, as published in the Review a week or two ago, and the population comparatively the same, if I mistake not, will hold good—the most flagrant soul going in nor one many cases.

Now, Mr. Editor, I have said a great deal and necessarily taken up a considerable space of your valuable columns, and it will particularly oblige me by your inserting my remarks, and believe me to be,

Yours, &c.,
A YOUNG MAN FROM THE COUNTRY.

Bobcaygeon, 20th February, 1866.

Booth Said to be Still Living.

The Norfolk Post contains the following singular letter:—

MOREHEAD CITY, Jan 5th, 1866.

Editor, Norfolk Post:

SIR—I have just arrived at this place from ——, where I saw and talked with John Wilkes Booth, the supposed assassin of our late President. That he would be alive after what had occurred at our capital may seem strange, but it is true nevertheless.

I saw him and B. Harris who left with him, not four weeks ago, and learned from him all the badships that he underwent in leaving this country. He says that no one who has the least regard for truth will say but he was in Ford's Theatre on the 14th of April last, and wonder's why no one present on that occasion did not pretend to recognize the man that shot Lincoln until they were told—but it was him by Laura Keene, his lover ex-wife. He did not, however, to me deny or admit that he had done the deed, but stated that no one could truthfully say, of their own knowledge, that it was him.

He declares that Mrs. Surratt was innocent, and wonders how the man that was killed in the barn looked. He leaned from the papers that he had a heavy beard, and had it sheared or cut in such an awkward manner that his (Booth's) most intimate friends would not recognize Booth. He thinks not. He believed innocent or guilty, that if found he would be sacrificed to their mad fury, and concluded to leave, which he did. And as there can now be no harm in telling, I will state what he told me—omitting names.

He crossed the river at George-town; stopped the next day at Fairfax Court House; the next night he was taken to near Middleburg, &c., and from there to a place near Warm Springs, where he remained two days; and after more than three weeks' travelling—mostly by night, and suffering severely—he reached Florida, where he was detained for some time, until Harris, who was mentioned in the affair, and who could not appear publicly, procured a boat which they ventured to sea in, and made land safe. Booth was immediately taken sick, and has been the most of the time since.

In October, he was much better; so much so that he took some exercise in the open air, but relapsed and was confined to his room until about four weeks ago. His constitution, in my judgment, is ruined, and I don't believe he will live long. He was preparing for a change of climate, and if no relapse has taken place, is probably in another country, where he will meet more of his own people or people from the same country.

Mr. Editor, I write such poor English that I fear you will not be able to make it out; but it the truth, the whole truth, and if you wish you may publish it. I shall not be in the country to read it.

Yours truly.
J. F.

LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Peterborough Examiner.

London, February 7th, 1866

Yesterday Queen Victoria opened in person the first session of the New Parliament. The re-appearance of Her Majesty in public life, after her long retirement, was hailed throughout the Metropolis with the most heartfelt expressions of goodwill and loyalty.

Both Houses in obedience to the Royal summons, met on Thursday last, but their labors have since been confined to the mere formalities of electing a Speaker in the Commons, and of swearing in members in each of the two Assemblies. They came together yesterday for the first time to really enter into the transaction of public business.

The ceremony naturally attracted considerable interest. The meeting of a New Parliament must always form a striking feature in the history of a country which, by universal admission, holds out to the civilized world the most perfect, as well as the oldest model of a system of Parliamentary Government.

The Queen entered the House through the Peers' entrance, and not by the Royal passage commencing at Victoria Tower; she did not wear her robes of state, which were merely laid on the throne; and with another remarkable departure from ancient usage, the Royal speech was not read by herself, but by the Lord Chancellor in obedience to her commands. These curtailments were made we may assume, for the purpose of lessening her labors and anxieties after so long a separation from her people. Her Majesty had, at all events, ample opportunity, yesterday, of ascertaining, that on encountering any trials, she could rely on her subjects for their warm sympathy, and support. Two o'clock was the time appointed for her arrival at the House of Peers, and some hours before that time, crowds began to assemble along the whole line of the procession. The day was fortunately fine, the sun shining brilliantly, and the thermometer standing about 40°. There was a rather strong wind, however, from the west and south-west, but which had no other effect than of giving the pavement after the accustomed. The multitude, which the keenness of the day and the interesting proceedings to take place, had attracted, were, without doubt, as large as that assembled before on any like occasion, and never was Her Majesty greeted with more acclamations and expressions of goodwill than when she made her appearance yesterday.

At twelve minutes past two Her Majesty arrived at the House, where she was received by the Lord Chancellor at the Peers' entrance; she wore a dark purple dress with a border of white ermine. She also carried a tiara of diamonds and behind her head flowed a white gauze veil, accompanying her were the Princesses Helena and Louisa. Shortly after her entrance to the House, and when the usual preliminary proceeding had been gone through, the Lord Chancellor arose and said:—"My Lords and Gentlemen, Her Majesty has commanded me to read to you Her Majesty's most gracious Speech to both Houses of Parliament, which therefore I now proceed to do in her Majesty's words.

The noble Lord accordingly read Her Majesty's Speech as follows:—

My Lords and Gentlemen,

It is with great satisfaction that I have recourse to your assistance and advice.

I have recently declared my consent to a marriage between my daughter Princess Helena and Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein Sonderburg-Augustenburg. I trust that union may be prosperous and happy.

The death of my beloved uncle, the King of the Belgians, has affected me with profound grief. I feel great confidence, however, that the wisdom which he evinced during his reign will animate his successor, and preserve for Belgium her independence and prosperity.

My relations with foreign Powers are friendly and satisfactory, and I see no cause to fear any disturbance of the general peace.

The meetings of the fleets of France and England in the ports of the respective countries has tended to cement the amity of the two nations, and to prove to the world their friendly concert in the promotion of peace.

I have observed with satisfaction that the United States, after terminating successfully the severe struggle in which they were so long engaged, are wisely repairing the ravages of civil war. The abolition of slavery is an event calculating to form the cordial sympathies and congratulations of this country, which has always been foremost in showing its abhorrence of an institution repugnant to every feeling of justice and humanity.

I have at the same time the satisfaction to inform you that the exertions and perseverance of my naval squadron have reduced the slave trade on the West Coast of Africa within very narrow limits.

A convention has taken place between my Government and that of the United States with respect to injuries inflicted on American commerce by cruisers under the Confederate flag. Copies of this correspondence will be laid before you.

The renewal of diplomatic relations with Brazil has given me much satisfaction, and I acknowledge with pleasure that the good offices of my ally, the King of Portugal, have contributed essentially to this happy result.

I have to regret the interruption of peace between Spain and Chili. The good offices of my Government have, in conjunction with those of the Emperor of the French have been accepted by Spain and it is my earnest hope that the causes of disagreement may be removed in a manner honourable and satisfactory to both countries.

The negociations which have been long pending in Japan and which have been conducted with great ability by my Minister in that country in conjunction with the representatives of my allies in Japan, have been brought to a conclusion which merits my entire approbation.—The existing treaties have been ratified by the Mikado; it has been stipulated that the tariff shall be revised in a manner favourable to commerce, and that the indemnity due under the terms of the Convention of October, 1864, shall be punctually discharged.

I have concluded a treaty of commerce with the Emperor of Austria, which I trust will open to that empire the blessings of an exalted commerce, and be productive of important benefits to both countries.

The deplorable events which have occurred in the Island of Jamaica have induced me to provide at once for an impartial inquiry, and for the due maintenance of authority during that inquiry, by appointing a distinguished military officer as Governor and Commander of the Forces. I have given him the assistance of two able and learned commissioners, who will aid him in examining into the origin nature, and circumstances of the recent outbreak, and the measures adopted in the course of its suppression. The legislature of Jamaica has proposed that the present political constitution of the island should be replaced by a new form of government. A bill upon this subject will be submitted to your consideration.

Papers on

The State of the South.

The following statement comes from a Southern source —

"Four gentlemen from Pennsylvania recently on a visit to Johns Island, near Charleston, S. C. for the purchasing land, were hoot by the negroes, and narrowly escaped with their lives. They said the island belonged to them, and no white man should ever come on it."

We have had a good many stories about the unwillingness of the chivalry to permit Northern men to settle in the South, and some gentlemen who had gone South for that purpose, have returned North with the statement that they found the country too unpleasant to live in. The above is the first story of the kind on the other side said if true, indicates that the blacks, like the chivalry, have their prejudices, and are, like them, a little addicted to mob law. The island in question is one of the Sea Islands upon which General Sherman located the blacks about a year ago Hence arises their notion that the island belongs to them The question of the occupation of these islands by the negroes was recently before Congress, and a clause in the Freedmen's Bureau Bill confirms their occupation for three years. But that certainly confers no right to drive people off the islands.

Re-marriage of the Princess Dagmar.—Next summer if all goes well, a royal marriage is to take place, exclusive of that of the Princess Helena, over which people must look with sympathy. The painful experience of the young Princess Dagmar, sister to the Princess of Wales, will not be forgotten All Europe felt a throb of sympathy at the story of the young girl summoned to the bedside of her dying lover, and receiving his last expression of tenderness. At the death of the Cesarewitch, many who have a regard for Denmark felt grieved that kingdom should lose the advantage of an alliance with the reigning family of Russia, but it seems their assumption was more hasty than well founded The two dynasties are to receive this tie after all, for the princess is to marry the brother, the present heir to Russian throne. The match was not only foreseen by the dying Cesarewitch, but, it is said, was suggested by him as an event that would yield much happiness to all The marriage is to take place next July at Moscow, and among other guests will be the Prince and Princess of Wales.

The Slave Trade in Rebel.—The London Times says:—"We believe we are corrected in stating that only one considerable shipment of slaves took place from the west coast of Africa during the whole of last year, and even this cargo was ultimately captured off the coast of Cuba. One or two similar shipments may, perhaps, have been effected, but as most of the stations the trade was absolutely stopped.—Spain, therefore, in tardily consenting to perform her treaty engagements, was simply making a virtue of necessity, for they could no longer keep profitable violated."

As I was going Victoria.—Rather a singular circumstance occured, on Monday afternoon, to one of the cashiers at Central Police Court. It appears that, according to custom he had hung up his great-coat upon a peg in a school building. In the pocket of the coat was some bread and meat, intended to relieve the physical appetite of the worthy pedagogue after he had given his pupils their morning read of mental food. Business called him out of doors, and he accordingly betook himself in his over-coat and walked out, when no doubt, as he strode down the street, he felt some animal creeping up his back! He at once rushed at the first available shelter, and hastily removed the garment, and judge of a large rat, which after having devoured the teacher's food, had settled down for a comfortable sleep in the lining.—Spectator.

The London Free Press says that although serious trouble with the Fenian chiefs is not immediately apprehended, precautions have nevertheless been taken to render a nocturnal raid on the Banks of this city a rather hazardous undertaking. Should any of the Brotherhood, in their enthusiastic zeal for freedom in Ireland, attempt to lay hands on London cash to aid hisote prize —or for any other object—they will unmistakably discover to their cost that their designs have been anticipated. At the Bank of Montreal especially, means have been taken whereby at a moments' warning of attack, the garrison can be aroused to the danger. Should the Finnegan brand a raid by will by no means find us entirely unprepared!

Australian papers make mention of sudden and intense heat in the middle of November, affecting the new fruit very much. The Melbourne Age says that at Beechworth several animals perished, especially cats and dogs, die of sun stroke. On the 21st the thermometer at Adelaide reached 11 5 in the shade, and 155 6 in the sun, as shown by the register at the observatory

It is intimated that the Lord Chancellor intends to bring in a bill for the repeal of useless and obsolete acts of which the mere schedule of titles occupies 255 folio printed pages.—Some of them relate to the government of the American colonies—now the United States

Easily Caught but not Rid of Easy.—Colds are the most really dangerous of ordinary ills, and we advise those suffering from a cold, sore throat, hoarseness, difficulty of breathing, &c., to try a few of Hyan's Pulmonic Wafers. They are very pleasant, efficacious and cheap. 25 cents a box, at all Druggists.

The Army Worm.—This pest is making sad havoc among the wheat and other crops, in various parts of the country, and we are unable to advise as to the best means of getting rid of them; but for the cure of colds, rheuma ism burns, cramps, pains, neuralgia, and all pains of the body, the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is decidedly the best. Sold by all Medicine Dealers, price 25 cts per bottle.

GREAT CONDITION MEDICINE.

As a Condition Medicine for horses "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy" has no equal. Its effects in this respect are astonishing; many horses were supposed to be broken down and almost worthless, have by the use of a few packages been restored to a healthy and sound condition, all traces of the disease having been completely removed, and have been sold for from $50 to $75 more than they would previously have brought; when you want a horse medicine get "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy," and we know you will be perfectly satisfied with the result.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurn & Co. is on each package.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, a corroborative of the general approval given to Dr WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

Prescott, C W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs S. W Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen: —

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

New Map
OF
Peterborough and Ashburnham.

THE undersigned beg to announce that their New Map of the Town of Peterboro' and of the Village of Ashburnham, is now complete and ready for publication.

This Map has been compiled with great care from the original registered plans and surveys, and its entire accuracy secured not only by those means, but by actual survey and careful admeasurement In the two corporations named, not only is every Lot given and its subdivisions where divided, but the names of the owners, as contained in the last Assessment Roll, are neatly printed on each lot. All public buildings, manufactories, stores, and private residences, together with the existing and proposed railways, streets, mill-races, water-courses dams, bridges, &c., are laid down from actual measurement. The built-up portion of the town is so colored as to distinguish at a glance the materials used, whether of wood, stone or brick; while the whole is finished in a superior manner, so as to be both useful and ornamental, in securing which neither pains nor expense have been spared

During the ensuing week, the undersigned will be prepared to receive the names of intending sub-scribers, at their office, Scott's Buildings. Early application is desired, as but a limited number of copies will be published.

Poetry.

The Dirty Little Boy and what Befell Him.

There was a dirty little boy,
And he hands were never clean;
Oh, such a grubby urchin
Had ne'er before been seen!

And how he wore his clothes out,
You hardly would believe:
He used to spit upon his slate,
And wipe it with his sleeve.

He shocked and grieved his parents,
Who did he state deplore,
And said: "If you go on like this,
You'll turn a blackamoor!"

"So dark your skin is growing,
You're such a ragged figure,
Your friends will all begin to think
That you're a little nigger!"

He did not heed the warning,
But blacker grew his skin;
His clothes were all in tatters,
So ragged and so thin!

At length a Planter met him,
And popped him in a sack,
And sent him hoeing sugar,
Because he was so black.

And he still in that plantation
He toils with grief and pain—
For though he tends the sugar,
He only gets the cane.

My little boy if you are wise,
You'll scrub your hands with vigour,
And mind your clothes or else you may
Be taken for a nigger.

SOLD AGAIN.

I was standing quietly on the front steps of the custom house the other day, looking casually at a beautiful creature sitting at one of the parlor windows of the Battle House, and trying to discover whether she was an old acquaintance of mine from the country, when a most ange young man, with a limp in his walk came up and stopped near me

'I'll swear it's mighty hot walking for a lame man to-day,' said he.

Whether the remark was addressed to me or to society at large, I did not think it worth while to inquire, but simply said in reply:—

'I should think so, really. May I ask how you came to be lame?'

This was an impertinent question, I know; but as he had provoked it I did not think there could be any harm in it.

'Certainly, sir,' said he 'I got hurt, and very badly too, in a personal difficulty I had with a Northern man named Meade.'

'Ah, indeed!' said I.

'Yes; the thing created a good deal of excitement at the time, and as an account of it was published in all the news papers, both North and South, you must have read something about it.'

'Not a word, I assure you. When and where did it happen?'

'Why a little over two years ago,' said he 'at a town in Pennsylvania, called Gettysburg.'

'Sold again and got the money!' shouted a small news-boy, who was standing by and heard the conversation, but who now took to his heels.

'My gallant young friend,' said I 'acknowledge the corn cheerfully And speaking of corn—do you ever drink anything?' at the same time tossing my head in the direction of the nearest drinking saloon.

'Very rarely,' was the reply; but when I do, it's generally about this time of day.'

'Well,' said I, 'as you are doubtless in a hurry to get to the grocery, I wont detain you any longer.'

And I walked on and left him.

I shall never cease to regret that the small news-boy didn't stay there to hear the end of it.

FIVE DAUGHTERS.—A gentleman had five daughters all of whom he brought up to some respectable calling in life. These daughters married, one after another, with the consent of their father. The first married a gentleman named Poor, the second a Mr. Little, the third a Mr. Short, the fourth a Mr. Brown, and the fifth a Mr. Hogg. At the wedding of the latter, her sisters with their husbands were present. After the ceremonies of the wedding were over, the old gentleman said to his guests:

'I have taken great pains to educate my daughters, that they might act well their parts in life, and from their advantages and improvements, I fondly hoped that they would do honor to the family; and now I find that all my pains, cares and expectations have turned to nothing but a poor, little, short, brown, hogg!'

SCOTCHY ANECDOTE.—Returning from invigorating bath at the North Easton Hotel, Fleetwood, a person entered into friendly chat with a native of the 'Land o' Cakes,' who, along with his wife, was imbibing the pure breeze upon the pier.—The subject turned upon the baths, which the Englishman much extolled, and in his exuberance observed that it was worth one's while to give a shilling to see them, they were so beautifully fitted up. With that characteristic keenness for saving which so much distinguishes his countryman, the Scotchman asked,—'How muckle do ye pay for a bath?' 'Sixpence,' was the reply. 'Man,' said he, 'ye wad save a saxpence by bathing.'

A Wisconsin paper after describing a farm which the advertiser wants to sell, adds: "The surrounding country is the most beautiful the God of Nature ever made—the scenery is celestial—divine; also two waggons to sell, and a yoke of steers."

SMART BOY.—The first day that a little fellow went to school, the teacher asked him if he could spell. 'Oh, yes, indeed,' answered he, looking very important. 'Well how do you spell 'boy?' 'Oh, just as other people do.'

A Boy having complained to his father that Bill had thrown the Bible at him, and hurt him on the head, the father replied: 'Well, you are the only member of my family on whom the Bible made the least impression.

'That fellow!' said a creditor, "told me that he would make a shift to pay all his debts before next Christmas. What did he mean by that?" Meant that he'd pay them out of his wife's property, I suppose,' replied the jester.

Barnum says: 'I never patronize a business that don't advertise, for the reason that I invariably get cheated. The pernicious principle that prevents a man from keeping his business before the people will prevent him from selling cheap.'

Come Bridget, get up! Here 'tis Monday morning. To-morrow's Tuesday, next day's Wednesday—half a week gone and nothing done yet!

When must a mariner suffer most from unrequited affection? When he is attached to a vessel that is attached to a wharf.

AMERICAN
Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering
SEWING MACHINE!
COMPANY,
627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLE S made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses; thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary.

One Needle and Two Thread Machine only $40

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indispensible for Button-holes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, shaded or chine silks, and produces a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste.

To Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak maker, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c., it is indispensable; it is also admitted to be of great value, to other branches as it Braids, Embroiders, and cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c. &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleaker where instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P. S.—A novel patented BUTTON-HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

Machine, $125.00; Button-Hole Cutter, $5.00.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they would be thrilled, bewildered with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate, showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five: For $2, eleven; For $5, thirty; For $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle That have greater strength, and will remain in longer in tune than any other piano The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old fangled plan of stringing by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Driggs is the inventor By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
M. x Maretzek,	S. Thalberg.
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Barili
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strakosch,
Wm. Henry Fry.	Charle Fradel

Mr. EGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never had excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal versimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5:—Upon a careful examination of Driggs' Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilliancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It is in singing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand in no Forte and they must speedily supersceed the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr S. R. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power this approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

$10 A DAY to AGENTS.

LLOYDS' GREAT TOPOGRAPHICAL RAILWAY and COUNTY MAP of ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND and WALES—Six feet large, mounted and varnished—cost $100,000 and four years time; was finished July 28, and is the best map ever made since the world was first made; shows 200,000 cities, towns, villages, market places, post offices, castles, country seats and 28,000 railways and railway stations, with the distance between each station marked plainly, and the official name and total length of each railway in actual operation up to June, 1865, is given The railway stations are all numerically and alphabetically arranged. The lakes, rivers, hills and mountains are exhibited, with the altitude of each in feet, made from trigonometrical surveys by our own engineers, draughtsmen and Photogrepiers sent to England expressly to make a superior one of that country; the whole engraved on steel, colored superbly in counties, mounted and varnished. Price 8 shillings sterling ($2). No map at $10 can compare to this Canvassers throughout the world wanted. Also men, with a small capital, to go to Canada, Chicago, Cincinnati, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, East and West Indies, Australia and California, to open offices. Can make a fortune wholesaling this and other maps to sub-agents. Eighty thousand copies of this map were subscribed for in England before going to press, as can be shown to our agents letters to us. Ten new maps now under way

Relief in Ten Minutes.

BRYAN'S
PULMONIC WAFERS!

The most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered for all diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, Difficult Breathing, Sore Throat &c. &c.

THESE Wafers give the most instantaneous and perfect relief, when persevered with according to directions never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health, who have tried other means in vain. To all classes and all constitutions they are a blessing and cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or how severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly decayed. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

TO VOCALISTS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS, these Wafers are peculiarly valuable, they will in one day remove the most severe occasional hoarseness and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and infallibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass, and clearness, of which purpose they are regularly used by many Professional Vocalists.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S
CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

THIS well-known Medicine is no imposition, but is a safe and sure remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

Poetry.

The Dirty Little Boy and what Befell Him.

There was a dirty little boy,
Who's hands were never clean;
Oh, such a grubby urchin
Had ne'er before been seen!

And how he wore his clothes out,
You hardly would believe:
He used to spit upon his slate,
And wipe it with his sleeve.

He shocked and grieved his parents,
Who did his state deplore,
And said: "If you go on like this,
You'll turn a blackamoor!"

"So dark your skin is growing,
You're such a ragged figure,
Your friends will all begin to think
That you're a little nigger!"

He did not heed the warning,
But blacker grew his skin;
His clothes were all in tatters,
So ragged and so thin!

At length a Planter met him,
And popped him in a sack,
And sent him hoeing sugar,
Because he was so black.

And still in that plantation
He toils with grief and pain—
For though he tends the sugar,
He only gets the cane.

My little boy if you are wise,
You'll scrub your hands with vigour,
And mind your clothes or else you may
Be taken for a nigger.

SOLD AGAIN.

I was standing quietly on the front steps of the custom house the other day, looking assuredly at a beautiful creature sitting at one of the parlor windows of the Battle House, and trying to discover whether she was an old acquaintance of mine from the country, when a strange young man, with a limp in his walk came up and stopped near me

'I'll swear it's mighty hot walking for a lame man to-day,' said he.

Whether the remark was addressed to me or to society at large, I did not think it worth while to inquire, but simply said in reply:—

'I shoul! think so, really. May I ask how you came to be lame?'

This was an impertinent question, I know; but as he had provoked it I did not think there could be any harm in it.

'Certainly, sir,' said he 'I got hurt, and very badly too, in a personal difficulty I had with a Northern man named Meade.'

'Ah, indeed!' said I.

'Yes; the thing created a good deal of excitement at the time, and as an account of it was published in all the news papers, both North and South, you must have read something about it.'

'Not a word, I assure you. When and where did it happen?'

'Why a little over two years ago,' said he 'at a town in Pennsylvania, called Gettysburg.'

'Sold again and got the money!' shouted a small news-boy, who was standing by and heard the conversation, but who now took to his heels.

'My gallant young friend,' said I 'I acknowledge the corn cheerfully. And speaking of corn—do you ever drink anything?' at the same time tossing my head in the direction of the nearest drinking saloon.

'Very rarely,' was the reply; but when I do, it's generally about this time of day.'

'Well,' said I, 'as you are doubtless in a hurry to get to the grocery, I wont detain you any longer.'

And I walked on and left him.

I shall never cease to regret that the small news-boy didn't stay there to hear the end of it.

FIVE DAUGHTERS.—A gentleman had five daughters all of whom he brought up to some respectable calling in life. These daughters married, one after another, with the consent of their father. The first married a gentleman named Poor, the second a Mr. Litt'e, the third a Mr. Short, the fourth a Mr. Brown, and the fifth a Mr. Hogg. At the wedding of the latter, her sisters with their husbands were present. After the ceremonies of the wedding were over, the old gentleman said to his guests:

'I have taken great pains to educate my daughters, that they might act well their parts in life, and from their advantages and improvements, I fondly hoped that they would do honor to the family; and now I find that all my pains, cares and expectations have turned to nothing but a poor, little, short, brown, hogg!'

SCOTCHY ANECDOTE.—Returning from invigorating bath at the North Easton Hotel, Fleetwood, a person entered into friendly chat with a native of the 'Land o' Cakes,' who, along with his wife, was inhaling the pure breeze upon the pier.—The subject turned upon the baths, which the Englishman much extolled, and in his exuberance observed that it was worth one's while to give a shilling to see them, they were so beautifully fitted up. With that characteristic keenness for saving which so much distinguishes his countryman, the Scotchman asked,—How muckle do ye pay for a bath?' 'Sixpence,' was the reply. 'Man,' said he, 'ye wad save a saxpence by bathing.'

A Wisconsin paper after describing a farm which the advertiser wants to sell, adds: "The surrounding country is the most beautiful the God of Nature ever made—the scenery is celestial—divine; also two waggons to sell, and a yoke of steers."

SMART BOY.—The first day that a little fellow went to school, the teacher asked him if he could spell. 'Oh, yes, indeed,' answered he, looking very important. 'Well how do you spell 'boy?' 'Oh, just as other people do.'

A Boy having complained to his father that Bill had thrown the Bible at him, and hurt him on the head, the father replied: Well, you are the only member of my family on whom the Bible made the least impression.

"That fellow!" said a creditor, "told me that he would make a shift to pay all his debts before next Christmas. What did he mean by that?" Meant that he'd pay them out of his wife's property, I suppose,' replied the jester.

Barnum says: 'I never patronize a business that don't advertise, for the reason that I invariably get cheated. The pernicious principle that prevents a man from keeping his business before the people will prevent him from selling cheap.'

Come Bridget, get up! Here 'tis Monday morning. To-morrow's Tuesday, next day's Wednesday—half a week gone and nothing done yet!

When must a mariner suffer most from unrequited affection? When he is attached to a vessel that is attached to a wharf.

AMERICAN

Button-hole, Cording, Braiding and Embroidering

SEWING MACHINE!

COMPANY,

627 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

THE BUTTON HOLE Stitch made by this entirely simple and novel machine, are not only equal to the best hand-made in the pearl or right side, but greatly surpassing them in beauty on the wrong side, which is formed by a beautiful braid stitch, made by an extra stitch, which no hand made button-hole possesses; thereby imparting to the same a much greater strength, which renders cording or barring altogether unnecessary.

One Needle and Two Thread only Used.

Unlike other Sewing Machines it manufactures its own Braid and Cord.

The best Merchant Tailors freely admit that its beauty, finish and strength cannot be attained by the most skilful hand.

Simplicity is one of its great merits, therefore not liable to get out of order, and it can be worked with ease by any young lady, who will, after a few days' experience, make from 1,000 to 1,200 perfect button-holes in one day.

This is the only machine produced that will throw a stitch over the edge, so as to bind and cover it in a manner indispensible for Button-holes, Cording and Braiding, each of which can be done with colored, shaded or chine silks, and produce a fabrique of varied colors unexcelled for beauty and taste.

Ladies at home, Dress, Mantilla and Cloak makers, Shoemakers, Tailors, Hatters, Bookbinders, Saddlers, &c., &c., it is indispensable; it is also admitted to be of great value to other branches as it Braids, Embroiders, and Cords plain and fancy on all kinds of Cloths, Cassimers, Linen, Velvet Leather, &c., &c.

Instructions and Needles accompany each Machine.

Every Machine is Warranted for Twelve Months.

Machines can be seen in full operation at our spacious Store, 627 Broadway, near Bleeker where instruction Rooms are reserved for Ladies.

P. S.—A novel patented BUTTON-HOLE Cutter for sale which shall in all cases accompany a Button Hole Machine.

Machine, $125.00; Button-Hole Cutter, $5.00.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. The stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, etc, opened on the 15th ult, and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate, showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal, and some seven of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

AR THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle. Tone have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old style frame of stringing by substituting straight bridges, possessing at the same time The Over String Bass, of which Mr. Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Jaell,
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strakosch,
Wm. Henry Fry,	Charle Fradel

Mr. EGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Pianos-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes. They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal sustainitude, that crowning excelence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept 5.—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilliancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. Its singing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; and ordinary player obtains with no exception, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr S. B. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN

SEWING MACHINES.

EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB. 14th, 1860.

Salesrooms, { 536 Broadway, New York. / 252 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principal and mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shoe stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nansook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor CROWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health.

The strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it almost impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply the wants with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

Do in a more especial manner do we elicit the patronage of

Merchant Tailors,	Corset Makers,
Couch Makers,	Gaiter Fitters,
Hoop Skirt Manufacturers,	Shoe Binders,
Shirt and Bosom Makers.	Vest and Pantaloon Makers,

LLOYD'S GREAT TOPOGRAPHICAL RAILWAY and COUNTY MAP of ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND and WALES—Six feet three, mounted and varnished; cost $100,000 and four years time; was finished July 28, and is the best map ever made since the world was found; shows 200,000 cities, towns, villages, market places, post offices, castles, country seats and 36,000 railways and railway stations, with the distance between each station marked plainly, and the official name and total length of each railway in actual operation up to June, 1865, is given. The railway stations are all numerically and alphabetically arranged. The lakes, rivers, hills and mountains are exhibited, with the altitude of each in feet, made from trigonometrical surveys by our own engineers, draughtsmen and Photographers sent to England expressly to make a superior map of that country; the whole engraved on steel, colored superbly in counties, mounted and varnished. Price 8 shillings sterling ($2). No map at $10 can compare to this. Canvassers throughout the world wanted. Also men, with a small capital, to go to Canada, Chicago, Cincinnati, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, East and West Indies, Australia and California, to open offices. Can make a fortune wholesaling this and other maps to sub-agents. Eighty thousand copies of this map were subscribed for in England before going to press, as can be shown by our agents letters to us. Ten new maps now under way

BRYAN'S

PULMONIC WAFERS!

The most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered for all diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, Difficult Breathing, Sore Throat &c. &c.

THESE Wafers give the most instantaneous and perfect relief, when persevered with according to directions never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health, who have tried other means in vain. To all classes and all constitutions they are a blessing and cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or how severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly decayed. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

TO VOCALISTS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS.

These Wafers are peculiarly valuable, they will in one day remove the most severe occasional hoarseness and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and flexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass, and clearness, of which purpose they are regularly used by many Professional Vocalists.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a safe and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever, and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

COME HOME, FATHER.

Father, dear father, come home with me now!
The clock in the steeple strikes one;
You said you were coming right home from the shop
As soon as your day's work was done.
Our fire has gone out—our house is all dark—
And mother's been watching since ten,
With poor little Benny, so sick, in her arms,
And no one to help her but me.
Come home! come home! come home!
Please, father, dear father, come home!

Father, dear father, come home with me now!
The clock in the steeple strikes two;
The night has grown colder—and Benny is worse—
But he has been calling for you.
Indeed he is worse—Ma says he will die,
Perhaps before morning shall dawn!
And this is the message she sent me to bring—
Come quickly, or he will be gone!

Father, dear father, come home with me now!
The clock in the steeple strikes three;
The house is so lonely—the hours are so long
For weeping mother and me!
Yes, we are alone—poor Benny is dead
And gone with the angels of light;
And these were the very last words that he said:
"I want to kiss papa to-night!"
Come home! come home! come home!
Please, father dear father, come home!

Hear the sweet voice of the child,
Which the night-winds repeat as they roam;
Oh! who could resist this most plaintive of prayers,
Please father, dear father, come home!

HOW SHE SAVED HIM.

BY MRS. M. A. DALES.

Max Benton was lying asleep under the elms on Hillsdale Common, when a lively "Wake up, old boy!" and a slap on the shoulder aroused him.

Hallo! is that you, Sam? cried Max, in a cordial tone, springing up and grasping his friend's hand, When did you return to Millsdale?

Only a week ago replied Sam Maynor, as they seated themselves for a chat. But I——

A week! echoed Max, looking a little offended! why didn't you let me know of your arrival before?

I was about to tell you, said Maynor, apologetically, that my wife and I—you remember, I wrote you I married—have been so busy furnishing the cottage which I have bought, I hasn't had a moment to spare.

Bought a house? asked Max, looking comically surprised, how the deuce did you get money to make such a purchase? Married a rich wife, eh?

No, denied Sam. Lucy is as poor as myself. The way in which I have secured me a home is this: I paid one hundred dollars down, and the mortgage, remaining on the cottage, I am to clear off by making yearly payments. I wish, Max, you would marry some good capable girl, and settle down in the cottage next to ours; you can buy it on the same terms as I did mine, and we could have jolly times together!

So we could, agreed Max, with animation. But it would take me forever to get a house in this way.

Not if you had a cheerful, industrious, and saving wife, responded Sam, confidently. There! I have just thought of a little girl who would make you a capital wife—pretty, smart, and of an excellent disposition!—What do you say to that old boy? giving Max a nudge in the ribs.

I—I—stammered Max, I have already picked me out a wife? in fact I'm going to be married this very week. Will you come to the wedding?

Certainly! But who is the lady?

I think she is a stranger to you, replied Benton—her name is Abby Kent.

Heavens!

What do you say 'heavens' in that way for?

His friend seemed loath to answer, but at length he said, seriously:—

Max, when you get a home of your own you want it to be a pleasant and orderly one, I know. You don't want your hard-earned money wasted, do you?

Of course I don't! was the other's ready reply, while he wondered what his companion was driving at.

Then, said Sam, don't marry Abby Kent. I know her well, he quickly added, as an angry flush began to burn on Benton's face, and can truthfully assure you that, for all she makes so neat an appearance, her habits are slovenly and extravagant. I learned this just as I was on the point of popping the question, for I used to court her myself.

You have got some grudge against her, which makes you speak so, retorted Max, testily. I have never seen any evidence in her of the failings you speak about. When I have been at her house, I have many times observed her assisting her mother in the housework, and have particularly noticed her neat habits.

This was done to deceive you, Max, maintained Sam. Her parents have reared her in idleness. It is very seldom she has heart or willingness to lighten her old mother's labor. I heard the other day that Mr. Kent's house was mortgaged, and I have no doubt it was caused by her daughter's love of dress and show.

I shall marry her said Max, a little defiantly—yes, and will take that cottage you spoke of, also; and you will find I will have it paid for as soon as you will yours.

I hope and pray that you may be prosperous and happy in your marriage, replied Sam, fervently; though, he added to himself you never will be as her husband I am afraid.

It was not long after Sam Maynor had moved into his snug home, that his friend Max came with his wife to dwell in the adjoining cottage, which he had purchased by the same agreement Maynor had made in buying his. There was something attractive to Abby in the idea of having a home of her own to control; and stimulated by this feeling she made the little cottage a model of taste and neatness. Still she did not hesitate to gratify herself, out of her husband's small means, in as rich dresses as her parents had indulged her in before her marriage. With the clamour of the honeymoon before his eyes, and elated with her neat housekeeping, Max did not reproach her, for he was proud of her looks, and surmised that the beautiful and expensive purchases she now made would last her for years. But when, after a short time, he saw the carelessly kept articles in ruin, and she still demanded money to buy others, he began to look at reality, feeling if she continued her expensive course the debt on their home which he was working so hard and ambitiously to pay, would never be cleared.

The despondency which thus began gradually to come over his new life, deepened when Abby, no longer stimulated by novelty, ceased her labors in the cottage. When he failed to supply her with all the money she wanted, she would complain, regretting she ever married so poor a man as he was, to be nothing but a drudge and live in a hut, as she styled her happy home. Her discontent was heightened by her mother, who now declared if it had not been for that love-in-a-cottage fancy, she might have married rich. Thus, poor Max already seeing his error in his foolish marriage, was assailed unceasingly by his wife's fretfulness and neglect. The old adage of 'throwing out with a shovel what is brought in with a spoon,' was well illustrated by her wastefulness. There was no cheerfulness, no pleasant tempting meal to comfort him now, as he returned at noon or night to his neglected home. He still loved Abby but she gave him only light affection, for her own love of dress and show absorbed all her true love, if indeed she had even entertained any for him. He often asked her to be less extravagant, more careful in her housekeeping, but she only returned him bitter, independent replies, little dreaming of the wretchedness she was bringing upon herself and him. A darkness was before her preventing her from seeing her faults. Max Benton was not one to complain much, and pride forbade him to tell her, as some would in plain terms of her shortcomings; so he suffered in silence, and often wondered with a shudder what a few years of such life would make him.

Max had been married two years, when a daughter—a cherub—was born to brighten with her wee, magical presence the desolation in his heart and home—giving, even to its light-minded mother, some idea of what pure joy was. Max was happier than he had been since the first day of his marriage, and thought, as he held his dimpled baby May on his knee, he would not murmur about his many disappointments as long as God spared her to him. Poor Max! It wasn't a year later ere the death angel came to put its seal, even while her lips and cheeks were rosy, upon the little darling. Its mother went into hysterics when she died, but Max helped to lay his child out, and followed her to her little cemetery grave without a tear. Yet Sam Maynor, who knew his friend's nature, felt that he carried a broken heart beneath his outward calmness. He feared, from this moment, for the moral safety of his poor friend, and his apprehension were soon realized. Max had not been in the habit of using strong drink, but now all his leisure hours were spent in the bar-room, and not a day passed but some part of it found him under the influence of the fatal cup. Sam's kindly efforts to reclaim him were in vain, his wife declared that she would leave him if he did not reform; and the mortgage of his little cottage threatened to foreclose if the long due payments were not soon called in; yet all these warnings of shame had no effect to call him back. Max was indifferent to everything now; he ceased his work almost altogether, so that want of money was soon felt at his once comfortable home. Abby still lingered there in its wretchedness, for fear of the talk which a separation from him would create. When Max returned home it was never to hear any gentle remonstrance from her on his conduct, but to brave the harsh, bitter talk which she threw at him. Lately he spent his nights where she knew not, but she surmised in the tavern, which privilege the landlord allowed him no doubt for bring the most constant custom at the bar.

One afternoon Max came home terribly intoxicated, and being more than usually enraged at her bitter talk, struck his wife violently in his face, and then staggered from the house. The wretched wife now determined to separate from him, and only waited for the night to execute her resolve, for she feared to go into the street before them on account of her badly bruised face; but having locked the door to prevent her husband entering, she sat down to meditation.

As she was leaving the house that night to seek her mother, an involuntary prompting caused her to go to the little grape arbor in their garden. The perfumed shade of this place was so grateful to her feverish pulse, that she seated herself there for a little while.

The garden of Sam Mayor joined theirs; and soon after entering the arbor she saw Mr. Maynor and his wife pass from their house out under the fruit trees, where they stopped.

Lucy, she heard him say, I have got good news to tell you. This afternoon I made the last payment on our house and took up the note; and now I am going to buy you the best melodeon that can be found in Hillsdale, to pay you for being such a good, careful little wife; for it is owing to your economy and orderly housekeeping, that I have been enabled to free our home from a debt so much sooner than I expected.

Abby was ashamed to listen, but something made her continue her breathless attention to their conversation. The next moment Mrs. Maynor said:—

I am very thankful, Sam, both for your promised present, and that our dear little home is free. Do you know how your friend Max is getting along with the payments on his cottage?

Abby trembled a little, and a feeling of shame was within her as she awaited for Sam's answer.

Poor fellow! sighed Maynor, he hasn't paid his mortgage anything for over a year. The latter told me this afternoon that he could not wait for him any longer, but should foreclose immediately. Thank God! continued, Sam, fervently, that I did not marry Abby Kent. I could almost curse the wretched woman for the ruin she has brought upon one of the best fellows that ever lived. I have often wondered, though, if she realized that her extravagance and her cheerless home was the real cause of his degrading habits.—How different Max would have been with such a wife as you are, Lucy.

They passed into their home—the home where love and order and happiness dwelt; while Abby Benton, sitting till now like a statue, wailed out:—

O, can it be that I am to blame for all our misery? I can hardly believe it. Yet, Max was good and temperate and happy, once; and now I remember it. It was in those days when I made our home so pleasant and neat. Yes, it must be my fault that we are wretched, but the light has broken at last, thank God. What would I not give to have Max as happy and prosperous as Sam Maynor! He shall be if a new and better life on my part can make him! But what if it should be too late for me to influence him?—I cannot bear the thought! I will plead with him to renounce his degrading course, and labor with me for home and happiness!

She rose, and entered the cottage a new being; for the fire in her heart was not the vain and worldly one which had created her own and husband's misery, but an unmatured longing to labor for the light and joy of home—Max did not return that night—nor until the stars were beaming the succeeding one. Then he entered what, to his hardly sober sense, seemed fairy land. The little kitchen was fairly shining with order and neatness. The lights were softly burning, the fire was glowing brightly from the polished stove; while upon the little table, drawn up with its snowy drapings before it, was the tempting evening meal prepared with neatness and care to which he had long been a stranger. The delicious sense of comfort—the great surprise of the young man kept him silent. So, without a word he suffered his wife to help him put on the warm, clean suit she had prepared, for the one he had on was muddy and torn, and then led him to the table where the fragrant cup of tea awaited him. She could not eat herself—her heart was too full of blended hope and fear, so she left the table and sat down by the stove opposite Max. The kind of spell which had until now been upon the young man was dissolved by seeing the great tear-drops which gushed from her eyes through her half-closed fingers. He was beside her in a minute and drew her to his heart.

Darling! he said, in a voice that thrilled her, yesterday I went out unloved and despairing from a comfortless home, but now you have turned it into a little palace—dressed me in warm, clean clothes, and placed before me such a supper. What does it all mean, Abby?

Max! and her arms went round his neck.—Oh, dear Max, it means that you are to have a true wife hereafter—one to cheer and help and love you! And now, she added beseechingly, promise me to quit the dreadful rumcup for my sake, dear husband—for the sake of the little angel May, say that you will.

Max Benton could not answer then, for his exceeding joy at knowing that this new brightness around him was to be continued, prevented him from speaking. But with a happy look and resolved tone, he said, after a little silence:—

Yes, my dear wife, I will become a temperate man, and we will strive together for the true life which will secure us at least a bright eternal one with our little May!

A THRILLING INCIDENT.

The first settlers in Maine found, besides its red faced owners, an abundant sources of annoyance and danger.

The majestic forests which then waved where now is heard the hum of busy men, and where a thousand villages stand were the homes of innumerable wild and savage animals.

Often at night was the farmer's family aroused from sleep by the noise without—which told that brum was storming the pig sties or sheep pen, or was laying violent paws on some unlucky calf—and often on a cold winter evening did they roll a larger log against the door, and with beating hearts draw closer around the fire, as the dismal howl of the wolf echoed through the woods.

The wolf was the most ferocious and blood thirsty, but cowardly of all—rarely attacking a man unless driven by severe hunger, and seeking his victim with the utmost pertinacity.

The incident which I am about to relate occurred in the early history of Biddeford. A man who then lived on a farm now occupied by Mr. H——was one autumn engaged in felling trees, at some distance from his house. His little son, eight years old, was in the habit, while his mother was busy with household cares, of running out into the fields and woods around the house, and often going where the father was at work. One day, after the frost had robbed the trees of their foliage, the father hearing his work sooner than usual started for home.

On his way, just at the edge of the forest he saw a curious pile of leaves. Without stopping to think what had made it, he very cautiously removed the leaves, when what was his astonishment to find his own darling boy laying there fast asleep. 'Twas but the work of a moment to take up the little sleeper—put in his place a small log carefully replace the leaves, and conceal himself among the nearest bushes, there to await the result.

After waiting a short time, he heard a wolf's distant howl quickly followed by another, till the whole woods seemed alive with the fearful sounds.

The howls came nearer, and in a few minutes a large, gaunt, savage looking wolf leaped in to the opening closely followed by the whole pack. The leader a strong direct-ly upon the pile of leaves, and in an instant scattered them in every direction.

As soon as he saw the deception his look of fierceness and confidence changed to the most abject fear. He shrunk back, cowered down to the ground, and dismayed awaited his fate, for the rest enraged by the supposed cheat, fell upon him, and tore him in pieces and devoured him on the spot.

Predicted Downfall of Napoleon III.

Some one, curious in the statistics of fatality has been making calculations to show that Napoleon III, will come to his downfall in 1869. The calculations are founded on some very odd coincidences of dates, which we will try to explain. In the first place, they take the dates of the principal events in the history of Louis Phillippe and his Queen, which they group together so as to sum up 1848, the year of his downfall. Thus Louis Phillippe was born in 1773 and ascended the throne in 1830. Now to 1830 add separately the figures 1,7,7,3, of his birth date, and they make 1848, thus: 1830 and 1 and 7 and 7 and 3 make 1848. The same result is reached if we take the year of his marriage. That event occurred in 1809 and he ascended the throne in 1830. Now 1830 and 1 and 8 and 0 and 9 make 1848. Again, if we take the date of his Queen's birth 1782, and go through the same process—1830 and 1 and 7 and 8 and 2, we arrive at the same fatal year, 1848, in which he lost his throne.

The second part of the calculation is this; Napoleon III. was born in 1808, and ascended the throne in 1852. Now, if we start with 1852, and the separate figures in his birth year, we come to 1869—for 1852 and 1 and 8 and 0 and 8 make 1869. So, too of his Empress. Eugenie was born in 1836. Taking the date of his accent to the throne in 1852, we have: 1852 and 1 and fatal 1859. He married Eugenie in 1853, 8 and 2 and 6—again bringing us to the and taking the year 1852 and adding the separate figures of his marriage year, and if still points to 1869. Thus 1852 and 1 and 8 and 5 and 3 make 1869. In fact, these French historical dates are full of such curious adication. Robespierre fell in 1794. Taking that date and adding the separate figures of it as above, and we have 1794—and 1 and 7 and 9 and 4—making the date of Napoleon's fall, 1815. Pursuing the same method, we take 1815 and 1 and 8 and 1 and 5, making 1830, the date of Charles X's fall. Going on to 1848, the date of Louis Philippe's downfall, and we find that 1848 and 1 and 8 and 4 and 8 brings us once more to the fatal 1869.

But there is still another fatality attending these French dynasties, which is put in this form: Seventeen years was the limit of the supremacy of Napoleon I.; seventeen years the resorted Bourbons reigned: seventeen years Louis Phillippe occupied the throne; and the same seventeen years being accorded to Napoleon III., it carries him to the same fated 1869 as the end of his career. And this fatal seventeen is also produced by strange coincidences.—Taking the figures in the year of his birth, 1808, and adding them up thus, 1 and 8 and 0 and 8, and they sum up 17: taking the figures in the year of the Empress' birth, 1826, and adding them, 1 and 8 and 2 and 6, and they also make 17, then taking the figures in the year of his marriage, 1583, 1 and 8 and 5 and 3, and they likewise foot up 17.

These coincidences are extraordinary enough to set the wonder-mongers at work, and some of them see the finger of fate in it all. And it not unfrequently happens that such shadowy prophecies set influences in motion that enable them to work out their own fulfilment. The Bonapartes are all confirmed fatalists, and these things may cause the present head of the family a great many anxieties about 1869.

PRAISE YOUR WIFE.

Praise your wife, man; for pity's sake give her a little encouragement; it won't hurt her. She has made your home comfortable, your hearth shining and bright, your food agreeable; for pity's sake tell her you thank her, if nothing more. She don't expect it; it will make her eyes open wider than they have been for these ten years; but it will do her good, for all that, and you too.

There are many women to-day thirsting for the word of praise, the language of encouragement. Through summer's heat and winter's cold they have drudged uncomplainingly, and so accustomed have their fathers, brothers and husbands become to their monotonous labors, that they look for and upon them as they do the daily rising of the sun, and its daily going down.—Homely, everyday life, may be made beautiful by an appreciation of its very homeliness. You know that if the floor is clean, manual labor has been performed to make it so. You know that if you can take from your drawer a clean shirt whenever you want it, somebody's fingers have ached in the toil of making it so fresh and agreeable so smooth and lustrous. Everything that pleases the eye and sense has been produced by constant work, much thought, great care and untiring efforts bodily and mentally.

I tell you what, men, young and old, if you did but show an ordinary civility toward that common article of house-keeping, your wives; if you gave the one hundredth and sixtieth part of the compliments you almost choked them with before you were married; if you would cease to speak of their faults, however bewitchingly, before others, fewer women would seek for other sources of happiness than your cold so-so ish affection. Praise your wife then, for all the good qualities she has, and you may rest assured that her deficiencies are fully counterbalanced by your own.

A Glasgow antiquary recently visited Caimcart Castle, and asked one of the villagers, "If he knew anything of the old story about the building?" "Ay," said the rustic, "there was summer and winter, but it fell down long since."

Something for Everybody.

When you walk in the streets with a lady, keep your hands out of your pockets, and your cigar out of your mouth. Don't change sides with her on crossing the streets; it is quite as proper that you should fall through cellar doors and other traps set by careless people, as that she should. Always take the right hand when you meet another person, and don't stop. At the table, take the dish the last offers you, and don't pass it to the nearest neighbor, even if a lady; it is ungentlemanly to reprove your host or hostess to his or her face. There is a point where self abnegation becomes rudeness, and this is precisely the point. The person who gives the entertainment has a perfect right to say which shall be served first. Don't offer your chair to a newcomer, unless it is the only one of the kind, and the best in the room. Rise when another guest leaves the house where you are entertained, but do not follow to the door—you may thus spoil a more cordial leave-taking. Keep your fingers out of your button-holes, and your hands from off your lap. Make yourself as comfortable as you can without inconveniencing any one. Your host, if a gentleman, always likes to see his guests comfortable and contented, be neither a pump nor a pumper, but alternately resume both conditions. Ask and answer questions with diplomatic propriety. Speak well of people or speak not at all. Nothing indicates greater defect of colloquial ability than vituperations, slander, or angry declamation. Maintain repose of the earth quakes. All of which is respectfully submitted to those who would be recognized as persons of good breeding.

MR. GURNEY'S DOG.

This touching tale was told by a friend of the late Mr. Hudson Gurney. He says:

One morning I was sitting on business with Mr. Gurney, when I heard a pattering of feet behind, and the door silently opened. I turned to see who was its enemy to us, and the Newfoundland dog quietly entered the room, and, standing in the centre, looked on me coldly, and on his master kindly.

This, said Mr. Gurney, is one of my most faithful friends; he has come to pay me his usual morning visit. Turning to the dog he continued,—I am a little better today, but not much; one morning you will miss me! I shall be dead.

The dog as though endowed with human instinct, gave a low moan, and advancing to his master, placed his huge paw, with a gentleness that would hardly have crushed a fly, on Mr. Gurney's knee; that done he raised himself on his hind legs and placed the other on Mr. Gurney's shoulder, and licking his face, seemed to put him on the back with an expression of countenance which almost said—"Come, come, don't be downhearted! You are very sick, but you'll get better by and by!

Mr. Gurney perfectly understood him, and replied, 'It's no use; I tell you I shall die! The dog moaned again. 'And now,' continued the owner of Keswick, 'you must go; for I am busy with this gentleman.'

The dog looked at his master then at me, and then silently quitted the room.—About a month after Mr Gurney was a corpse.

PROPHECY BY THE POPE.—A story is going the round of the Neapolitan papers in regard to a prophesy made by Pio IX, when in conversation with a high Spanish personage. It remains to be seen who the Holiness is as good at a prophesy as Mathieu(de la Drome.) The Holy Father says:—"Unfortunately it is to be learned that the year 1866 will be one in which a great deal of blood will be shed. The fire of the demagogues will burst forth in many parts of Europe; however, the dreadful conflagration will have finished in 1867, when peace will be re-established, Rome will view with grief a second exaction of the scenes of 1849, and the Pope will be obliged to abandon the City of the Church as a fugitive. In 1867, when the Pope returns to the Vatican (!) a grand council will be assembled, and the centenary of St. Peter will be celebrated. In 1868, you will be present at my funeral.

MARRIED AND SINGLE.—It has been observed that a married man falling into misfortune is more apt to retrieve his situation in the world than a single one, partly because he is more stimulated to exertion by the necessities of the helpless and beloved beings who depend upon him for subsistence, but chiefly because his spirits are soothed, and renewed by domestic endearments, and his self-respect kept alive by finding that although all abroad is darkness and humiliation, yet there is still a little world of love at home of which he is the monarch. Whereas a single man is apt to run waste and self-neglect, to fancy himself lonely and abandoned, and his heart to fall to ruin, like some deserted mansion for want of inhabitants.

Molly was telling an absurd dream, when her mistress exclaimed, you must have been asleep when you dreamed such stuff as that! No indeed, ma'am, she replied tartly, I was just as wide awake as I am now.

What is the difference between a piece of honeycomb and a black eye? One is produced by a laboring bee, and the other by a balooning.

What is the difference between accepted and rejected lovers? The accepted kneels the misses, and the rejected misses the knees.

An old lady hearing some body say, the mails are very irregular, said, "It was just so in my young days, so trusting any of 'em."

What is the difference between Mexico and Ireland? Mexico has got is Maximilian, and Ireland wants a million o' Micks.

Sleighing and skating are "under the weather."

CONFEDERATION CERTAIN.

At the late dinner given to Ministers at Cornwall, John A. McDonald, referring to the Coalition and Mr. Brown, said that Mr. Brown had left now simply because he disagreed on the Reciprocity question. He (Mr. McDonald) thought Mr. Brown was in error: Mr. Brown conscientiously thought he should retire. It was only due to Mr. Brown to say this. He believed Mr. Brown would continue to give assistance and his influence to carry Confederation, and that it was now certain in a few weeks!

From Halifax papers it is now understood that the Newfoundland legislature has adopted the Quebec Scheme by a decisive vote. In the Lower House it was carried by a vote of 19 to 7 and in the Upper House unanimously, only a few modifications being proposed, but these are not of such a nature as to cause any difficulty. If we mistake not, this province held out against it until lately, and the change will have a very beneficial effect in bringing about the speedy adherence of the other provinces that have not been very warm in the matter. We may therefore look to the completion of the whole scheme at a very early day. What influence brought about this remarkable change may be brought to bear with the same effect in the other province. Newfoundland is the first of the Maritime Province to give a formal acknowledgment to the wisdom of the confederation principles. It is also admitted that governor Gordon, of New Brunswick, intimated to Lord Monck that New Brunswick accepts confederation, and is ready to unite with Canada to give immediate effect, through a new ministry to be chosen from the leaders of both parties.

It is now considered certain, Nova Scotia will very soon follow, and ere another season has come and gone we may realize the healthy effect of union. This Union is not going to be a one-sided affair in, which Canada, or New Brunswick, or Nova Scotia, or any one of the Provinces, is about to be the only gainer. There will be mutual and reciprocal advantages to all, as well as strength. A Coalition may soon be chronicled in New Brunswick, and thus Canada has been enabled to afford a lesson to our sister Provinces, in carrying out the great idea of a British North American nation. It is to be regretted that minor points, (if such they may be called) have separated from the Union the great Reform leader of Upper Canada. He, however, will no doubt lend his aid to bring about the scheme which he has planned or inaugurated, and may yet take a leading part in the working of it.

In view of the certainty of Confederation, the American mind may very soon undergo important changes on the question of Reciprocity. The great West can never be satisfied with trade so restricted and shut in. They will be the loosers in the end, and the voice of the consumer may yet be unmistakably heard in demanding free trade with the Provinces. It is significant that at the very time when the older nations of Europe are seeking and promulgating free trade, the Republic of the United States is shutting her people in by most oppressive tariffs. It is ominous, too, that no sooner was it known that the delegates had left Washington than lumber advanced $4 per M. The consumers are likely to have to pay the penalties of protecting a few manufacturers, who are wielding undue influence in political circles just now. Confederation at such an opportune time will open up trade that at other times would be lost sight of.

Mr. Galt, at Cornwall, said that during last seven months, we had sold $10,000,000 worth of our products more than we had bought, which never was the case before.

FENIANA.

This great scare, got up to put money into the pockets of a few looters, is attracting considerable attention in Ireland, and some little in England; and that there appears to be any alarm about the dismemberment of the nation, or the successful issue of any uprising either in Ireland or America, but because of the folly of any such undertaking, and lest the rash act of one or two desperadoes may cause a feeling of insecurity in Canada, or indeed unessy and unsettled island. Numerous noisy meetings have been and are still being held in various cities and towns in the United States, but nothing has been done more or less than to make bunkum, speeches and solicit contributions to the great swindle. So long as matters remain as now, no one need fear. The leaders have no money; this they must have before they can hope to mobilize any number of volunteers for the Republic. Arms, ammunition, clothing, transports, are all to be obtained, and are not likely to be got without it.—The American people will never grant them any aid. They may allow them to call meetings and make flaming speeches, which they will hereafter turn into ridicule, as well as laugh at now; but beyond this they will not go. No one need fear. Precautions are being taken to prevent anything in the way of a raid into Canada. Both Governments will amply provide against anything of that kind; and it is not at all likely that there will be any commotion among the Brotherhood of Canada. It is, however, false to suppose that we have none in Canada; we most certainly have, but they are few, and not foolish enough to engage in any enterprize that would bring certain destruction upon themselves. The great noise about driving Canadian vessels off the Lakes, will end in the manner it began, in windy vaporations. In Ireland there may be trouble, as there the powers of the Fenian Brotherhood may be demonstratively stronger in rural districts than in Canada. But there will scarcely be an uprising of any magnitude; we might say none at all, more than perhaps a row at a fair.

People now, therefore, read the Fenian speeches and admire or disapprove of the spirit of bravery thus fetched forth, in the greatest calmness of mind, tranquil as the smoothest waters. The time for the deliverance of that sin-cursed, yet lovely island is not yet come, and never will it, never can it be delivered, unless it be freed from error, and taught to enjoy and to allow others to enjoy the blessings of advanced and advancing civilization.

SANITARY.

Pursuant to a resolution of the Town Council, a public meeting of the inhabitants of the Town was convened by the Mayor, on Monday evening last, with the view of enlisting the sympathy and co-operation of the citizens in devising means for the amelioration of the sanitary condition of the Town. The meeting was attended by a large number of the leading citizens, including the gentlemen of the medical profession, and appropriate observations were made by medical gentlemen and others in reference to the object, for which the meeting was called.—The speakers agreed in the main as to the pressing necessity of improving upon the cleanliness of the Town, and urged as well upon the people at large as upon individuals, the desirability of making some adequate preparation for the scourge that is looked forward to during the coming season. It was suggested that the people should give their particular attention to the yards of their premises and to permit no decomposing matter to have more exposure than necessary, and to be prodigal of disinfectant substances, varieties of which were named by the medical gentlemen present as suitable for the purpose. It was also recommended that as there are many people in Town who would possibly not assume the inconvenience and expenses of attending to these matters, and some who indeed are not more to go to any expense the Town authorities should themselves take the matter in hand and render it compulsory upon the whole population. Another matter of moment spoken to by many of the speakers of the evening in favourable terms, was the establishing of a dispensary in order that those who are limited means would lead them to procrastinate the calling in of medical advice until the premonitory symptoms have been exchanged for the presence of the fatal disease, would be enabled to obtain treatment at a time when it would be of service. This is a question certainly deserving of the attention of the community and in connection with it we might mention that in the old country as well as in the United States these dispensaries are established in almost every town and we believe they contribute materially to the general health of the communities in which they are established. In conclusion a Committee was named to act with and assist the Sanitary Committee of the Council in the preparation of a By-law providing for the carrying out of the suggestions maintained.

Masonic Concert.

On Wednesday evening, Feb. 28th, last a concert was given, at Millbrook, in aid of the benevolent fund of the J. B. Hall Lodge of A. F. & A. Masons. The large dwelling was fitted up expressly for the occasion. It was beautifully decorated with flags and evergreens, and rendered almost as brilliant as day by the aid of innumerable candelabers and small lamps. Seats were provided for about 350. Every available space in the building was packed, and there could not have been less than 500 persons present.—One part of the duet was appropriated to a brass band, from Mount Pleasant, who discoursed music at intervals. About half past seven the brethren assembled at the Lodge and in regalia, under the guidance of W. Bro. J. B. Hall, P. M., of Port Hope, marched in procession to the hall. Among the brethren present were Hon. Sidney Smith, J. M. Enoch, J. W., J. O'Donnell, D. D. G. Sec'y, Ontario District, and Alex. Graham, J. D. of Peterboro Lodge. We also noticed among the audience W. H. Scott, Esq., Mayor, and a number of ladies and gentlemen of Peterboro. The Port Hope Warblers, with Mr. W. Philpot at the piano, operated the performance by singing the "Brecan ers Bride," which was rendered in their usual effective style, and at the close of it, as well as every song, were vociferously encored. The concert consisting of Mr. J. Boswell, also Mr. H. Nicholson's comic singing and dancing respectively, the latter gentleman's performance of "Sing a song o' Sixpence" was given with a spirit and appearance of delight and approval. Messrs. Chesmore Anderson and Sanders, of Port Hope, and J. Smith, Ontario Bank, Huntsville and Brockville on Tuesday, made up the rest of the performers, all of whom done their parts admirably.—Mr. Knapp, of Peterboro, volunteered and sang a comic song in his usual happy style, which was well received and encored by applause. During the intermission M. Leon exhibited his wonderful powers as a Ventriloquist which pleased and astonished the entire audience; after which the Hon. S. Smith was called, who in a few brief remarks explained the object of the Concert, and the nature of the Institution, under whose banners it was given. The patronage of the audience was considerably taxed by the extreme length of the performance, the many encores heightened the programme to such an extent that it took, at least, an extra hour. The absence of ladies to take part has the effect of making the entertainment more monotonous, than it otherwise would be, however, this cannot be attributed to the persons who got up the Concert as ample pre-arrangements were made for their presence, and which was only prevented by illness. The Concert was a decided success and one which the originators may feel proud of.

Beautiful Residence for Sale.

Dr. Brown, being just about to leave Peterborough to take up his residence in the Capital of the Canadas, is offering for sale his beautiful residence, situated just opposite the new Presbyterian Church. The whole building, stabling, sheds, fences, &c., are new; the dwelling is fitted up in the most commodious and comfortable manner; the situation is delightful and only a few minutes walk from the centre of the Town; and as he is leaving the Town immediately, he offers to dispose of it on very advantageous terms. In his absence Mr. Cluxton, or Mr. Morrow, will give particulars.

Fire.

Last night about 10 o'clock, the stores occupied by Mr. Giles, Mr. Brennan, Mr. Cooney, as Grocery Stores, and also Mr. Bircher's Boot and Shoe Store, were consumed by fire. The buildings belonged to Mrs. Dixon, but were not worth much. The loss of goods we cannot give this week. None of the stocks were heavy: the loss therefore cannot be. We did not fully ascertain whether the parties were insured or not.

The Effects of the Truth.

An incident worthy of record in connection with the spread of the Truth, has been brought to our notice by the Treasurer of the Bible Society here. Some one whose heart had been touched by the words of truth and the Spirit of Light, enclosed an anonymous letter and six dollars to the Rev. Mr. Roger, for the Bible Society Funds. If all who have been benefited by the Bible would do likewise, how soon would the dark places of the earth become light.

Branch Bible Society.

At the Quarterly Meeting of the Committee of the above Branch Society—the President in the chair—it was agreed to employ a Colporteur for about 3 months of the present year. The Treasurer had on hand $267. Of this it was agreed to send to the Parent Society, London, the sum of $100; and to the Toronto Society, $100. The balance to be kept for defraying expenses of Colportage, &c. A Committee consisting of the President, Secretary, Treasurer, Col. Haultain, and the Rev. E. R. Roberts, was appointed to attend to engaging a Colporteur.

Canada West Farmer's Mutual and Stock Insurance Company.

The 14th Annual Report of this Company has been issued. From it we gather that the Company has issued 4006 policies during the year, (326 in excess of last year) insuring property to the amount of $2,714,910. The total amount now at risk is $7,618,036, covered by 11,139 policies. The losses this year were unusually large, amounting to $32,214 29; there the agent here tells us are all paid.

The Company lost by J. R. Walton's retreat $500. All notes and moneys are now required to be sent by the insured direct to the head office to save losses in future.—R. W. Erret, Esq., is the active and energetic agent for the west part of this county, Victoria, and part of Durham.

Captain Semmes is not to be tried, his parole is considered valid, and a protection against any interference on account of the part he took in the late rebellion.

Collision.

There was a fatal accident on the Ohio river lately, two vessels collided when one of them almost immediately sunk, causing the lives of about twenty-two of the passengers. The crew were all saved.

One of the principal features of the procession on the approaching St. Patrick's day, in New York, will be a car drawn by 12 horses and containing 32 ladies robed in green, representing the 32 counties in Ireland, with Erin in chains, weeping.

A lawyer in Toronto, who acted in behalf of the burglars of the Galt bank, has had ever since, in his possesion $9000 of bonds that has been stolen from Pittsburgh bank by Bristol Bill and others, and placed in his hands. The Burglars are now revealing secrets.

It is rumored that a new series of School Books is about to be issued. A house in Toronto is said to be already engaged in getting out the new books. Let us hope that they will be worthy the progressed and progressive state of education in the Province.

Two men who were boring for oil, in an old well near Toronto, having gone down with a lighted candle, the gas caught fire, when they were instantly killed. The gas burned for several hours until extinguished by means of salt. The bodies were taken up by means of grappling irons, and with great difficulty because of the violent commotions in the well and the rolling about of the bodies thereby. A lighted match being brought near the well instantly set the whole on fire. A peice of lighted paper being thrown into the well, also set fire to the gas, with a loud explosion, the flame rising 12 or 14 feet.

Habeas Corpus.

The Habeas Corpus has been suspended in Ireland, the state of the country seeming to demand it. The Fenians since the arrival of the news in America, have been making flaming speeches; they all end with a call for money. Vigilant search is being made for Stephens in various parts of Ireland. Several persons from America, claiming American citizenship, have been arrested on suspicion of being Fenians. On the whole it would appear that the island is in an unsettled state. Soldiers are being stationed here and there in small towns, thus giving at least the appearance of security.

Toronto in a State of siege by robbers, burglers and the like. The police hardly to be relied on for protection, and some who occupied high places in the force have been in secret connivance with the perpetrators of all the great burglaries and robberies of the past year. From the Leader we copy the following extract which shows the unguarded state of the city. Strangers should beware. Toronto and Hamilton are the centres. Lately the Custom House in Toronto was robbed and $4,000 or $5,000 in Green backs taken; now comes garrotting; what will come next? We may hear of murder.

About 11:45 on Saturday night, whilst a young gentleman named R. Wilson, employed as salesman in the hardware store of Mr. Rice Lewis, of this city, was proceeding along Melinda street on his way home from the Queen's Hotel, he was seized by three ruffians and dragged into a dark lane gagged and robbed of a gold watch and chain worth $250, and $630 in money, consisting of two £20 and one £50 bank of England notes—the remainder being in tens, fives and two dollar bills in Canada currency. One of the scamps held one hand over the young man's mouth, another held his arms and the third effected the robbery. He was so much terrified by the very boldness of the attack that he was unable or afraid to call for help even after his assailants left him, doubtless fearing that if he tryed to give an alarm that they might kill him. As soon as he got free of the scoundrels he proceeded to look for a policeman, and upon meeting with Constable Campbell, related the circumstances of the strange case. The policeman conducted Mr. Wilson in safety to the Queen's hotel, and subsequently reported the matter to the detectives, to whom a description of the robbers were given. About five minutes before the robbery, the sentry at the military hospital on Bay street, said to have seen three desperate looking fellows going up Bay street. From this statement it is to be inferred that they had the robbery previously arranged, and were lying in wait for their victim, who unfortunately for himself, chose a dark and lonely street, instead of keeping on the main street. It is to be hoped however, that the scoundrels may be soon in custody.

The Messiah, in the Town Hall, continues to-day and with this evening also. Great attraction are expected to-night.

Wesleyan Methodist Church.

The Annual Tea, in aid of the Funds of the Church, will take place in the School Room, on Tuesday evening, the 13th instant, at half-past 6 o'clock. Tickets can be obtained from Messrs. Cluxton, Stevenson, Burnham, Coulter, Chambers, Ormond, and Cox.

SMITH COUNCIL.

Smith, February 28th, 1865.

Council met—all the members present.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The Poll Book for taking a Poll to determine whether or not the By-law passed by Council, to repeal a certain By-law passed in terms of the Temperance Act of 1864, was approved by the Municipal Electors, was examined, showing the number of votes polled as follows:—Yeas, 10; Nays, 3.

The following By-laws received their several readings and were passed. A By-law to regulate Taverns and other Houses of Public Entertainment to declare the terms and conditions required to be complied with and the security to be given by any applicant for a certificate to procure a license to keep the same and to appoint a person to grant such certificates.

A By-law to prescribe the duties of Inspectors, to limit the number of Snop licenses and certificates to procure a license to keep a Tavern which may be issued, and to fix the rate of duty to be paid for each such license and certificate respectively.

Matthew Warnan was appointed Inspector.

Mr. S. S. Kelly made a proposition to the Council that he would erect and complete a suitable building for a Town Hall, in the Village of Bridgenorth, on condition that the Council would pledge themselves to hold their meetings therein and allow him $15 per annum rent.

Moved by Mr. Walton, and seconded by Mr. Galvin.—That the proposition made by Mr. S. S. Kelly in regard to the building of a Town Hall, be accepted.—Carried

The Treasurer was ordered to pay to the Reeve and Clerk the sum of $1 50 each for taking the vote on the By-law to repeal the By-law passed in terms of the Temperance Act of 1864, also the sum of $10 to Wm. Adams, and $5 to Widow Freeburn, two indigent persons, and also $3 to Mr. Edmison for drawing arbitration bonds.

Moved by Mr. Galvin, and seconded by Mr. Garbutt,—That the road between lots 15 and 16 in the 9th con. leading from the 9th con. line to the Mud Lake road be closed up and that the Clerk do advertize, as the law directs, the passing of a By-law to provide for the same.—Carried.

To Editor the of the Examiner.

SIR,—In the absence of any answer to my arguments against compulsory education, I did not intend to write any more upon the subject just now. But seeing you have inserted some scribbling from a youth from the country, on this subject, perhaps you will allow me to add a few words more. In the commencement I am led to enquire where are the men who so very eloquently and persistantly at the convention advocated the cause of compulsory education? Can none be found but a "young green-horn" to canvass through the press, the sentiments thus so strenuously advocated? Are they all ashamed of the position they have taken? or do they think the matter of such trifling importance that they consider it unworthy of a little time and a tension? None has ventured but this "young man," whose zeal is far in advance of his discretion. I have read, somewhere, that "young men should be seen, and not heard." Never have I known the maxim more appropriate than to him. Such a jumble of twaddled never before read in print, and the wonder to me is how you came to insert his letter at all. The chief points seen in it are his profound ignorance and inordinate vanity to appear in print, neither of which I am going to combat. If he remains in the country till the compulsory law takes effect, it is to be hoped that there will be a clause in it compelling such as him to attend school in order to improve their English. In your comments on this notable letter you ask, "Why does not our government pass a law to make men sober, since drunkenness is the root of the evil? This would meet the views of Mr. Edwards, W. H. Stratton, and a host of others, provided it can be enforced." I speak for myself, admitting such a law could be enforced, it would not suit my views. The legislature has already empowered Municipalities to pass By-laws for the prevention of drunkenness in the streets, highways or public places. And such By-laws exist in Cities, Towns, and Villages, at least. I want the law to go no farther, until public sentiment induces the Government to cut off the traffic entirely. A man may get drunk in a private house or place, and he is only amenable to the law when he commits a breach of the peace or is likely to do so. As we I may the legislature enter the poor man's house and punish him for keeping his children from school. In this connection allow me to give you a few facts which fell under my own observation, in the early settlement of Canada. I knew a man from Paisley, in Scotland, a weaver, who had a fair share of education and information for one in his situation. He had some 7 or 8 children, the two oldest only had learned to read in Scotland. He settled in the bush, and applied himself to clear it away. Now, such work is necessitous, that, in-telligent moral and religious as he was, he considered it his duty to refuse the offer of a gratuitous education for some of his children, giving as his reason that he could not spare them from work. In the settlement where he lived the people, prior to coming here, had all enjoyed the privileges of education; but such was the demand upon every member of their families that could lift brush or rake dearers, that they could not be spared to go to school. Hence, the majority of the children reared then were indebted to the Sunday school alone for ability to read. Now were such a law as Dr. Ryerson and some of our friends wish to impose on the country, then in existence, what would be the reply of these parents? "We cannot spare our children from work to attend school." And bear in mind Mr. Editor, that we have in our rear, both in this county and in Victoria, hundreds and thousands of families, at this time, enduring the toils and privations of bush life, with this difference perhaps that the privations will not be of so long a continuance. Those people will tell you "we must get bread for our children before we educate them." It is all very fine for people to "pooh-pooh" such a statement, who never were in the bush. I know from experience what it is, and knowing several parts of Canada at the time I refer to, it was very general—Many a time I have gone to a neighbors clearing, as well as at a distance from home, and found father, mother and children busy in planting or ridding up the ground. And I have no doubt in the case of many cities and towns there are similar instances, where the parent is equally necessitated to hire his young children out or keep them at home to assist in procuring the necessaries of life. Bread and cheese must be secured before education. The "Young Man" struck a key-note for many of the advocates of a compulsory education, when he says that hundreds of our population are not capable of exercising their civil rights. Dr. Ryerson and his friends have more wit than to them express it. The State must step in, and when in, how natural to exercise for the individual the rights of conscience, as well as civil rights.

How humiliating a position these to be placed in, yet this is the aim of this new measure. If it could be shown to at the education which is to be obtained by the compulsory amendment, will effect what is claimed by the party advocating it, I should still resist it on the ground that the State has no moral right to enforce such a law. No such a law is taught in the book of morals; no such law ex stats England, a land of enlightment, and where more true liberty exists—having only our own good land—than on any land besides. We are directed to Prussia, Germany and Switzerland, as countries where such law is in force. In the two former countries, the State claims every male as a conscript. Such a law could neither pass nor be enforced in Canada. As for the liberal enlightened Republic of Switzerland, or even that of the United States, it is nothing uncommon to witness with the extreme of liberalism the extreme a despotism. New England with its boast of equal rights had its blue laws which were the very essence of intolerance. I regret that such a retrograde step as this new law, worthy only of a place in the above, should be entertained by enlightened, free, Canada. I know of no law for the past 48 years passed in Canada, so much at variance with free institutions, or the civil rights of the people, as the proposed one. If I does become law here, I am ready to pledge all I am worth, that it will not be enforced, but will appear on our statute book a dead letter, and its existence will be a disgrace to us as a people. "Eternal vigilance" is said to be "the price of liberty." Some of our leading as well as our common men are surely slapping when they advocate or allow such a law to find its way into our constitution. Dr. Rverson in 1836 would have written folios against the arbitrary measure he now advocates; but circumstances alter cases. His views have undergone a change under altered circumstanes. "O tempora! O mores!"

Truly yours,

Secular Education and Crime, &c.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—I am glad to see from the Examiner of the 22nd instant, that you and your able correspondent, J. E., have taken up the subject of Rev. Dr. R's new School Bill, and given him as he deserves a thorough drubbing. Let Editors, Correspondents, Teachers and the friends of Education generally, by means of the press, criticise and discuss this "new School Bill" in all its aspects, and the effects resulting therefrom cannot be otherwise than beneficial.

According to the plan proposed by the "Reverend gentleman, the questions given to Teachers at their examination are to be prepared in Toronto, consisting, I have no doubt the major part of them, of a series of "Educational puzzles," their tendency being to perplex the Teacher, rather than to ascertain what he knows.—It is quite possible for the Rev. Dr. pens to solve these puzzles, I say, and notwithstanding their certificates from his "Institutions," their kindgloves and all to be inferior in all that makes a good Teacher to the man who is self taught, or who has acquired his knowledge in spite of the formidable difficulties by which he is encompassed.

The Rev. R. & Co set a high value on mere school training as a means of elevating society. But it is all fallacy. School training apart from Bible training cannot be a blessing but a curse, and this conclusion is in entire accordance with the general facts of all history.

One may be able to read fluently, to calculate, to write like a Calligraphist, &c., without being educated, or emerging from ignorance and error. The arts of reading or writing, &c., are so little education, that many have been ignorant of them without being the less capable of business. But the arts of reading and writing, of grammar and accounts, may lead to a desire for real instruction. Hence the necessity, Mr Editor, for such an instruction suitable and solid. But even real instruction apart from religious training is not a sufficient safe-guard for the well-being of society.

The advantages of mere instruction apart from that of the Bible have been too much extolled. It is difficult to say which is the most dangerous to society—a wicked and brutal man deprived of all instruction and education, or a man who has received instruction, but is animated by wrong principles and bad passions. This only proves that secular education must be joined to the teachings of the Bible. In the present state of society it is the separation that is dangerous. An eminent judge, in 1864, remarked among other things in his address to a jury in the West of Scotland, that "the increase of crime in certain places, where the common branches of study were generally taught, was to be traced to the neglect of Bible training."

Hoping, Mr. Editor, to hear more from yourself, "J. E." and others, upon the subjects above adverted to,

I remain, Mr. Editor,

Yours truly,

D. E. F.

Otonabee, Feb. 24th, 1866.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

MR. EDITOR,—

For the last few months the merchants of Peterboro have been closing their places of business at seven o'clock, so as to allow young men in their employ time for recreation, and the in provement of their minds. This arrangement, I believe, terminates on the first of April. Would it not be for the mutual benefit of employees and employed to continue the early closing all through the summer?

The business that is done after seven could be done before, in fact would be done, were it generally understood that the stores would be closed at that hour.

Young men standing in a close and heated store all day become enervated and require the evening to recruit, otherwise they return to their work the following day with a sense of weariness. For when the setting sun brings no relief? Then for them has God clothed the earth with beauty and made his invigorating breezes to blow, for as soon as the days work is done it is time to retire; so they go from work to bed and from bed to work.

Perhaps some of the merchants remain in their stores as long as their clerks and do not feel it irksome. The reason is this—it is their own will alone that keeps them there. Did they feel that they were obliged to do it, that they could not leave at pleasure it would alter the case.

Perhaps some will say this early closing is an innovation.—"In our young days clerks never thought of such a thing." I would ask their objectors how many of their comrades, for the want of healthy outdoor exercise, were cut off by consumption. The old adage runs—"The low that is always bent soon gets unstrung. There is one other reason I would urge why the early closing should be continued. In all probability that dreadful scourge, Asiatic Cholera, will visit us this summer. It is well known that a cheerful mind and healthy constitution are two of the best safeguards against it. Should not young men in stores have an opportunity for taking that exercise which at all times, but more especially during a sickly season, is necessary to the healthy operation of the vital organs?

Trusting that the merchants of Peterboro will not be behind those of other places in this matter.

I remain, &c.,

PROGRESS.

Quite a large attendence was present at the Town Hall, on Wednesday evening, the 28th ult., when the Rev. Mr. Bain was expected to deliver a lecture, but absence from home prevented him doing so. From the inability of lecturers to fill their engagements, considerable disappointment has, at times, been experienced; but the society now finds that in future this may in a great measure be obviated.

Encouraged by the success of the previous meeting, those who there assisted at the Reading and Recreations, together with a few others, were easily induced to comply with the wishes of the meeting and engage so on that occasion.

Amongst the recitations was Hotspur's soliloquy; Douglas' account of the Hermit; Whang the Miller; Robin merry man; Advice to young Husbands; The Burial of Sir. John Moore, &c., which was well received; but readings from Mrs. Caudle's curtain lectures caused such irrepressible laughs that at times it was found difficult to proceed. Occasional pieces of vocal music also served very much to render the proceedings pleasing and attractive, which were concluded by singing the National Anthem.—Com.

THE ROYAL CANADIAN BANK.—The Directors of this Bank have determined to close their stock subscription books on the 15th of March. The success of this new institution has been very marked. Though only a few months open, nearly a million of stock has been taken up—a quarter of a million has paid in cash. Large further subscriptions are now being made, and no doubt is entertained that, by the date named above, every share the Directors desire to issue will be taken up. It is gratifying to know that the whole of the stock has been subscribed in the Province—most of it in and around Toronto. Besides the Head Office in this city, branches have already been opened at Kingston, Cobourg, Brampton, Bowmanville, and other places. The Bank is most economically conducted, and its prospects ahead seem as bright as its founders could desire.—Globe.

Mr. Ogilvy and Mr. McDougall, of this place, have been taking subscriptions of stock around Peterboro, and we are informed with marked success. We may anticipate a Branch here also.

Rev. Alexander Campbell, the father of the sect known as Disciples, died lately, aged 78 years. Perhaps no one man ever witnessed, as the result of his own labor, so many followers. In a very few years from the commencement of his labors, separate from other religious bodies, they were numbered by thousands.

Mr. Peabody, the American Banker in London, England, formerly gave $750,000 as a gift to build comfortable houses for the poor laboring class of the city. He has now added a gift of £100,000 sterling, with provision to raise it to £120,000 sterling in two years; thus giving about $1,350,000 for the good of the laboring class. This will be a monument more enduring than brass.

Repeal of the Dunkin Bill in Canada.

SONG OF VICTORY.

Sound the loud trumpet and rattle the drum,
Let tipplers "hurrah," and teetotalers be mum;
For the Dunkin bill, now, (that most horrible bore,)
Is repealed, and we live in rum glory once more.
With shouts of rejoicing, let all Canada ring,
Let us fill up our glasses, and drain them and sing:

Grog, grog, grog, sweet, sweet grog,
So say our Rum Council, there's nothing like grog.

Be it Whiskey or Brandy, what Liquor you please,
We'd ask blessings on it, upon bended knees;
And living without it, who would not complain?
Then give us a swig from the bottle again.
Ah, we go for free drinking, for right well we know,
To swallow rum freely, is heaven below,
For 'tis grog, grog, grog, sweet, sweet grog
So say Millbrook workers, there's nothing like grog!

It is health, it is wealth, it is house, it is bed,
It is father and mother, wife, children and bread!
To every good fellow, in country or town,
Who follows the practice of pouring it down.
Let sober clowns talk of religion and morals,
Give us the contents of rum bottles and barrels;
Give us oceans of drams, and the pleasure of spree,
And let fools, who find fault, hurry off, if they please—

Away down below, to a certain hot place,
Where we wish we could send the whole temperance race:
Who would rob us of grog, grog, grog, sweet, sweet grog,
So say Canada lumbermen, there's nothing like grog!

The Bible may hint, that poor fellows who drink
A little too much, to perdition shall sink,
And preachers may howl and admonish us even,
Salvation to seek, and the glory of heaven;
But sober and old wives may attend to such stuff,
We attend to the grog and we've glory enough,
In grog, grog, grog, sweet, sweet grog,
Be it ever so, ho-me-o, there's nothing like grog!

To our brave Council, now, for the year 'Sixty-six,
(Who Canada have freed from the Dunkin Bill &c.)
Be honor—and long may each man of them live,
A thumping stiff horn to take and to give;
They are worthy of friends, and immortal reward,
Their foes all deserve to be feathered and tarred!
So we'll drink to their health, (just to show our regard,)
Keep it up the year through, and put one it hard
With our grog, grog, grog, sweet, sweet grog,
Be it ever so tolling, there's nothing like grog!

SOLOMON SHAVEHORSE.

Millbrook, February, 1866.

A MOONLESS MONTH.—The month of February, 1866, which has just passed, will be marked in the astronomical calendar as the month which had no full moon! January had two full moons, and March will have two; but February had none. Of course this peculiar conjuncture of periods that makes the full moon show her face but a few hours before the month comes in, and again a few hours after the month goes out, is a rare thing in nature—but how rare, do you suppose, gentle reader? It has not occurred twice in your lifetime nor ours—not since the time of Washington; not since the discovery of America by Columbus; no, nor since the Christian era, nor since the Fall of Adam, nor since the creation of the world, unless that be placed back myriads of years. And it will not occur again, according to the computation of astronomers, for two millions and a half of years—or probably NEVER—for before that cycle of ages shall be completed, it is our Christian faith that time will be ended, and the solar system be destroyed.—New York Evangelist.

FELL DEAD.—The Globe says that yesterday morning while Mr. J. S. Howard, Treasurer of the United Counties of York and Peel, was in his office in the Court House, he fell down in a fit and became unconscious. Medical advice was immediately obtained, but in a few hours he died. He is supposed to have ruptured a blood vessel at the base of the brain. He never spoke from the time he took the fit. He was at one time Postmaster and Collector of Customs at this port, and for the last twenty-five years has filled the office of County Treasurer.

Two hundred cars have been despatched with produce for the United States from Montreal within the last twenty-four hours. The number of cars running between Montreal and Portland is very great.

Lumber and Reciprocity.

Eight years since the rescinding of the Treaty by the United States have been felt and expressed that the lumber interests of Canada would suffer severely by this action of our protectionist neighbors. That these fears have been to a great extent groundless and the danger exaggerated, is proven by the fact that contracts for heavy supplies of lumber are now being made by Americans buyers for delivery after the 17th March, at prices fully equal to those of last year; and for immediate delivery an advance of $1.00 per M is being paid. An additional proof is that lumber in Albany—the great lumber market of the United States—has advanced $1 per M since it became evident that negotiations for a new Reciprocity Treaty were a failure. This fact is, it is a law—the apparent exceptions to which only prove the rule—that the consumer, not the producer, has to pay the duty; and though the United States obtains an increase of revenue, it is by its own citizens, and not by Canadians, that this revenue is paid. We are very glad to be able to record these facts concerning lumber, in order to show to those timorous ones who prophesied ruin to Canada, as a consequence of the abrogation of the Reciprocity Treaty, how little we are really dependant on its continuance, and how remarkably well we can do without it.—Trade Review.

PRINTER'S MANSLAUGHTER.—Difference of opinion and practice having existed throughout the Province with respect to the postage on printers' MSS, we have taken some pains to ascertain the true meaning of the clause in the statute relating to this matter. The question is set at rest by a communication from the Postmaster General, through Gilbert Griffin, Esq. Editorial or correspondence, for publication, must be sent in covers, open at both ends, when one cent for each four oz. in weight will be charged. It must be particularly noted that unsealed envelopes are not in accordance with the regulations, and Postmasters are directed not to treat otherwise than as a letter anything contained in an envelope, sealed or unsealed. We are glad this matter has been officially set at rest, and we hope our correspondents, if they wish to save postage, will hereafter mail as above directed, viz; in covers, with both ends open.

THE METHODIST OF AMERICA.—October, 1766, saw the foundation laid of the Methodist church in this country. It has since grown till its church and parsonage property is estimated at $20,000,000, and its institutions of learning at more than $2,000,000. The centenary is to be celebrated by a great thanksgiving offering. The bishops ask not less than $2,000,000 to pay off church debts, free universities and colleges from embarrassment and endow them, &c. $1,000,000 in addition are to be raised for the missionary cause. The Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States now numbers 929 159 members, including probationers; 10 401 churches, and 6 175 preachers.—New York Times.

An order in Council has been passed prohibiting the importation of stock from Europe after the 1st of March, in order to prevent if possible, the introduction of the cattle and sheep disease into this Province.

COTTON IN ILLINOIS.—It is estimated that Illinois alone will produce five hundred thousand bales of Cotton next year, and we understand that the Government of the United States have given instructions to Generals in command of the Army in the South to have all the seed saved that is possible, for planting in that and other western States, but should their expectations not be fulfilled it is gratifying to know that we have a sovereign remedy for coughs, colds, cramps in the stomach, cholic, cholera morbus, and all complaints of the like nature, in the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," sold by all Medicine Dealers, 25 cents per bottle.

"How do you do, Doctor?" Doctor bows very politely to the lady, and answers her inquiry by saying he was very much troubled with a cough The lady says she is surprised the doctor cannot cure his cough, and recommends him to try Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers, saying she always used them in her family, and invariably with good success. Doctor says "I am astonished at a lady of your standing using a quack medicine." "Why Doctor! it is no quack medicine. It always gives relief, and every member of our family carry them in their pockets; they always do good, and I know the proprietor, and don't for a moment doubt that—" Doctor will here no more, but is off for a box; price 25 cents.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

PRESCOTT, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

None genuine unless signed, I. BUTTS, on the wrapper. Prepared by Seth W. Fowle & Co., Boston, and for sale by all dealers in medicines.

and
BARBARA EDWARDS,
Defendant.

Plaintiffs,

PURSUANT to a Decree of the Court of Chancery, made in a cause—BUCK vs Edwards—THE CREDITORS OF JAMES EDWARDS, late of the Township of Dummer, in the County of Peterborough, Yeoman, who died in or about the month of February, 1864, are on or before the 20th day of April, 1866, to send by post, prepaid, to WILLIAM H. SCOTT, Esq., of Peterborough, the Solicitor of the plaintiffs'—two of the executors of the deceased—their Christian and Surnames, addresses and descriptions, the full particulars of their claims, a statement of their accounts and the nature of the securities (if any) held by them; or, in default thereof, they will be peremptorily excluded from the benefit of the said Decree. Every Creditor holding any security is to produce the same before me at my Chambers in the Town of Peterborough on the 20th day of April, 1866, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, being the time appointed for adjudicating on the claims.

Dated this seventh day of March, A. D. 1866.

NAUGHTY.

If sweet she is, no sweet and fair,
Such glow and glory grace her hair;
Fortune used to wish she were
A little more divine.

If softly wished in her to see,
A little less of giggling glee;
A little less of coquetry,
And pertinence, and design.

I wish'd that she had learnt at school,
Not how to win men and to rule,
By making wise ones play the fool,
And foolish ones adore.

But, how to use the charms she had
To cheering hearts that else were sad,
And making sad heart always glad,
And blest for evermore.

I wished—last wishing in a trade
For boys and girls to meddens made;
And, if I tried it, I'm afraid—
From all the tricks and trumperies
That keep her nature in disguise,
I could not set her free.

Varieties.

Examining an Attorney.

The following racy examination of a candidate for admission to the bar is taken from the Western Law Journal, and is decidedly a good hit. The examination commences with:

"Do you smoke sir?"

'I do, Sir.'

'Have you a spare cigar?'

'Yes, sir,' [Extending a short six.]

'Now sir, what is the first duty of a lawyer?'

'To collect fees.'

'Right. What is the second?'

'To increase the number of his clients.'

'When does your position towards your client change?'

'When making a bill of costs.'

'Explain?'

'We then occupy the antagonistic position, I assume the character of the plaintiff, and he becomes the defendant.

'A suit decided, how do you stand with lawyer conducting the other side?'

'Cock it by jowl.'

'Enough, sir, you promise to become an ornament to your profession, and I wish you success. Now are you aware of the fee you owe me?'

'Perfectly.'

'Describe it?'

'It is to invite you to drink.'

'But suppose I decline?'

(Candidate scratches his hand)

'There is no instance of the kind on record in the books. I cannot answer that question.'

'You are right; the confidence with which you make the assertion shows that you have read the law attentively. Let's take a drink and I will sign your certificate.'

A DROLL POSTMASTER.—In the days of Andrew Jackson, his Postmaster-General, Amos Kendall, wanting to know where Boots was the source of the Tombigbee river, wrote for the required information to the postmaster of a village on its course. "Sir," wrote the higher officer to the lower, "this department desires to know how far the Tombigbee river runs up. Respectfully, &c." The reply was brief, and read thus: "Sir; The Tombigbee river doesn't run up at all; it runs down. Very respectfully, &c." The Postmaster-General continued the correspondence in this style: "Sir: Your appointment as postmaster at ——— is revoked. You will turn over the funds, papers, &c., pertaining to your office, to your successor. Respectfully, &c." The droll understrapper closed the correspondence with this parting shot: "Sir: The revenues for this office for the quarter ending Sept. 30, have been 95 cents; its expenditures, same period, for tallow candles and twine, was $1.05. I trust my successor is instructed to adjust the balance due me. Most respectfully."

AMUSING HIMSELF.—A certain green customer, who was a stranger to mirrors and who stepped into the cabin of one of our ocean steamers, stepping in front of a large pier glass, which he took for a door, he said: 'I say, mister, when does this here boat start?' Getting no reply from the dumb reflection before him, he again repeated.—

'I say, mister, when does this here boat start?'

Incensed at the still silent figure, he broke out:

'Go to thunder you darn sassy free colored, shood-headed bull calf; you don't look as if you knew much any how.

Some time since, one of our shipowners, in despatching a vessel, had a good deal of trouble with one of his men who had got very "top-heavy" on his advance wages. After the vessel had accomplished her voyage, on settling with the crew, it came to this man's turn to be paid.

"What name?" asked the merchant.

"Cain, sir," was the reply.

"What! are you the man who slew his brother?' rejoiced the merchant.

"No, sir," was the ready and witty reply of Jack, with a knowing wink, and giving his trowsers a hitch—"I am the man that was "slewed."

A bachelor and a young lady brought some tickets in partnership in a lottery at the recent Sanitary Fair at Milwaukee, agreeing to divide the proceeds equitably. They drew a double bedstead, baby crib and lunch basket, and the question is, how to divide them, or whether they shall use them "jintly."

A gentleman was one day arranging music for a lady to whom he was paying attention. "Pray, Miss D." said he, "what time do you prefer?" "Oh," she replied carelessly, "any time will do—but the quicker the better."

"I say, Mr. Pilot, ain't you going to start soon?" said a cockney on board a steamer lying to during a fog. "As soon as the fog clears up," replied the captain. "Well it's starlight overhead now," said the cockney. "O yes," replied the captain, "but we are not going that way."

Sometimes a girl says no to an offer, when it is as plain as the nose on her face that she means yes. The best way to judge whether she is in earnest or not is to look her straight in her eyes and never mind her nose.

A curate having been overhauled by his bishop, for attending a ball, the former replied, "My lord, I wore a mask." "Oh, well," returned the bishop, "that puts a new face on the affair."

A poor widow was asked how she became so much attached to a certain neighbor, and replied that she was bound to him by several cords of wood, which he had sent to her during a winter.

What is the difference between a wealthy toper and a skillful miner? One turns his gold into quarts, and the other turns his quartz into gold.

Can the crime of 'heavy larceny' be committed by one of the light fingered gentry?

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate, showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMETS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong Iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old harp form of stringing; by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Deinos is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfield,	Wm Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Barili,
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry,	Charles Fradel

Mr. EGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes. They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; to purity, volume, and continuity of tone, in vocal verisimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr. S. B. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN

SEWING MACHINES.

EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB. 14th, 1860.

Salesrooms, { 536 Broadway, New York, / 252 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles of mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shuttle stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nansook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number, having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health.

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it, aim at impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply themselves with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

$10 A DAY to AGENTS.

LLOYD'S GREAT TOPOGRAPHICAL RAILWAY and COUNTY MAP of ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND and WALES—Six feet large, mounted and varnished; cost $100,000 and four years time; was finished July 28, and is the best map ever made since the world was formed, shows 200,000 cities, towns villages, market places, post offices, castles, country seats, and 38,000 railways and railway stations, with the distance between each station marked plainly, and the official name and total length of each railway in actual operation up to June, 1865, is given. The railway stations are all numerically and alphabetically arranged. The lakes, rivers, hills and mountains are exhibited, with the altitude of each in feet, made from trigonometrical surveys by our own engineers, draughtsmen and Photographers sent to England expressly to make a superior map of that country; the whole engraved on steel, colored superbly in counties, mounted and varnished. Price 8 shillings sterling ($2). No map at $10 can compare to this. Canvassers throughout the world wanted. Also men, with a small capital, to go to Canada, Chicago, Cincinnati, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, East and West Indies, Australia and California, to open offices. Can make a fortune wholesaling this and other maps to sub-agents. Eighty thousand copies of this map were subscribed for in England before going to press, as can be shown by our agents' letters to us. Ten new maps now under way

BRYAN'S

PULMONIC WAFERS!

The most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered for all diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, Difficult Breathing, Sore Throat &c., &c.

THESE Wafers give the most instantaneous and perfect relief, when persevered with according to directions never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health, who have tried other means in vain. To all classes and all constitutions they are a blessing and cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or how severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly decayed. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

TO VOCALISTS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS.

these Wafers are peculiarly valuable, they will in one day remove the most severe occasional hoarseness and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and inflexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass, and clearness, of which purpose they are regularly used by many Professional Vocalists.

TELL ME, YE WINGED WINDS.

BY LADY FLORIDA HASTINGS.

Tell me, ye winged winds,
That round my pathway roar,
Do ye not know some spot,
Where mortals weep no more?
Some lone and pleasant dell,
Some valley in the west,
Where, free from toil and pain,
The weary soul may rest?
The loud winds softened to a murmur low,
And sighed for pity as they answered—"No!"

Tell me thou mighty deep,
Whose billows round me play,
Knows at thine inmost cell,
Some island far away,
Where weary man may find
The bliss for which he sighs,
Where sorrows never live,
And friendship never dies?
The loud waves, rolling in perpetual flow,
Stopped for awhile, and sighed to answer—"No!"

And thou, serenest moon,
That with such holy face
Dost look upon the earth,
Asleep in night's embrace—
Tell me, in all the round,
Hast thou not seen some spot
Where mortals may be blessed,
Where grief may find a balm,
And weariness a rest?
Faith, Hope and Love, best boon to mortals given,
Waved their bright wings, and whispered—"Yes, in Heaven!"

THE JEWEL THIEF.

A LONDON DETECTIVE'S STORY.

BY EMERSON BENNETT.

I received a message from the chief of police of L——, saying there was a thieving mystery to be solved in the city, which would handsomely reward the successful investigator; and if I could find time to visit that place immediately, he should be happy to confer with me in preference to any other, as not a few of my professional exploits were already known to him.

I was flattered. I, a young man of twenty-three, to be selected by a strange at the head of police in a distant city in preference to all the old experienced detectives of London! It was indeed something to be proud of! And yet, my vanity whispered me, the man was right—for I, on a young in years, I was old in human nature, and, by a sort of instinct I could scent out rascality as naturally as a hound does a fox. Mystery, moreover, exactly suited my proclivities—perplexities were my delight—and I fairly revelled in the strange, hidden, complicated and wonderful. So of course I resolved to go to L—— at once, and I went.

My name, sir, is James Felstone, of London! I said, on presenting myself to Mr. Broughton, chief of police in L——.

He looked somewhat surprised, but offered his hand cordially, and said he was happy to make my acquaintance, though he had expected to see a much older person bearing a name that was already becoming somewhat famous.

Well, so you have come to help me in the matter that has already become such a puzzle? he continued.

I have come, at your request I replied, to see what I can do in the affair, though I am as yet entirely ignorant of the nature of it.

Well, it is nothing more or less than the mysterious abstraction of jewellery, rejoined Mr. Broughton. No less than twenty or thirty of our first families have lost jewels of great value—rings, brooches, bracelets, necklaces, and in fact, every kind of precious ornament—which have been taken from them in an unaccountable manner with no broken locks; and no sings of burglarious entrance.

The thief, said I at once, moves in fashionable circles, and who that male or female possess the one of them is.

By Jove! exclaimed Broughton grasping the idea with a heightened look. I believe you are right! though no one of us have ever thought of such a thing.

And not a soul, except you and I and one other, must know anything of it now! said I positively, as the line of operation instantly formed in my mind.

And who, then, is to be the third?

No less than the mayor of the city, who I trust, will assist us in carrying out a nice little plot I have in view.

He will do anything to detect the thief, said Broughton, for he has himself been a sufferer to the extent of over two thousand pounds—or rather I should say the lady has, which is about the same thing.

Ah, yes, his lady! said I; I had overlooked her—she must be in the plot too! I hope she can keep a secret—for all will depend upon this one being kept secret from even the faintest suspicion getting abroad.

And pray what is your plot asked the chief.

Can you guess?

Not I.

You will laugh when I tell you. What say you to my suddenly appearing in the fashionable world here as a lady of great distinction, with a grand soiree given at the mayor's in my honor.

A lady—you? cried Broughton, in astonishment.

You see I have a fair skin, and am almost as beardless as a lad of twelve; and I assure you, when properly dressed for my part, I do not make so uninteresting a lady as you may suppose—at least I can say that I have already more than once been honored with the serious attentions of some fastidious gentlemen!

Broughton laughed.

But how by even such means, will you be able to detect the thief? he inquired.

I shall probably be brought in contact with either him or her—who will, if my supposition be correct, be one of the select company—and my thief intuition will do the rest.

Well, he rejoined, you seem born for your profession; and if you do catch this scoundrel, your fortune will be made.

Mr. Broughton proceeded to assist in carrying out my plan, and we met with complete success. The mayor and his good lady both readily entered into the scheme, being highly amused at the novelty of the thing, as well as anxious to see a successful result. I had brought my instruments with me—for at different times I had figured as a lady, a clergyman, a naval officer, a common sailor, a country boor, and so forth and so on—and in a private apartment, selected by Mr. Broughton, I soon made the change proposed, even to my hair. Then the chief of police, who was not present while the metamorphose was in progress, came into the room and found a fashionable young lady with dark hair curled and dressed in silk in place of the light haired man he had left there, he seemed surprised and even vexed, notwithstanding he had expected some such change.

Or you wish to see Mr. Felstone? inquired the lady, in soft, silvery tones, as the same time rising and bowing with dignity.

Yes, replied Broughton, glancing around the room and seeming to be in some doubt.

He bade me say, if a gentleman should call, pressed to see the lady, with one of her sweetest smiles, that he would not be able to see him under a couple of hours, as unfortunately he had left a portion of his ornaments in London, and would have to make a purchase here, and wait for a fit.

Ah indeed! returned Broughton clearing up; I thought you could not be the individual himself, though he did bear a looming the female part to something like perfection!

Me? ha! ha! ha! cried the lady, with a clear, ringing laugh; did you then notice I suspect me of being James Felstone? No no—he makes a very good-looking female. I add sir—but then, after all, I fancy his wife makes a better.

His wife? Ah, then you are his wife? I beg your pardon madam; but if he had only mentioned to me that you were with him, I should not have made my blunder.

You are perfectly excused, sir! replied the lady with a fascinating air; you see he could not dress without me! Sit down, sir Broughton, and we will chat till he returns.

Mr. Broughton readily assented, and a lively and interesting conversation was kept up for half an hour, when suddenly I changed my voice to its natural tone, and said:—

So then, you find my disguise perfect, do you?

I do not think I ever saw a more astonished man in my life than the chief of police was at that moment; he turned red and white, and cut a dozen times in a minute, staring hard at me all the while; and at last, drawing in his breath, and seeming to gulp something down that was hard to swallow, he exclaimed:

In the name of all that is wonderful, what are you? a man or a woman?

I know I shall pass master now! I laughed.

In truth, I found it more difficult to convince him that I was myself, than that I was my own wife!

I was conveyed to the mayor's residence in a splendid carriage; and there, after passing satisfactory examination, took up my quarters as his niece, Mary Gilencove, from the borders of Scotland.

In due time, as soon as it could be arranged, a grand entertainment was given in our honor—the saloons were thronged with the rich and titled of both sexes—and then my work began in earnest. I was richly dressed, and wore jewels of great value, which, at my desire, had been expressly borrowed for the occasion. These I hung around myself in the most conspicuous part of the room; and, in that event, relied on detecting him, or her, as the case might be, partly by intuition, and partly by some peculiar expression of the countenance to be confirmed by what might follow the suspicion.

In so large a company, with so much fashionable excitement and necessary crowding, the task I had allotted to myself was by no means an easy one; and the evening was half gone, and not a great many person had been introduced to me without my discovering anything to give me even a hope of success.

At length a French count was presented—a fop of the first water—whose dress was exquisite, and whose whiskers, moustache and imperial were perfect—and at once I became much interested. He saw it and felt flattered, for already I was quite belle; and soon we were on the best of terms, chatting away in a manner that made some of the others, of both sexes, a little curious, if not jealous. In something like ten minutes he was telling me of his ancestry and estate in France, and I was boasting of my blood and riches in the north of England. He must have thought me rather forward and bold, perhaps; but what did I care for that? It was only a flirtation—I did not intend to marry him! I told him I was very singular and eccentric, that I either liked or disliked at first sight, and that for those I did like, (and I accomplished this with a meaning glance) I could never do enough. Here I suddenly looked down and tried to blush and, as it were unconsciously, played with a magnificent diamond ring on one of my fingers. When I looked up again, as I did suddenly also, I saw his eye fixed admiringly upon the jewel.

A present? said I, taking it off and handing it to him for inspection; what do you suppose it worth, count?

I should say a thousand pounds at least, for the centre stone is a very large one, he replied, weighing it with his gloved fingers.

Oh, then laughed I, I am far richer than I thought: for I have ever so many jewels with stones much larger than this!

I hope you did not venture to bring them with you? he said.

Why not? I innocently inquired.

Oh, nothing, only you might run some risk of their being stolen.

The same as aunts were, and others I have heard of in the city. Yes; but you must doubt, count, that they are safe here, under this roof from the old axiom that lightening does not strike twice in the same place.

Ha! ha! he laughed; very good!

We conversed some time longer on the same topic; and by being very anxious for the safety of my jewels, and by hoping I kept them locked up in a secure place; he finally drew from me the assurance that I put them in my own bureau drawer every night, and never failed to turn the key on them. The subject was then dropped, and soon after the count gave way for somebody else.

When alone with the mayor and his good lady that night, after the departure of all the company, both congratulated me on the manner of playing my part, and the deception was perfect, and inquired what success I had met with.

The French count is the thief! said I. I suspected him almost at the first glance, and proceed to my satisfaction afterwards.

Gracious Heaven! it could not be! I must be mistaken! He was one of the first houses of France, and was a warm personal friend besides! I enquired how long they had known him. They told.—Had been in the city ever since? Strange coincidence! he had. Did he not converse with the lady about her jewels before she lost them? Startling recollections! he did. Could the house be entered by a night-key? It could; though the lock was a peculiar patent, and could not be picked, nor opened by the key of any other lock. Had he a key, the mayor, ever permitted the count to see and handle his key? Astounding circumstance! he had.

And I will stake my reputation, said I, in conclusion, that he is not only the thief but that I will prove him to be so within a month.

The next night two policemen were smuggled into the house unknown to any of the servants. Nothing came of it. The second night the same. The third—ah this was different. On that night between the hours of two and three his countship came in, and found his way to my apartment as readily as if he had been an inmate. Its subsequents came out, that he had learned from one of the servants which was my sleeping chamber, on the night of the soiree. He entered so softly that, though awake, I was not disturbed. He was an adept at his business, and, in less than a minute my dressing case was searched, and he was stealing out of the room, with quite a bundle of paste jewels in his possession. But, like a cat in a trap, he now met with an obstruction, in the shape of two police officers, who took him into custody. A search of his baggage, at the hotel, discovered many of the missing jewels. He was tried in due time, convicted on several counts, (no pun meant,) and transported for life.

A large purse was made up for me, and my stratagem was considered not only a remarkable one, but in its whole length, breadth and result, a very laughable practical joke. I returned to London a proud and happy man, and with my reputation widely on the increase.

NOTHING IMPOSSIBLE.

The older the world has grown in years, the more thoroughly established has become the axiom, that nothing depending upon human powers or human ingenuity is impossible. The period is comparatively recent when Robert Fulton was sneered at by fools and for because he declared his ability to construct a boat, with steam for the motive power, which could move against tide or wind with greater velocity and precision than sloops could sail with both these in their favour. The results were equivalent when the idea of supplying steam cars was first mooted; the same silly sneer first sought its cause for its theories of electricity in connection with the telegraph. And yet, to-day all these marvels are in practical operation; we stem the current of seas and rivers, we communicate through the subtle medium of the electric spark, are whirled from boundary to boundary with a speed almost of a thought; and our only wonder is, that we should ever have doubted the feasibility of undertakings so thoroughly practical. Truly the poet has written—

Keats has no mineral strange;
The illimitable air no hidden things;
Water no quality in the rarest springs,
And fire no power to change.
Seasons no mystery, and stars no spell
That the unwearing soul might not compel.

The mind of man is ever progressive. No sooner has it overcome one obstacle than it dashes at another, struggles for a moment, and then surmounts it. We have heard men ridicule the idea that balloons could ever navigate the sky with precision. Who knows but that is only the next result that science is to attain? While admitting the hardship of creating such a consummation, we still need only point to the past history of the world to prove how possible is that and which will acknowledge the feasibility of a project because he cannot at once perceive by what machinery the result is to be accomplished.

SHIPPING DISASTERS DURING THE PAST FIVE YEARS.—The loss of shipping during the year just closed has been greater than for any year previously reported. The number lost and damaged were 75 steamers, 197 ships, 200 barques, 257 brigs, 351 schooners, valued at $18,289,000 exclusive of their cargoes. The losses in 1861, were $18,030,650; in 1862, $16,590,000; in 1863, $18,610,200; in 1864 $17,760,000; and the grand total in five years, $91,186,450—rather a large sum. And let it be borne in mind that probably $90,000,000 of this have been paid by the underwriters. The extent and value of the United States shipping, when reduced to figures, show it superior to any other single interest in the country.

Fearful Scenes in a German Village

HUNDREDS OF PEOPLE EATEN UP ALIVE.

A fearful account of the new plague which is committing such havoc in Germany is given in a Paris journal, as follows:

Eilersleben is a little town in the environs of Magdeburg—one of those little German towns the abode of peace and rustic felicity, where no noise is heard save the merry clink of the glasses at the beer-brewered, and the jolly tones of the drinkers calling for another glass all around. Well this little town, so smiling and happy, is now filled with mourning and desolation. For a whole month past death has reigned there. A fearful death after unexampled sufferings, all that are acquainted with the source of their disease, know that they are being eaten up by a legion of worms hardly as thick as a human hair, that have worked their way into the tissue of their flesh, their muscles and their nerves.

Is not such a fate horrible to dwell upon? Oh, the 9th of last month Dr. Karl Stein, of Frankfort wrote to one of our friends that upwards of one hundred children—they appear to enjoy an immunity—had been deprived of their parents. There was surely a house in the village that did not number a victim. At that date upwards of three hundred patients were a prey to death which they knew to be inevitable—a prey to fearful sufferings. From seventh to eighty of the inhabitants, who at the outset of the epidemic had felt unwell, had taken to flight, to escape what they considered to be the cholera; but they had fallen down on the road, and died without relief; their corpses alone were picked up.

The epidemic was caused by the ravages of the worm called trichine, whence the poisons has received the name trichinosis. The trichine is one of the entoza of the pig, and it is capable of being transplanted into and thriving in the human body. In Germany pork flesh imperfectly cured and smoked in the shape of ham and German sausage, is a staple article of food, and from the human stomach, where they penetrate with the ham and saucisses dear to German palates, the larvæ of these entoza pass into the blood, their size being so microscopic as to enable them to penetrate even into the minutest veins; they lodge in the nerves in the muscular and cellular tissue, and feed upon those parts of the human organization causing fearful agony and great constitutional disturbance, which ends in death. No cure has been as yet discovered, but the preventive process is obvious. To abstain from such preparations of pork as are eaten in the semicrude state is a pure means of avoiding trichosis; but to eat half-smoked saucisses and raw ham, cut in thin slices, is as general a custom in Germany as smoking or beer-drinking. Hence the rapid propagation of the disease, as a simple slice of ham or German sausage may contain larvæ of millions of these parasites.

The Scotch School System.

The greatest glory of Scotland is her system of education. Like the constitution of the French army which encourages every private soldier to feel that he carries in his knapsack the baton of a field marshal, the system of education in Scotland opens the gates of honour to the very humblest in the land. Opportunities of education are the birthright of every Scot. He is born to a share in the teaching of a parochial school, as he is born to a share in the air of heaven; and, perhaps, all things considered, the teaching costs him less than the air which, among the northern hills, is sometimes far from genial. The word 'parochial' is suggestive to the English mind of pauperism, of poor rates, a board of guardians, and the workhouse. As designating the character of Scotch schools, it has no such meaning. The parochial school is simply the public school of the parish, and in Scotland every parish has its public school, as in England every parish has its church. As in England, the rich and the poor meet together in church on the common ground of religion, so in Scotland the rich and poor meet together in the parish school on the common ground of education. Education is so sacred a thing in the eyes of Scotchmen that the son of a lord will not disdain to receive it sitting on the same form with the son of a labourer. Elsewhere in the world the 'Republic of Letters' is but a phrase; here it is a reality. The parochial school system of Scotland is founded upon true philosophy and a wise economy. It charges the property of the country with a share of the duty of educating the people. The charge falls directly upon the landed proprietors, but indirectly every inhabitant of the parish is a contributor to the same object. It is an indirect tax, included in the aggregate amount of the rent, which no one feels, because it is not set down as a separate item. Possibly in the lapse of time rents have come to be assessed without any regard to the school tax, and their amount would be neither more nor less if the system did not exist. The owners of the soil in each parish (the 'heritors,' as they are called) are bound by law to provide a schoolhouse, and to pay a properly-qualified schoolmaster a certain annual salary. This law was enacted in the reign of James VI., and was one of the first fruits of the Scottish Reformation. The institution to which it gave effect was intimately bound up with the scheme of the Presbyterian Church and to the clergy of the Presbytery was assigned the duty of appointing the schoolmaster.

A Prayer for Preservation from Pestilence.

The following prayer is set forth by the authority of the Bishops of the several dioceses within the Province of Canada, in consequence of the continued prevalence of the Cholera in various countries, and to be used on the Sunday next after it has been received by the officiating clergyman, and continued till the end of the season of Lent, at all services of the United Church of England and Ireland within the said Province, immediately before the general thanksgiving:

MOST GRACIOUS FATHER AND GOD, who hast promised forgiveness of sins to all them that with hearty repentance and true faith turn unto Thee, look down, we beseech Thee, from Heaven, Thy dwelling place, upon us, Thy unworthy servants, who, under an awful apprehension of Thy judgment, and a deep conviction of our sinfulness prostrate ourselves before Thee.—We acknowledge it to be of Thy goodness alone, that whilst Thou hast visited other nations with pestilence, Thou hast so long spared us. Have pity, O Lord, have pity on Thy people both here and elsewhere; withdraw Thy heavy hand from those who are suffering under Thy judgments, and turn away from us that grievous calamity, against which our only security is in Thy compassion. We confess with shame and contrition, that, in the pride and hardness of our hearts, we have shown ourselves unthankfull for the mercies, and have followed our own imaginations instead of Thy holy laws. Yet, O merciful Father, suffer not Thy destroying Angel to lift up his hand against us, but keep us up, as Thou hast heretofore done, in health and safety; and grant that we may be preserved from all evil by Thy mighty protection, and enjoy the continuance of Thy mercy and grace, through the merits of our only Mediator and Advocate, Jesus Christ. Amen.

PROBABLE CURE OF THE CATTLE PLAGUE.—An English paper says that, on the 3rd inst., Mr. John Maddocks, farmer, of Whithy, near Ellesmore Port, Cheshire, who had during the week, buried seventeen of his cows, drove five of his young stock, attacked by the rinderpest, into his orchard, with the intention of killing and burying them there if they should show no signs of recovery. They refused water and were in a very bad way. In the course of the day all the animals found their way to an old pit, which had been used for slacking lime, and each drank eagerly a quantity of the apparently stagnant water the pit contained. In this case, the instinct of the animals was most beneficial to them, for they began rapidly to recover their vivacity and their appetites, and, on Monday, Mr. Horne, veterinary surgeon of Little Sutton, pronounced them all out of danger; and to try and discover the secret of this unexpected event, he has secured a quantity of the lime-pit water for analysis, FEAR NOT.

Just as we went to press last week a telegram was received from the Brg. Major of this district to the Captains of Companies here, to hold themselves and their men in readiness for immediate movement, if need be. This, with every other foolish and fanciful report, created a little stir among the volunteers and also a little fear among those who were but little informed concerning the state of affairs. The cause of the telegram is supposed to be news from the other side, of a threatened attack upon our frontier, by the Fenians or some of them. The American Government, we are informed, have taken the precaution to place a guard at the Suspension Bridge, to prevent a raid from that quarter. Look-out parties are here and there stationed on the frontier, and every measure taken to prevent their landing on our soil, without opposition. Toronto has a considerable force of volunteers, and a little nucleus of regulars, around which the rest will rally. 10,000 volunteers are called, and these will soon be doubled, if wanted, so that with a considerable force before them, and an American army behind them, without money, arms or ammunition, there is not much danger of a successful raid. It may be attempted, there is folly and madness enough in the hearts of some of the fanatic Fenians to urge them on, but our people need not fear the result—terrible destruction to the hordes of dupes of the would-be Republic. Our own opinion is that there need be no great alarm, there are no great signs of imminent danger, and if there were, fear would not avert it. But to all this we think there are many Roman Catholics who will be found on the side of law and order. All who have property at stake, who have anything to lose will be found opposed to feinianism. The Fenian Brotherhood never can, and never will convert Ireland into a Republic, they are too weak, they are too disunited. They have not the means, no matter how willing. It would be madness to take sides with them, for their end must be disaster. All Catholics who consult their own interests will, therefore, unite in repelling an attack upon our border. We may rely on the justness and power of our cause, lay ourselves down in peace, and sleep, fearing no evil.

CANADIANS LOYAL.

It has been asserted that Canadians only waited for the first opportunity to show their sympathy for American ideas, but more especially annexation. Canadians have been branded as cowards, who were ready to cry Loyalty to England so long as England did the fighting and paid the expenses of Canadian defences and armaments. It has been urged that Canadian Loyalty was the result of British liberality, but as soon as the hour of danger would come, then Canadians would show their true colors by declaring themselves neutrals; if not, they would join the strong side, even though that side should be for the United States. Since '37–38 there has not been an opportunity of testing the Loyalty of Her Majesty's Canadian subjects, and it is to be hoped that the time has not yet arrived for bringing the matter to the test of actual fighting; but this one thing we do know that when the call to arms is given, that call will be responded to with alacrity and devotion to British rule and Britain's cause. The call to hold themselves in readiness was answered with a quick response; scarcely had the telegram been read when the noble Volunteers were seen flocking to their places of rendezvous for the purpose of preparation and to wait further orders. Every volunteer in Peterboro', Ashburnham and vicinity feels that the cause of Great Britain is his cause; that the liberty of the world is interwoven with the existence of British power; that the well being of Canadians in particular cannot, yet at all events, be separated from the existence of British rule in North America. They therefore with one heart, and as if with one voice, declare themselves ready to defend the crown and glory of the British Empire. Captains Poole, Kennedy and Rogers, and their noble volunteers, have shown themselves ready at a moment's warning. They needed not 24 hours, and we have no doubt but that they, in common with other volunteers of the Province, will show themselves equal to the work of defending our fair Province from the invasion of Fenian fanatics of whatever stamp, who shall dare to desecrate our soil with the tread of their unhallowed feet. This call has tested the readiness of our civilian-soldiery to give up the comforts and pleasures of home, and to brave the dangers of the battle field, if need be, against the enemies of the Empire, and we have no doubt but their alacrity will serve as a strong warning to Fenian filibusterers to stay at home, rather than trust themselves to the mercies of Canadians on the battle field.

HOME GUARDS.

The spirit of insecurity that pervaded the minds of a few of the weaker minded, but more especially of the women and children, induced the less warlike and more peace loving citizens to form themselves into volunteer bands, for the protection of their homes and the families of those who might be called to the front. These Home Guards will, if needed, go to the front also, and by their united action show their willingness to fight for their country as well as their homes.

We understand that the Hon. Sidney Smith has a company organized consisting of 150 men, and Mr. Dunnett was unanimously chosen Captain of a company consisting of about 100.

The firemen have also formed themselves into a company consisting of 75 men.

Peterborough therefore has a guard of over 300 men; these are drilling every night.

The formation of these Guards, is such we may be persuaded to call them, we believe to be a wise step. It will prepare the citizens for united and concerted action if dangers or troubles should arise, which we hope will not, and their presence will give somewhat of a sense of security to those who are too weak to go to the front; and it will show too that every man and boy in Canada is ready to take up arms in case of our common country's peril. One thing is certain that too much praise cannot be awarded to those who so willingly turned out at once for the defence of the country, and we are sure that this will not soon be forgotten by the people.

Fenianism Opposed to Catholicism.

In view of the immense power wielded by the clergy of the Church of Rome over their flock, and the meek and silent subjection of the Catholic to the will of the clergy, and the mandate of the Church—we have been led to the conclusion that Feinianism is about to prove a fatal blow to Popery, and our wonder is that papists do not see it.

In the first place Popery is monarchial and despotic. The history, ecclesiastical and secular, unanimously declares. Rome, Italy, Spain, Portugal, France, Austria, Belgium in the old world, and Mexico, Brazil, and all the Spanish and Portuguese settlements of the new world, are either monarchies or the rulers possess despotic powers. Hence any people setting up a Republic are setting up a form of government that ignores one man control, and declares that the "voice of the people is the supreme law." This is striking at the very root of the papacy, and its existence would very soon set at nought all priestly and prelatical sway or influence. Popery has never prospered under republican rule, as this implies the right of private judgment and the right to act according to that judgment, but papacy does not nor will it allow this, and therefore to set up a republic of Catholics is a death thrust at the system of Catholicism as now held and practised, and hence implies infidelity to the system. Therefore we say that Feinianism is opposed to popery. Popery has not flourished in the United States, as may be seen by the regular falling off of the faithful, and by the complaints of Bishops, &c., from time to time. At the time of the projected settlements in Canada of the faithful from the United States a few years ago, it was urged as necessary to protect the church against this yearly declension consequent upon their mixing with the people of the United States, and imbibing the doctrines set forth in their free institutions. Feinianism is the offspring of this degeneracy from the Church, and assuredly the Church may quake for the fear of establishing a Fenian Republic any where.

The following pastoral from Archbishop Cullen, read in the Dublin churches on the 18th, shows the view that dignitary takes of the Fenian Brotherhood, and he also considers the result of the movement will prove fatal to the cause of the church:—

"This Brotherhood or society, so far from promoting the interests of the country, only tends to aggravate its evils, checking business, increasing poverty, playing into the hands of Orangemen, as appears from the rejoicings of their press, and giving strength to all our enemies. In America, indeed, some Head Centres and leaders of Feinianism enriched by taxes levied on the simplicity and good faith of our countrymen, have been raised to a position in which they can live splendidly, and surround themselves with the state and pomp of a mock court. But how different the case in Ireland. Here those who have let themselves be duped by agents of the Brotherhood have been left without employment, and many of them reduced to the greatest difficulties, and even to a state of destitution. Buoyed up for a while with foolish hopes and fallacious promises, they have been used as mere tools to excite a popular feeling in favor of the organization in America, persuading our poor countrymen that great events, wonderful revolutionary movements were impending in Ireland, and thus inducing them them to part more freely with their money. While the Head Centres were thus enriched in America, their unhappy agents in Ireland, having become the victims of spies and informers, were brought before the public tribunals, and condemned to drag out a miserable existence amongst felons, in all the horrors of penal servitude. The moral effects of Feinianism have been most deplorable. Like Ribbonism and other secret associations, it is connected with drunkenness, and it is recorded by the public press that some of the leaders, whilst inebriated, lost papers which betrayed their secrets, and left them at the mercy of the police. Had not Feinianism been checked in its destructive career, it would have deluged the country with infidelity; and, imitating Voltaire and his impious followers, it would have prepared the minds of the people for the barbarous scenes which were enacted in France in the last century.

Another sign of Fenian opposition to popery is the disregard of the Brotherhood to the warning of the Priests and Bishops of their Church. All good Catholics obey the teachings of their clergy. Feinians, however, have all along despised that teaching, and have disregarded their threatened excommunication by the priest. In the season of the greatest power of the Church over the people, it was held as a heinous sin to disobey the clergy in any matter, and to disobey was considered one of the strongest proofs of being given up to delusion, and as a consequence, destruction. Now Feinians disregard all teaching. They have threatened those priests who opposed them, and are determined, to all appearance, to carry out their design against the will of priests and bishops. Is not this a strong proof of the opposition of Feinianism to Popery? Catholics would do well to consider these things, and, if they do not desire the overthrow of their own religion, keep away from any association that strikes so terribly at the foundation of their religion, and especially at the power of the Head of their Religion. The temporal power of the Pope was first shaken by Catholics themselves. Henry the VIII, a good Catholic, disregarded that power, set up his own power independent of the Pope, and laid the foundation of disobedience in high places in England. Napoleon, a good Catholic, disregarded popish will to carry out his own will. The Italians, good Catholics, set at nought the power of the old man, and set up a power of their own, a power too that will drive Pio Nono out of Rome yet. Feinianism is now sowing the seed of opposition to the will and teaching of the clergy, that will take root downwards and bear fruit upward, which will prove the overthrow of popery in Ireland, although a republic never be established there. The seed has been sown in Republican America, and will ripen into fruit of the principles of the Reformation. And yet the people do not, or will not see it. Can it be possible that the system is about to destroy itself? We dare almost predict, although no prophets, that if the Irish Republican Force of America succeed the death knell of that system that has so long been the cause of Ireland's distraction would be sounded. When will Irishmen learn wisdom, and seek liberty in the liberty of thought and action. They only being freemen whom the truth makes free; who in spite of fools or themselves consult seriously.

MILITARY MOVEMENTS.

The reports from the various places throughout the Province testify to the alacrity of the volunteers. The call has been willingly responded to every where. Already several companies have gone forward to the front, and many more are waiting for the word "march." At Ottawa the volunteers were reporting themselves in the city from various places in a few hours after receiving orders. At the important centres, the greatest enthusiasm is manifested.—Toronto has a considerable force, and more are gathering in as ordered. Here the brave volunteers are just waiting for orders to move. In fact the greatest willingness to proceed at once is every where evident.—Drilling is going on constantly, and the Feinians will find that they have got into a hot place when they cross the border.

On Sabbath, Captain Poole's and Captain Rogers' companies attended services at St. John's Church, thus exhibiting a willingness to obey both religious and civil obligations; and it is to be hoped that they will be found, if called away, acting as becometh good soldiers and as citizens of a better country.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

The Anniversary of Ireland's Patron Saint falls on Saturday this year. Under ordinary circumstances we would have allowed the day to come and go without a notice. Our own views are for liberty to all to act as they consider right, provided they do not interfere with the rights of others. There can be no harm in members of the St. Patrick's Society meeting and proceeding to Church on that day, provided they go quietly and without banners or other insignia contrary to the national flag, or colors and we are sure no protestant would interfere with them for so doing. But inasmuch as there are certain rumours of united action on the part of these Societies, we think that it would be for the public quiet if no procession take place on Saturday. We do not say so because we have any desire to prevent members of the Society going to Church, by no means; but as the Society in Cobourg is not going to have any public demonstration on that day, it is not too much to ask the same here.—On the other hand, those who are of other Societies should be careful to give no offense to those of different views. Peace and not contention should be the general desire, and we trust that we will be able to record peace as the general order of that day.

Curlers' Festival.

A MOVEMENT AT LAST.—By special telegram last evening, from Watertown, in the State of New York, we are informed that the militia officers of that division had received orders to fill up their companies to the maximum numbers, in anticipation of their being called out to do duty on the frontier—of course, we assure, to preserve the peace.—Globe.

Compulsory Education.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

Sir:—In my last I ceased that Dr. Ryerson could have written Tables in 1851 against compulsory attendance at school, intimating that his views have undergone a change since that period. I intend in this to give some extracts from the Doctor's Reports on Education a long period after that date to prove this statement, as well as some extracts from the speeches of members of Parliament in England, showing how the sentiment of compulsory education is regarded in that country.

The first comprehensive School Act in Upper Canada, and the one upon which our present Act is founded, was that of 1850. Dr. Ryerson in his Report of Education for that year thus expresses himself in reference to compulsory attendance: "The system of schools makes the best provision and furnishes the strongest inducements for the education of every youth in each school section of the land. To compel the education of the children by the terror of legal pains and penalties, is at variance with my ideas of the true method of promoting universal education. • • • • While therefore the quarterly rate bill per pupil is a temptation to each parent to keep his children from the school, the annual school rate upon property furnishes each parent with a corresponding inducement to send his child on to school. The facilities thus provided for the education of each child in a school section, will leave the ignorant, careless, or unnatural parent without excuse for the educational neglect of his children. The finger of universal reproof and scorn pointed at him will soon prove more powerful than statute law, and without infringing any individual right, will, morally, compel him, in connection with higher considerations, to send his children to school." Again, in his Report for 1851, he says: "The education of the youth of the country consists no merely of what is taught in the day school, but also what is taught at home by the parents, and in the church by the pastors. And if the religious part of the education of youth is in any instance neglected or defective, the blame rests with the pastors and parents concerned • • • In all such cases pastors and parents are the responsible as well as guilty parties, and not the teachers of the common school nor the common school system."

In 1855 he thus discourses on religious instruction: "There is no education, properly speaking, without religion, any more than there is a man without a soul. Religion is the soul of education as it is the life of the soul of man. • • • It is the duty of parents and pastors of each religious persuasion to provide for the religious instruction of their own children. The State is not to ignore the churches of the land in its school system." Coming down to 1857, we find him defining clearly the duty of the State and that of the parent: "Man has a higher destiny than that of States. • • • Religious instruction is therefore an essential part of the education of every human being. • • • The question is, to whom is the divine command given to bring up children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord? To the parent or to he State? It is clearly the duty of the State to provide for the security of life and property, and therefore to punish all crime that endangers the one or the other. It is clearly within the province of the State to provide for its own safety, and as education is essential to the security of government, the supremacy of public law, as well as to the individual interests of the members of the community, it becomes the duty of the State, or of the people in their civil capacity, to provide for it. But as there is a destiny so there is a mission higher than that of States. The State is not the individual parent of the child, nor is the State the christian Church, nor was it intended to supersede either the parent or the church. The functions of the parent and of the Church are prior to and above those of the State. It is not to the State that the command was given to 'preach the gospel to every creature,' and 'bring up children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.' The State aids parents in the teaching of their children the secular subjects of a necessary education."

I could give any number of extracts from this Report to show how careful he seems to tread upon parental rights After appealing to clergymen, parents, merchants, magistrates and judges to assist in their individual capacity to gather to the school from the highways and hedges the prodigal children of their prodigal brethren, in place of finding fault with the school system, and exhorting each citizen patiently to submit to the compulsory tax imposed for the support of an elementary education for all the youth in the country, he thus refers again to parental rights: "It has also been objected that the system of public schools interferes with parental rights. Nothing can be more unfounded and absurd than this objection. The very object of the public school system is to enable parents to educate their children in their own way, to aid them to do more for their children than they could otherwise do—recognising every where and at all times the sacredness and supremacy of parental authority." See much more in the same strain in the Report of 1857, pages 27 and 29. This Report was submitted to the Legislature in the summer of 1858. But while thus giving his views on the "sacredness and supremacy" of parental rights, finding that the free school system in towns and cities had not produced what was expected from it, he returns to the natural sequence of his theory of compulsory taxation, viz: compulsory attendance. I give a short extract from the Report of 1857, pages 26, 27: "The rational objection is not that the people are municipally invested with too large powers for the education of the rising generation, but that those powers are still too limited to enable them to accomplish the great object desired—the education of all the youth of the municipality. If ignorance is an evil to society, voluntary ignorance is a crime against society And if society is invested with power to relieve all from the evil of ignorance by providing for the education of all, the safety and interests of society, no less than the mission of its existence require that it should be able to suppress and prevent the crime of voluntary ignorance by punishing its authors, &c." It will be seen by reading what precedes and follows the above extract that the Dr. here contemplates imposing the "pains and penalties" on the children not the parents. Apart from the sophistry of the above arguments one cannot but notice the adroit manner in which he deals in matters of casuistry with all parties he has to deal with—In a correspondence with with Rev. Mr. Bruyere, as published in the Leader, of the 16th January, 1857, we find this remarkable passage: "The state or collective people should proceed a step farther and see that not only, that provision is made for the instruction of each child, but that each child should receive somewhere a certain amount, or a certain period of instruction. • • • This is a power within which the state through the several Municipalities of the land, should be invested—a power with which I proposed to invest them by a draft of a bill and communication submitted to Government two years ago." From this it appears, that for 11 years, Dr. Ryerson has labored to introduce his compulsory measure, twice he has stamped the Country to present its claims, and if not prevented by the legislature he will force it on the Country. Well, he may succeed, but in his triumph he may find his whole school system tumble to pieces. Apologising for the length of this letter, I must reserve for my next the extracts promised above.

Yours truly,

J. F.

Compulsory Education.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir:—With your consent, I would like to say a few words on the above important subject. All agree that education is a good thing, from the most illiterate up to the most intelligent no one differs on that point, and still we have in our midst thousands of people totally ignorant through the negligence of their parents, many of whom are careless, dissipated, thoughtless characters. I beg to say that, taking these plain facts into consideration, it is my candid opinion that the law that would force parents to see to the education of their offspring, would be a just and wise one. Men of all ages differ with regard to religious matters, but no difference of opinion is held as to the necessity of education. Even the uneducated industrious man, and his most earnest desire is with regard to his child's education, for experience has taught him that a man is at a great disadvantage without it.

Your correspondent "J. F." asks "is it not an uncontrovertable fact that a mere intellectual training, without a moral and religious education, will not restrain from vice." I should think if he had said a moral and intellectual training, he would have been nearer the facts, for does not our school books teach morals? I see from the first book of the authorised series, when the child learns (lesson VI) "a dog ran at a cat and bit it," he also learns "to do all is to sin."

"Mark silent King the moral of this spect"
—SHAK.

That is not intellectual only, but moral and intellectual, hand and hand. The statistics of the Toronto City Jail also shows plainly that "ignorance is the parent of crime," and I copy them from J. E.'s letter:

Total committed	1445
Number who could neither read nor write,	490
Read only	254
Read and write imperfectly	657
Read and write well	43
Superior education	4

These figures show that over one-third were altogether void of education, over three-fifths little better, while there were 40 who could read and write well, and only four having a superior education. Now, Mr. Editor, is any one balance these figures in their mind and it is an impossibility to come to any other conclusion, than that "ignorance is the parent of crime."

Then look for a minute at the present state of Ireland and one is inclined to say with Dryden,—

"Ignorant of guilt I fear no shame."

Does not these words apply to the thousands of Fenians, who don't know that they are "cutting a stick to break their own backs." It is humiliating to read of them, almost in open rebellion against the government; and what is the cause of this Fenian conspiracy? I think the great ignorance is the Irish Church establishment. Now the dissenting churches of Scotland are in exactly the same position with regard to having to pay their share of the established church minister's salaries as are the Catholics in Ireland, but the difference is this Scotland is one of the most educated and enlightened countries in the world, whereas those Fenians in particular are, in ninety-nine cases out of the hundred, ignorant, not being able either to read or write; and I believe of all people Irishmen have the natural capacity for moral and intellectual eminence. What is wanting in Ireland is education, and I expect before two years runs its time you will see a grand national secular educational system of schools adopted, and parents belonging to whatever creed, will not only have to educate their children, but have to send them to these national schools, and the government will see that they are educated.

Your correspondent in a more recent letter seems to think that religious training is more wanting to reclaim the ignorant than anything else. I consider religion above all things a work of love, and certainly there is more love between a parent and his child than between a teacher or even a minister and any one's child. An old and respected minister I used to sit under used to say, that 'you might as well whip a boy into love as whip him into religion.' And I for one say that its my candid opinion that you go beyond the teaching of the New Testament when you want to compel people to go to Church. I suppose that was exactly what "J. E." wanted to be allowed. Education and religion are two vastly different things, and I think I have said enough to show that, look after the parents, and force them to send their children to the school, for to receive a moral and intellectual education, and you will work wonders.

—Will you let me say that in my last letter it was the "works" of Geo Combe, not the "words," and believe me to be

Yours, &c.,

SHARP-SHOOTING IN CANADA.—"Is there something in the Canadian climate that steadies the hand and sharpens the sight? This is a question which is put under the above heading in the last "Albion." It is suggested by an examination of the January official returns from the school of musketry at Hythe, England, which establish the comparative proficiency, during the past year of the various regiments quartered in the United Kingdom, in the Channel Islands and in British North America. The test is applied among eighty-six competing bodies of men, the order of merit in each case being numerically set down; and the first, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eight, and tenth places are awarded to soldiers who are now, or have been recently, stationed in Canada. These are successively the Fourth Battalion of 60th Rifles, the first of the Rifle Brigade, the 30th and 40th Foot, the first Battalion of the Grenadier Guards, the Second of the Scots Fusiliers, and the First of the 25th Foot. It is the same with the Royal Engineer Corps. The performances of ten of its detached companies are detailed, and at the head of the list is the 15th Company, actually in Canada. But we must not omit to mention, that excellent as is the shooting of the regulars formerly or now stationed in Canada, our volunteer corps have surpassed them and carried off the prizes from the crack corps in the contests which have taken place in Montreal.—Montreal Herald.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—Last Sunday afternoon a young lad about 17 years of age, named John Silmser was skating on the ice which had formed on one of the ponds created by the thaw of the few preceding days in the rear of the town, and, losing his balance, fell upon a sharp pointed stick which protruded from the ice. The stick penetrated his thigh, and, passing completely through the fleshy in the wound. The lad fainted on receiving the wound, and bled profusely before assistance could be obtained to carry him home and proper surgical aid to carry him home and proper surgical aid. Drs. Dickinson and Chesley were promptly in attendance and extracted the stick; but the wound proved to be of so serious a nature that but little could be done to save life. The main artery was severed and could not be secured without amputation, which with the weakness from the loss of blood and the nearness of the wound to the body was out of the question Inflammation of course set in and the poor fellow died yesterday morning between seven and eight o'clock. He was the elder of two brothers, only children, and a very promising boy. His father is in California; and his mother at present alone in her bereavement has the sympathy of the community.—Freeholder.

NEW YORK, March 10.—The Express says that it has excellent authority for stating that several conferences have taken place between Secretary Seward and Sir F. Bruce, British Minister at Washington, upon the subject of Fenian movements. The latter has been assured that no violation of the neutrality law will be permitted, and should events demonstrate its necessity, a proclamation will be promptly issued on the first attempt to violate the neutrality laws, warning all those engaged of the consequences.

FENIAN TWADDLE.

The Fenian Plan of a Canadian Campaign.

From the N. Y. World of the 9th.

The Fenian Circles are at this time intensely excited with regard to the open raising campaign of the Brotherhood against Canada and the British Provinces.

All eyes turn to General Sweeney, who is ready to develop his theories of action. He is believed to have the most practical ideas of war; and having already large stores of arms, a treasury, and transports, he is concentrating upon himself the enthusiasm of the Irishmen who are weary of talk and eager for work.

We visited some of the leading Fenian Circles yesterday, and obtained the following suggestions, which it is believed embody the entire Sweeney programme for the invasion of our British neighbour's territory:

GRAND STRATEGY—THE PARTITION OF CANADA.

Expeditions for the invasion of Canada will rendezvous at Detroit and Rochester, and at Ogdensburg and Plattsburgh, and at Portland. The forces assembled at the two first-named points are to operate conjointly against Toronto, Hamilton and the west of Upper Canada. From Ogdensburg and Plattsburg demonstrations will be made against Montreal, and ultimately Quebec; Kingston will be approached by Cape Vincent, while Portland will be the general place of embarkation for expeditions against the capitals of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

THE BASES OF OPERATIONS.

The Canadian and Provincial borders once crossed, bases of operations will be established in the enemy's country, so that international quarrels with the Washington government may be evaded. There are to be lands chosen at the head of the Penasnaquoddy Bay, Saint John's on the Chambly, close to the foot of Lake Champlain; Prescott, on the St. Lawrence; Wolf Island, at the head of Lake Ontario; Hamilton, Cobourg, Goderich, and Windsor, in Upper Canada. These places are all within convenient distances of the United States, and afford by water an easy retreat, as well as cunning receptacles for fresh American levies.

THE FORCES AT THE DISPOSAL OF THE FENIANS.

The Sweeney government calculates to have, by the first of April, fifteen millions of dollars at its disposal, in ready cash.—This will give transportation and maintenance for one month to thirty thousand men, a greater number than were ever before mustered to the conquest of the Canadian possessions. Of this force, eight thousand will carry the line of the Grand Trunk road west of Hamilton; five thousand crossing from Rochester to Cobourg, will be prepared to move either east, in time to act jointly with three thousand men from Wolfe Island, upon Kingston, or to take part with the western detachment in the capture of Toronto. All this, it is believed, will be the work of two weeks. Thus intrenched securely in Upper Canada, holding all the routes of the Grand Trunk, with sufficient rolling stock secured to control the main line, the Fenians hope to attract to their colors fifty thousand American Irishmen, and equip a navy on Lake Huron, Erie and Ontario. The resources to return being so secured, thirty thousand men under General Sweeney will move down the St. Lawrence, upon Kingston, simultaneously with ten thousand men by the lines of the Chambly, and these will converge upon Montreal; in the meantime isolated expeditions from the rendezvous at Saint Andrews will reduce Saint John and Halifax, these furnishing depots for privateers and ocean men-of-war to intercept British transports and effectually close the St. Lawrence. Quebec will thus fall by the slow conquest of time; or, if the resources of the garrison be greater than the patience of the invaders, the same heights which two Irishmen have scaled before, will again give foothold to the columns of the Brotherhood.

THE PLAN OF INVASION IN DETAIL.

At Chicago, the Fenians already possess five sailing vessels, a tug, and two steam transports; at Buffalo, they are negotiating for vessels; at Bay City, Michigan, and at Cleveland, they have other craft in process of refitting; these will simultaneously raise the green flag, and stand ready to succor the land forces. Goderich, Sarnia and Windsor will be simultaneously occupied; all the available rolling stock seized, and the main line of the Grand Trunk cut at Grand River, to prevent the passage of cars and locomotives to Hamilton. The geographical configuration of the western half of Upper Canada will permit of a few thousand men holding the entire section of country between Cobourg and the Georgian Bay. These are connected by a chain of lakes and water-courses, and the country affords subsistence for a vast army. Horses sufficient to mount as many cavalry as the Brotherhood can muster, quarter-masters' teams in quantity, and a vast amount of lake shipping, will at once be the property of the organization. The country will at once be reduced to a grand military department, with Hamilton for the capital, and a loan advertised for. While this is being negotiated, General Sweeney will push rapidly forward on the line of the Grand Trunk, in time to superintend the fall of Montreal, when ocean shipping will be found in great quantity. With the reduction of Montreal, a demand will be made upon the United States for a formal recognition of Canada, whose name is to be changed at once to New Ireland. While this is being urged, the green flag will scour all the bays and gulfs in Canada; a Fenian fleet from San Francisco will carry Vancouver and the Fraser River country, to give security to the Pacific squadron rendezvousing at San Juan, and the rights of belligerents will be enforced from the British Government by prompt retaliation for the cruelties of British courts-martial.

ABILITY OF THE FENIANS TO HOLD CANADA.

The population of the British provinces is little above two and a half millions, and the military resources of the united province fall short of sixty thousand men. Of these nearly ten thousand are of Irish birth or descent. The States will furnish for the subjugation of these eighty thousand veteran troops. With the single exception of Quebec, it is believed that the whole of the British Provinces will fall in a single campaign. During the ensuing winter, diversions will be put in motion in Ireland, and while it is believed the Brotherhood can defy the Queen's wan transports to land an army in the west, arrangements will be developed to equip a powerful navy, for aggressive operation on the sea. Before the 1st of June, it is thought, fifty commissioned vessels of war and privateers, carrying three hundred guns, will be afloat, and to maintain these a tremendous moral influence will be exerted upon every Irish-American citizen to contribute to the utmost to the general fund for the support of the war.

By the tempting offer of the surrender of Canada to the United States, Mr. Seward, it is hoped, will work an ominence between American citizens and the Fenian conquerors, and by another manœuvre it is thought the domain of the Brotherhood north of the St. Lawrence will be formally acknowledged by the United States, Russia and each of the American Republics. The third year of Irish tenure in Canada will, it is believed, array two of the great powers against Great Britain. John Mitchel, at Paris, will organize the Bureau of Foreign Agents; and Ireland, maintaining a position of perpetual revolt, will engage for her own suppression a considerable part of the regular British levies.

EUROPEAN OPERATION.

At the present time a bureau of operations is being quietly organized in Paris, where the opposition press has already proclaimed for Irish nationality. It is Mr. Mitchel who sees that the funds of the Brotherhood are distributed in Ireland; he also is in correspondence with liberal statesmen in Great Britain, and conducts the disintegration of the British army by touching loyalty of the Irish troops, who constitute one-third of the Queen's service.

THE CUNARD STEAMERS TO BE SEIZED.

Among the earliest aggressive operation will be the overhauling of a Cunard steamer be ween New York and Cape Race, with her usual allotment of specie. In like manner, the British lines of steamers proceeding from England to Quebec, Portland, Boston, and Halifax, will be arrested and their funds secured.

THE WAR IN IRELAND

Military operations in Ireland must, of necessity, be confined to the interior. Three military departments will be organized, the Shannon, the Liffey, and the Foyle, and the campaign will be entirely predatory or guerrilla in its conduct. The British Coast Guard stations will fall easy conquest, their number and isolation contributing to their ruin; while from the Wicklow mountains through all the rocky fastnesses of Ireland, the cottagers will descend upon the British garrisons, maintaining perpetual and bloody rebellion till the patience of England is quite worn out.

This is the Fenian programme as talked in all military connexions, and embracing the extreme aspirations of the boldest Feinians.

Said one of these to us:

"The logic of circumstances is one of our dependencies. The curse and hazard of Europe spring from the condition of things against which we rebel. As the Celt in Ireland is an unwilling subject of the Saxon, so are the Moygars deadly enemies to their conquerers, the Germans; the Selavonations of the Turks, and the Poles of the Russians. Our example will set these in motion. We will teach them all that the safety of Europe lies in justice to the Irish. There is no reason why we cannot carry on a war like the Northmen, who conquered in succession France, Sicily, and England.—We are a martial people, our natural tendency is for the profession of arms. We are bent upon this thing, and if all our race perish we shall achieve it."

The Excitement in Ireland.

FENIANISM IN THE AMRY.

(Dublin, [Feb. 27] Telegrams to the London Times.)

This morning the orderly officers and sergeant-majors in the Dublin garrison inspected the Fenian prisoners, and identified five, arrested in civilians' clothes as deserters from their regiments in England. They were delivered handcuffed to the military authorities. Three publicans and another man were arrested this morning, Sergeant Campbell, of the Antrim militia, and two other men were arrested to-day in Belfast; also a man named Murphy, in Cork, and another at Kinsale.

A BOX OF GRENADES AND SHELLS—ANOTHER FENIAN PROCLAMATION.

(Dublin Correspondence London Times)

This morning the attention of the police was attracted to a box which came from Liverpool in the steamer which arrived at the North Wall, addressed to a person in Dublin, and labelled "hardware." The police took possession of the box, opened it, and found that it contained some hand grenades and shells. The name of the person to whom these articles were consigned is withheld by the police for obvious reasons.

A correspondent of the Freeman reports that at the small village of Ashbourne, in the county Meath, the police proceeded on Thursday evening to a small untenanted house and there arrested twelve respectable young men, charged on suspicion with being connected with the Fenian movement.—This is the first instance of Feinianism in this locality, with the exception of a Fenian proclamation, which was posted on the pier of the chapel gate on last Saturday night, and was as follows.—

PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, a certain patriotic and noble race, called Irishmen, have organized in one body, all Irishmen, of every religious persuasion, to take up arms at a moment's notice, aided by the strong arm of Union square, which is the symbol of our redemption. Irishmen, organize. War! war! war! We will rise simultaneously and banish alien rule.

God save Stephens!

COUNTERFEIT FENIAN BONDS.—It is important to the purchasers of pecuniary badges of Irish independence to know that three presses have been running a fortnight or longer on a very accurate counterfeit of the Fenian bonds of various denominations. The curious ten-dollar bonds so closely resemble the genuine that it requires an expert to detect the cheat. Of the bonds of greater denomination the police have no description. The engravers and printers of these counterfeit bonds are said to have been employed by men of large resources—whether British or otherwise, is not stated—and it is, moreover, alleged that the backers of the counterfeiters have employed a gang of adventurers to distribute their bonds, and that already many thousands of the false tokens have been sold to the credulous Irishmen and hardworking servant girls, and that the interior of the State and New England and the West here been flooded with the counterfeits or are to be flooded with them within a fortnight.—N. Y. Paper

FENIAN RUMOURS.—Under our telegraphic head will be found several despatches of a highly inflammatory kind, from New York, in regard to Fenian movements. These despatches are sent over the wires by the agents of the Associated Press; and as the Fenian movement has for months past been systematically puffed into notice throughout the Union by this agency, we have learned to put little faith in its utterance on this special subject. The reports to-day surpass all that has come before, and must be received with a considerable discount.—Globe.

BOSTON, Feb. 9.—A grand Fenian demonstration was held at the Music Hall last evening. The capacious edifice was crowded to its utmost capacity, and thousands were turned away, unable to obtain entrance. Address were made by Col. O'Mahony, Capt. McCafferty, the military envoy from Ireland, and Haggarty, of New York, P. A. Sweet, J. E. Fitzgerald, central organizer, and others. A series of resolutions were unanimously adopted. Great enthusiasm was manifested, and at the close of the meeting a large amount of Fenian bonds were disposed of.

There was an immense Fenian meeting at Coo

The Militia General Order.

INTERESTING PARTICULARS FOR VOLUNTEERS.

OTTAWA, March 10, 1866.

His Excellency's order calling out the Volunteers, appears in the Official Gazette. Between Rifle and Infantry Companies, and Batteries of Artillery, one hundred corps are summoned from the different districts of Upper Canada, and forty-nine corps from Lower Canada. Two Batteries and four Infantry Companies are called from London; one Infantry Battalion and one Naval Company and Field Battery from Hamilton; Troop of Cavalry, Garrison Battery, Naval Company, 2nd Battalion Queen's Own Rifles and 10th Royals from Toronto; two troops of Cavalry, 9th and 7th Battalions, Field Battery, Provincial Battalion, Garrison Artillery Company, No. 1 Troop of Cavalry, No. 2 Royal Golden Field Battery, Battery of Garrison Artillery, Battalion 1st Engineer Company, 2nd Company 1st Prince of Wales Regiment, (Rifles), 3rd Victoria Volunteer Rifles, 4th Battalion Chasseurs, (Canadian,) 5th Royal Light Infantry, 6th Hochelaga, Montreal.

His Excellency directs that the volunteer forces shall be liable on active service, be placed under the command of General Michel, and be subject to the Queen's regulations and orders for the army, to the rules and articles of war, and the act for punishing mutiny and desertion, and to all other laws now applicable to Her Majesty's troops in this Province, not inconsistent with the acts respecting the Volunteer Militia. No. 2—The rates of pay and allowance of the force called out, are fixed as follows: Lieut.-Colonel, pay per day daily rate, allowance in lieu of barrack, rations, &c; Lieut.-Colonel, $4 87, allowance of $1; Major's pay, $3 80, allowance $1; Paymaster, $3 05, and 90 cents; Adjutant, with rank of Lieutenant, $2 44, allowance 90 cents; Adjutant, with rank of Ensign, $2 13, allowance 90 cents; Captain, $2 92, allowance 72 cents; Lieutenant, $1 84, allowance 72 cents; Ensign or Cornet, $1 28, allowance 64 cents. And the rate of pay for each non-commissioned officer and man shall be as follows for the respective grades: Sergeant major, rate of pay per day 50 cents; Quarter Master Sergeant, 45 cents; Pay Master's Clerk, 45 cents; Orderly Room Clerk, 45 cents; Hospital Sergeant, 45 cents; Pay Sergeants, 40 cents; Corporal, 30 cents; Buglers, 25 cents, Privates, 25 cents. And the non-commissioned officers and privates shall receive either free lodgings and rations, or an allowance in lieu thereof as may in different cases be deemed most advisable, and in cases where no allowance is granted, such allowance shall be at the rate of 50 cents per diem for each non-commissioned officer and man.

Number 4.—The Commander-in-Chief regrets that he is compelled, as a measure of precaution, to call forth the active service of so large a number of the Volunteer Force. This step does not result from the existence of a condition of war between our Sovereign and any Foreign State. It is rendered necessary in the performance of the duty which has devolved on the government of making provision for protecting the lives and property of the inhabitants against threatened piratical attacks of lawless men, who use the territory of a neighboring power for the purpose of openly organizing enterprises against the sovereign rights of the Queen and the security of her subjects. The Commander-in-chief relies with confidence on the loyal spirits of the Canadians to meet this extraordinary state of facts and feels assured that if necessary the entire population of the Province would come forward to resist any invasion of the country. The Commander-in-chief knows it is not necessary to address any observations to the officers and men now called out for active service on the importance of strict attention to their military duties, and he is convinced that should the threats of the attack be carried into effect, Canadian Volunteers of the present day, will, with Gods blessing, meet with as much success in repelling such a criminal and wanton outrage against humanity and civilization as was given to their ancestors when they were called upon to roll back from their territories the tide of legitimate war, or to repulse attacks of lawless invaders.

By command of the Governor General and Commander-in-chief.

Adjt.-Gen. of Militia.

An Opening for Enterprise.

Lumber is an article which, almost like wheat, will command a good price in any quarter of the globe. In placing a duty upon its entrance into the country, we believe the Americans will not injure us, but that this duty will fall mainly upon themselves. But whatever the result may be in this respect, we hope that our lumber dealers, aided by our shippers, will now make a determined effort to increase our lumber trade with foreign countries other than the United States, particularly those of South America.

There are few among us aware of the large trade in lumber carried on between New York, Boston, Portland and other American cities, with Cuba, Brazil, the Argentine and Cesplatine Republics, and other countries in the South. During the past year, we see by an annual report recently published, there were shipped from the port of New York alone, nearly 30,000,000 feet! This large quantity was distributed as follows: Cuba 2,042,000 feet; East Indies, 2,048,000 feet; Brazil, 2,062,000; Argentine Republic, 7,354,000; Cesplatine Republic 5,894,000; Australia 4,95..000; April, 1,370,000; Peru, 1,341,000; and Africa, 1,905,000. These figures are given for New York alone, and it may be they are somewhat in excess; but Boston, Portland, and other Northern cities also ship considerable lumber, so that the trade may be set down as quite extensive. Now the question arises, where was this lumber originally obtained? The forests of New England may be said to have disappeared—the Americans have to buy lumber for themselves—how, then, comes it that such large shipments to South America can be made from Northern ports?

The solution of this problem is mainly to be found in their large purchases of Canadian lumber every year. We are assuming the greatest lumber-producing countries in the world, and next to Great Britain, the United States is our best customer. As they purchase largely of breadstuffs from us and sell again in Europe, so they seem to buy much of our lumber and resell to Southern countries with which they trade. Nor in the latter case do they make less profits than in the former. The prices obtained for certain kinds of lumb rat Havana, Rio Janeiro, or Buenos Ayres, are enormous. Recent advices show that from $45 to $60 per thousand feet is obtainable for shipping boards at these places, and occasionally even a higher figure has been reached. At such prices as these, the Americans must make a handsome thing out of this traffic.

Why cannot Canadians supply this South American trade direct? Why allow Brother Jonathan to gobble up the largest share of the profits on lumber produced by us? There is certainly nothing to hinder us supplying Cuba, and in largely increasing our exports to the West Indies—and even the South American Republics offer an excellent opening for Canadian capital and enterprise. There are all the conditions which go to make up success. There are steady markets, high prices, and a constant demand. We should like to see some of our capitalists enter into it in trade with energy and spirit, believing that what proves profitable to Americans—who only get the lumber at second hand—would be greatly more so to Canadians, whose country produces it.

If Canada intends to make an endeavour to render itself less dependent upon the United States in matters of trade, such openings for enterprise as the one under consideration, must not pass unimproved. An argument frequently urged against our sending our breadstuffs to tropical countries is, that flour produced from wheat grown so far north as Canada, almost immediately sours in warm climates! But this objection in no way affects lumber, and the shipping risks are not very great. In short, we see no insuperable difficulties in the way of Canada securing the lions share of the profits of this valuable trade.

Under Confederation, we should think, that this extension of our lumber trade would prove very advantageous to the shipping interests of the Maritime Provinces. Lower Canada would also be benefited in this respect. We would therefore reap a double advantage if we could carry on this trade with South America—an advantage which would doubtless add to our country's prosperity. Is not so desirable a result worthy of earnest efforts to accomplish it? —Trade Review.

TROY, MARCH 4.—The largest and most enthusiastic Fenian meeting ever held in this city took place this afternoon. Addresses were delivered by Hon. Thos. S. Carroll, of this city, and Robert Crane, M. C., on the Irish patriotism of 1848.—Their sentiments were that money, not men was wanted. Both speakers were sanguine of aid from Napoleon and Russia. Great excitement exists among the Irish of the city. Meeting held nightly. Large collections of arms and ammunition are rumored to have been made in this city.

BOSTON, MARCH 4.—A large gathering of Fenians, representing the Shawmut district, was held at the quarters in Pabover street, on Saturday night, at which $36,000 in bonds was filled.

The Sunday Science Movement.

WORTHY OF PRAISE.

It is now pretty generally known that a project has been lately started in London for attracting those who do not go to church or chapel, to listen to "discourses on science and the wonders of the universe, professing a reverence and love of the Deity, and raising an opposing principle to intemperance and immorality." This object is sought to be obtained by delivering lectures on Sunday evening by Dr Carpenter, Professor Huxley, Sir John Bowring, and others. The character of these discourses is thus described by the London Review:—"These new lights are to make men seek after temperance and morality. They throw aside the sublime set code of morals men ever knew, with its highest motives and Divine sanction, so suited to all the wants and weakness of our nature, and then prepare to indoctrinate the world with morality, without any objective standard. Men are asked to leave a safe and tried ship, and embark in their frail craft, without a sail, a compass, or chart, or a haven before them, and to drift on the wild waves of doubt and speculation. The world has seen, time after time, that every system of morality without religion is a sham and a failure. We can no more effectually change the human heart, and move it on into a path of moral, unselfish, pure duty to our fellow men, without the help of heaven given us in religion, than we can move the world with a fulcrum resting on the world. We must have a moving power beyond and outside of earth, to move the consciences of man to that power and position which commands and calls forth its sublimest morality and its greatest excellence."

There are now twenty-three steam packet companies in Great Britain, who own about 370 steamers, the tonnage of which is 840,000, the horse power 110,000 and the value between £30,000,000 and £40,000,000 sterling, 164 of these ships are connected with Liverpool, 96 with Southampton, 40 with Hull, 35 with London, 16 with Glasgow, and 15 with Marlespool 200 of these steamers trade with the eastern, and 170 with the western hemispheres. Upwards of 80 of the largest of the latter trade exclusively with the United States. The whole of these steamers run about 10,000,000 miles and consume about 4,000,000 tons of coal in the course of a year, and they give employment to 30,000 seafaring men. The same number of sailing ships would not run one quarter the number of miles in a year. The above ships are exclusive of about 100 steamers that run to and fro from England and the continent by the southern ports in the English Channel. The whole of this vast steamship power of the country has been created within the last thirty years.

IS IT OR IS IT NOT TO BE.—We say it is, and must be considered the most wonderful medicine ever discovered for the radical cure of all rheumatic complaints, coughs, colds, sprains, bruises, &c. We speak of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," If not only removes all pain instantly, but effects permanent cures. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

DON'T ANNOY US!—We do not like to be annoyed in church by people barking and coughing, when by putting one of Bryan's Wafers in their mouths, they may cause the annoyance. Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers cost 25 cents a box at all Druggists.

Among the most important of modern Medical discoveries, stands the Canadian Pain Destroyer.

As a Family Medicine, it is well and favorably known, relieving thousands from pain in the Side, Back and Head, Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Sprains, Bruises, Cramps in the Stomach, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Bowel Complaints, Burns, Scalds, Frost-bites, &c. &c. The Canadian Pain Destroyer has now been before the Public for a length of time, and wherever used is well liked, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction, where the Directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

We speak from experience in this matter, having tested it, thoroughly, and therefore those who are suffering from any of the complaints for which it is recommended may depend upon its being a Sovereign Remedy.

The astonishing efficacy of the Canadian Pain Destroyer, in curing the diseases for which, it is recommended, and its wonderful success in soothing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and in relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of remedies for these complaints. Orders are coming in from Medicine Dealers, in all parts of the Country for further supplies, and each testifying as to the universal satisfaction it gives.

The Canadian Pain destroyer never fails to give immediate relief. All Medicine dealers keep it. Physicians order and use it; and no family will be without it after once trying it. Price only Twenty-five cents per Bottle.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

PRESCOTT, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

None genuine unless signed, I. Butts, on the wrapper. Prepared by Seth W. Fowle & Co., Boston, and for sale by all dealers in medicines.

GREAT CONDITION MEDICINE.

As a Condition Medicine for horses "Darley's Arabian Horse Remedy" has no equal, its effects in this respect are astonishing; many horses were supposed to be broken down and almost worthless, have by the use of a few packages been restored to a healthy and sound condition, all traces of the disease having been completely removed, and have been sold for from $60 to $75 more than they would previously have brought; when you want a horse medicine get "Darley's Arabian Horse Remedy," and we know you will be perfectly satisfied with the result.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The undersigned having been restored to health in a few weeks by a very simple remedy after having suffered several years with a severe lung affection, and that dread disease Consumption—is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure.

To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge,) with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure cure for Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, &c. The only object of the advertiser in sending the Prescription is to benefit the afflicted, and spread information which he conceives to be invaluable; and he hopes every sufferer will try his remedy, as it will cost them nothing, and may prove a blessing.

Parties wishing the prescription will please address

THE MARRIAGE OF JOHN SMITH.

A PARODY.

But a sight was heard, not a funeral note,
As the hour in his bridal was hurried,
But a weapon discharged her fharewell groan,
On the spot where the fellow was married.

We married him just about eight at night,
Our fleshy pillar burning,
By the struggling moonbeam's mystic light,
And the gas-lamps steady burning.

No useless watch-chain covered his vest,
Nor over-dressed we found him,
But he looked like a gentleman wearing his best,
With a few of his friends around him.

Few and short were the things we said,
And we spoke not a word of sorrow,
But we steadily gazed on the man that was wed,
And bitterly thought of the morrow.

We thought as we silently stood about,
With spite and anger dying,
How the meanest stranger had cut us out,
With only half our trying

Lightly we talk of the fellow that's gone,
And oft for the past upraid him,
But little he'll reck it, if we let him live on
In the house where his wife conveyed him.

But our heavy task at length was done,
When the clock struck the hour for retiring,
And we heard the spiteful squib and pun—
The girls were suddenly firing.

Slowly and sadly we turned to go—
We had struggled and we were human;
We shed not a tear, we spoke not our woe,
But we left him alone with his woman.

Varieties.

Josh Billings on Skating.

Having heard much said about skating parks, and the grate amount uv helth and moral they was imparting to the present generashun at a shite advanse from sixty cents, I bought a ticket and went within the fense.

I found the ice in a slippery condishun, coverin' about 5 akers of artyfishal water which was owned bi a stock company and frose to order.

Upon one side ov the pond was erekted little grosery buildings, where the winners set on benches, while the fellers (kivered with bluises) hatched the magic iron to their feet.

It was a most exitin' scene; the sun was in the sky—and the wind was in the si—and the birds were in the South—and the ground was on the snow—and the ice lay shiverin' with a bad kold—and angels (for both sexes) fluctu ted past me pro en cou, 2 en fro, here a little and there a good deal.

It was a most exciting scene; I wanted tew holler 'Bully,' or lay down and role over.

But I kept in and asked with glory.

Heith was pikturea on menny a nobell brow.

As the femail angles put out on the pond side be side with mail angells, it was the most powerful scene I ever stood behind.

The long red tape from their neckswum in the breeze, and fe hez in the jackets flutt red in the breeze, and other things (tew much to mention) fluttered in the breeze

I don't think I ever was more crasey before in my life—on ice.

For 2 long hours I stood and gazed with dum exsitement.

I felt like a knall hoss turned suddenly out tew grass.

I didn't know how to proceed.

As one of the angells, mower sudden than awl the rest, cum fleeng down the track, 3 lenths ahed of her mail angell, awl eyes were gorging with her heavenly bust of speed; she seemed tew hav cut luce from the arth and was bound south for the Cape or Good Hope, when awl tew onst, with gorgeous swoop terrifick, dowser tum-ling into a limpid heap she went, with equel terrifick, a living, lovely mass of most disastrous skirt and tapering ancle.

Awl gathered round the bursted angull but lo! in a minutt's space her wings again was plume, and every fether was in its awful place' and on she fled, laffing like wine thru its buteus blushes.

I had saw enuff—more hapines than belonged tew—and as I slowly wended back dew mi hum at the taveron; felt—good.

A story is told of a clergyman who lived in Lowell, who was once charged with having violently dragged his wife from a revival meeting, and compelled her to go home with him. The clergyman let the story run ahead till he had a fair opportunity to give it a broadside. Upon being charged with the offence, he replied as follows: "In the first place, I never attempted to influence my wife nor her choice of a meeting.—Secondly, my wife has not attended any of the revival meetings. In the third place I have not attended any of the meetings for any purpose whatever. To conclude, neither my wife nor myself have any inclination to go to those meetings. Finally, I never had a wife."

RATHER POINTED.—Mr. Reese, the well known street preacher, was accosted by a would-be-wag the other day, with the following question:—

"Do you believe what the Bible says about the prodigal son and the fatted calf?"

"Certainly I do.

"Well, can you tell me whether the calf that was killed was a male or a female?"

"Yes, it was a female."

"How do you know that?"

"Why, because," said Reese, looking the chap in the face, "I see the male is still living.

When Nicholas Biddle, familarly called Nick Biddle, was connected with the United States Bank, there was an old negro named Harry who used to be loafing round the premises.

One day, in social mood, Biddle said to the old darkey:—

"Well, what is your name, my friend?"

"Harry, sir; ol' Harry," said the other touching his sleepy hat.

"Old Harry, said Biddle, "why, that is the name they give to the devil, is it not?"

"Yes sir," said the colored gentleman "sometimes old Harry, and sometimes old Nick."

NOT SECTARIAN.—"My friends" said a returned missionary, at one of the anniversary meetings, let us avoid sectarian bitterness—The inhabitants of Hindostand, where I have been laboring for years, have a proverb that 'though you bathe a dog's tail in oil and bind it in splinters, you cannot get the crook out of it.' Now, a man's sectarian bias is simply the crook in the dog's tail, which cannot be eradicated, and I hold that each one should be allowed to 'wag his own peculiarity to peace!"

Buoyant inscription of the Atlantic cable: "To be left till called for."

What do we seek redress for? Injuries. Where do we find it? In juries.

Tea-kettles are decidedly Yankee in their melodies; they sing through their nose.

What is good to raise a man's spirits? —Sprits.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 26, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. The stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co, No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

PIANO-FORTE

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano The construction is simple and natural, all the ingenuous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old style system of stringing by substituting wrought bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Striking Base, of which Mr Dodson is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Bartli,
Fearing H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry,	Charles Fradel

Mr. EGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and melodic; it has great carrying or continuing the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes. They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal versimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept 5—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilliancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It is a singing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exception, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr S. B. Dodson, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements as exhibited in the instruments under examination in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

Protestant Reformation Society.

PROTESTANTISM AND ROMANISM FROM AUTHENTIC SOURCES.

(From the Bath Express.)

On Monday a meeting was held at the Assembly rooms, on behalf of the above Society, and to hear an address from the Rev. Dr. Cumming, of London, on "Protestantism and Romanism from Authentic Sources." Among those present were—The Revds. G. Newnham (who presided), C. Kemble, J. M Dixon, J. C. Burnett, O. Winslow, D. D. J. H. Way, W. Hawke, W. E. James, A. Meoland, F. A. West, E. J. Wright, W. C. Osborn, &c.

The Chairman, in opening the proceedings, said he should feel considerable embarrassment in being placed in the chair (an office to which he was but little accustomed), were it not that he had been for many years considerably attached to the Society which had brought them together. He need not say what its objects were. It had been for many years diligently at work, but it had rather of late passed into the shade, from what circumstance he could not exactly say. Many a good work was, however, done in secret, and he trusted that it might be said of that Society that it was labouring effectually though very quietly. Happily for him, those who were about to represent the Society were so well known as staunch upholders of the truth, and veteran champions of Christianity, that he need not say anything in the way of introduction; but there was one introduction that could not be dispensed with, and that was to ask the blessing of Almighty God, which the Rev. W. E. James would kindly undertake. The Rev. gentleman having offered up prayer.

Dr. Cumming rose, and was received with loud applause. He said—The theme on which I am announced to address you is Romanism and Protestantism as taken from authentic sources. I will turn first to Romanism—the religion that we ought to deplore, and that we ought to hate while loving and seeking the well-being of its victims. Then I will turn to Protestantism and its authentic sources—the religion that we profess, that we ought to love more and more, and propagate with yet greater zeal; but before I allude to these two, there is an intermediate religion that has sprung up in recent times, the authentic sources of which I am unable dogmatically to determine. It sounds much like Romanism; but then it is heard echoing in Protestant churches. It looks very much like Romanism; but then those who hold it, and spread it, protest that it is not Romanism; but the greatest champion for the defence of the truth, and the most successful opponent of Romanism. How to trace it to its origin I know not, but some of its leading features and characteristics are these. First, it very much disparages, and by and by practically displaces God's inspired Word. It looks to the decisions of the Church, and less to those of the Apostles. It venerates tradition, and accepts (or professes to do so) the Word of God. Now you can never begin to disparage the Bible without coming very soon to displace the Bible altogether. It demands supremacy; it will not submit to be put down; it will rather relure from the scene than occupy a subordinate, inferior, or dishonourable place. In the next place, this system I have referred to is very much in the habit of identifying the Church with the clergy, and supposing (I think most unscripturally) that the Church means the clergy, and the clergy means the Church. Now I don't hold that, and I cannot see that the Scriptures authorize such a conclusion as that. For instance, I would not say that the colonel and the captains of a regiment were the regiment.—They are its leaders but certainly they do not constitute the regiment, and if they were left to fight the battle, and the regiment were to retire into their quiet quarters, I suspect the enemy would have all the advantage, and the country to which that regiment belonged would have all the discredit of defeat (applause). Then, in the next place, not only is it obvious that the clergy cannot be the Church, but the epistles in the New Testament—that is to say, about right-tenths of the New Testament Scriptures, are positively addressed to the laity. For instance, the epistle to the Romans is addressed to Roman soldiers. Roman sailors, Roman physicians, and Roman nobles, and even some in the soushine of the representative of Rome; but clearly it is not addressed to the clergy as such, and so little did the Apostles Paul, the writer of that epistle, identify the Church with the clergy, that in the last chapter he sends his kindest regards to 16 persons, 10 of whom are ladies, and 6 of whom are gentlemen, and he gives them credit for helping him to lay the foundation, not of the Church of Rome, but of the Church at Rome, which has been swamped by the Church of Rome for 1000 years. He passes over his thanks and cordial sympathy to those who have enabled him to lay the foundation of that once noble Church, but, most discourteous man that he was, he does not even send his kind compliments to Peter, the Pope who was then reigning at Rome, and presiding over that diocese. This omission is inexplicable except on terms that go very much against either the courtesy of St Paul, as a gentleman, or the canonical obedience of Paul, as an inferior, to his superior ecclesiastical officer (laughter). The only way we can escape from this dilemma and clear the Apostle is by simply admitting what is a well known historical fact, that nobody has discovered that Peter ever was at Rome, or ever was Pope of Rome. It was left for a subsequent age to question the courtesy and canonical obedience of Paul, in order, if it could, to establish the fact, which we know not to have been so, that Peter was then the reigning Pope of Rome (applause). In the next place, I may add one thing which has always struck me as interesting; that if Peter was the first Pope at Rome, Peter must certainly have had very many successors in one aspect of his character at the present day. All the popes and prelates of the Church of Rome have more or less canonically done what the Church sanctions, and in that respect they claim succession from St. Peter; but they forget that St. Paul must have been discourteous, or must have been refractory to his suffragan, for he rebuked Peter to his face, so that if Peter was the first Pope, I claim Paul as the first Protestant. Whether the claim of the Roman Catholics is right or not, I maintain that the clergy are not the Church, but the leaders of the Church by adhering to the articles of war, and the moment they fail to do they become traitors to the Church (applause). Again, another feature in this intermediate system is confounding the name of pastor with the office of priest. The Greek word "priest" is derived from presbuteros, which means a sacrificial priest, while the Latin word signifying priest is derived from presbyter, and means an elder of the Church. When I speak of the English people have lost the beautiful word "kirk," and have translated it into that harsh mouth-filling word "church." It is a great pity that they have done so. It is a very interesting fact that this word "kirk" is derived from one Greek word which means "the Lord's house," or from another signifying the place of the Lord, or the Lord's place. It is a very beautiful thought and very suggestive to me, that every Church I think, should bear the name of its head or of its Lord. If I were presented to a Scotch living, many of which bear the name of Saints, I would not make a fuss about it or propose to change the name; but if I were building a new church I would not call it an Apostle's church, but call it Christ church, or Trinity church, or some name that indicated the sovereignity of Him whose house and whose realm it exclusively is (Hear, hear). You notice, again, that in the Church of England, at all events in the Church of Scotland, and in the Rev. Dr. Winslow's church, I cannot see what a priest has got to do. I suspect that those who call themselves priests must be looking for a sinecure appointment, where there is nothing for them to do. In the next place, there is no altar—no altar in the whole Church of England, and what is more, they dare not have one, and what is better than that, you have no employment for it (applause). You might as well bring into the church an anvil and a blacksmith as bring in an altar and a sacrificing priest, for neither the one nor the other has any business in a Protestant place of worship (applause). If that be the case, there is no sacrificing priest and no altar for the obvious reason that there is no atonement to offer. You don't want it, for one offered on Judah's hill 1830 years ago made the atonement so complete that a repetition is an absurdity, substitution idolatry and any attempt to disparage or displace it is inconsistent with the first principles of Christianity. But not only are these two words—priest and church—confounded, but very wrong notions are attached by this intermediate party to the sacrament of baptism, which, it is said, as often as it is applied, regenerates and makes new the human heart. Well, if this be true, I should be glad to hear it, and if it be a fact, I would go and baptize everybody upon the earth If that be true, I would submit to immersion, or sprinkling, or to anything they liked, provided so triumphant and glorious an issue shall be achieved by it; but I find baptized men by thousands in Bridewell, in Newgate—thieves, impostors, and murderers. Surely baptism never can have changed their hearts! No; it is the very essence of Protestant Christianity that there is no expiatory element necessary but the blood of Jesus; that there is no regenerative force anywhere but in the Holy Ghost; that there is no conclusive rule of life and conduct but from the first verse of Genesis to the last verse of the Apocalypse—God's inspired, blessed, and only Word (applause) Then, again, the Lord's Supper. I have seen it in one or two instances evidently designed to be something which the Church of England does not admit to be. I know nothing more thorough, more ultra-Protestant, than the rubrics of the Communion Service of the Church of England, and yet I saw a clergyman of that Church the other day, I am ashamed to say it, lift up the consecrated water, and at a signal given amidst the most sensuous music—music excessively touching and pathetic, and evidently meant to heighten the impression of the scene—the people went upon their knees to humbly worship and adore. How any man who reads the Church of England Prayer Book can possibly do that, I don't know; I leave it to their own hearts and consciences to explain. I hand them over to the Bishops, who are the rulers of the Church, to get rid of such allies as fast as they possibly can (applause). Another feature, again, of this party is the attractive and beautiful service that they unquestionably have. I must say, one is pleased to see what is beautiful, and I don't see why the House of God should be like a barn, and our own houses so bountiful as they are now; but what I hold—and you may accept it or not, as you please—that whilst I would lay out a great deal of money on making a church beautiful, I would not admit into it a single symbolical thing on any pretence or pretext whatever, because the instant you have symbols, that instant you are on an inclined plane, and the Vatican may be the conclusion of your manœuvres (applause). I wonder how it is that you in the Church of England write the Ten Commandments over the Communion table. I am very glad you do. Some of my co-presbyters of the Church of Scotland, men for whom I have a high esteem, are trying to get rid of the Ten Commandments because of the fourth Commandment, which enjoins the keeping of the Sabbath. I believe the reason is that they think it an inconvenient thing; that they want to have a little fun upon the Sunday—a little amusement, a little walking in their own ways, and speaking their own words. They seem disposed to get rid of the Sabbath, and in order to do so, they try to prove that the Ten Commandments are not obligatory. If a gentleman holding those sentiments were to come into my house, I should look very sharply after him. I remember a certain Antinomian minister once tried to persuade Rowland Hill that the Ten Commandments were not obligatory on Christians. When he had finished the interview, Mr. Hill rang for his servant, and said, "Thomas, will you show that gentleman out, but look, as he goes, after the hats, the great-coats, and umbrellas," (laughter). That was a sharp and admirable rebuke, because if you maintain that the Commandments are not obligatory, you take away the real life. The observance of these Commandments will not give an atom of a title to the Kingdom of Heaven, but they, like the rocky headlands fronting the tempestuous ocean, repel the wave of human passion, that would infringe and break down all moral obligations, and they show to the believer what he has need to be shown, that by deeds of law can no flesh be justified; and they are to the believer who is accepted in Christ, justified and forgiven, the demand and expression of what the law of God requires—a law as secure and lasting as the Lawgiver himself; but when these laws are written above the Communion table, and when we look into the windows and see the most extraordinary attempts to represent the Deity, I think you are making your Church contradict itself. The commandment says, "Thou shalt not make to thyself the likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or in the earth beneath," and yet there they are on the church windows. The only justification for them was that suggested by an Irish clergyman. It is said, you know, that the Scotch require a surgical operation to make them comprehend a joke, but our Irish brethren not only comprehend jokes brilliantly, but they can make them as well. The Irish clergymen replied to a remark made upon the subject, "I am quite safe, for the pictures in my church are like nothing in the heaven above, the earth beneath, or the waters under the earth" (laughter). It seems to me that beautiful music is one of these things that ought to be in every church and you have in the Church of England plenty of scope for it. What we have to complain of very much is this, that while you find the Priests and the Roman Catholic Bishops can get as many ladies as they can lay their fingers upon, to wear ugly coal scuttles upon their heads in pretence for bonnets, and the most sepulchral dress in the streets, and do any drudgery, however ignoble, to foster and subserve the Church so few ladies can be got by Protestant ministers to lead congregational singing, or take an active part in the service of the church, forgetting that every one has a gift from God. The gift of one is to speak, of another to act, and of another to sing. Each one should lay his gift upon the altar and deem it an honor to be even a door-keeper in the house of God (applause.)

I will now proceed to what is called the real system—a system, or, as the bishop of Casbel calls it, the real article, which, he says, they have in Ireland, where the sham article never can stand, or be born by the side of it. The real article, from most authentic sources, I will bring before you. It is contained in a document which has been often read, but which I have got translated in the Tablet Roman Catholic newspaper, an organ of the highest possible authority This document was issued on the 10th anniversary of the decree of the Immaculate Conception, by Pope Pius IX., a year ago, and is obligatory upon all Christ-noors. This mandate was posted on the walls of Rome according to the regulations of the Church of Rome. Pope Pius IX. has spoken in his Encyclical to the whole Church, and says he has authority to do so, and the man who does not listen to and accept it no longer belonged to that Church, is no longer a member of the fold of Christ, and has no right of inheritage in the kingdom of Heaven. In this document the Pope begins by stating that it was composed and issued on the 10th anniversary of the decree of the Immaculate Conception, and he opens his mouth with a candour, fulness, and explicitness that I must say makes me very much in love with Pius IX. I think he is a right honest man. He tells what he thinks; not like many of you shabby Protestants, ashamed of your religion, that you scout into a corner afraid manfully and openly to avow it. He tells us what he believes, and he is prepared to take the consequence (Hear, hear), and adds, that if the consequences were that he should be expelled from Rome, he was prepared to take his Breviary below his arm, and walk away to Civita Vecchia, in order to retire where he could. He begins, then, by saying that "liberty of conscience, liberty of worship, and the liberty of the press, we condemn as delirious ravings, as did our predecessor of excellent memory, Gregory XVI." When we think what he says about conscience we need not be alarmed. Man may burn the body; he may throw you into St. Angelo; he may rob you of all that you love and cast you into the midst of all that you fear, but the Lord of the conscience only can put his hand upon the conscience and regulate its beat. The Pope has no power to touch the conscience Therefore he may cure the conscience as long and as eloquently as he pleases; but it is in the sanctuary of the soul, it is the holy place of the human breast into which no Pope's hand could be thrust. In prison, in darkness, under persecution, it can sing its own sweet song, defiant of Popes and Councils, and of all who would try to extinguish it if they could (applause). Then the next is a very different matter. "Liberty of worship also is delirious raving." Now, as I passed from the Railway station, I saw a beautiful cathedral which the Roman Catholics have erected in Bath, I do not believe they asked the Rector of Bath liberty to do so; or the Bishop of Bath and Wells, or even the Mayor of Bath; but they did it. Now are not they a very curious people? Our Roman Catholic friends want liberty of worship in England; but they won't give us liberty of worship at Rome (applause). If you have liberty of worship here, you may rest assured it is because of that Protestantism we are too prone to forget and because of that open, unshaded, and unfettered book, the English Bible, for which we are not sufficiently thankful (applause). I may mention one illustration of this. In the city of Rome there is not a single chapel belonging to the Church of England, within the walls. If a Church of England man wishes to worship God in his own way, he must go out of the Porte del Popolo and go to a chapel at a distance. The Rev. W. Burgess, the Englisn Chaplain at Rome, told me that it was an old granary, built over a deserted pigstye, and the condition on which the English people have had that place of worship is, that they do not put upon it any ecclesiastical signature whatever, the police also stand at the door to see that no natives enter to be corrupted and defiled by an impure Protestant worship The Prince of Wales when visiting Rome did not, as many of his countrymen did, go to St. Peter's to hear High Mass, and listen to the most gorgeous and magnificent music that probably can be heard; but remembering the lessons of his Protestant mother, he took his prayer book and marched to join the worship of his Church in the old granary over the pigsty (applause). This example I hope you will follow, and when you go to Rome not do as Rome lees. The next thing the Pope would put down is the liberty of the press; but though he hates it, I believe it to be, with all its faults, an inestimable blessing. I have no reason to say much good of the press sometimes, for I have been abused most heartily by it. I have been caricatured, and editors and writers have prophesied for me, so that I have been amazed at the marvellous prophecies I have read in the morning which I was supposed to have uttered the day before (laughter). Although I have been heartly abused, I never mind it, and have never lost my temper in my life. I care no more for abuse, when I know that I do not deserve it, than I do for the mud thrown off the wheels of a vehicle on my coat, which drops off when it is dry, and if not the se vant brushes it off (renewed laughter) The liberty of the press is a great thing, and the most admirable institution that we can ever possess. The publicity given to wrong doing, and the championship often given by it to right doing, must make every one hope that the Pope will never see the day when his censer can put an end to the liberty of the press (applause). The Pope next enters upon the religious life. I know how well you have been taught in Bath by a clergyman with whom I have had the honour of being personally acquainted, the Rev. H. Sepmour, but who, I regret to hear to-day, is seriously ill though I hope it is not so serious as has been supposed, and that he will be spared many days to speak manfully, as he always does, for that cause which we all have at heart (Hear, hear) The Pope says that this religious or conventual life is recommended by the Church in conformity with the Apostolic doctrine, and to try and destroy it is to do wrong to the Great Founder of the Church, and therefore, he says that the civil power ought to maintain the laws which protect existence of convents, and never to protect any nun who may try to escape from those convents. In other words, if any nun should try to escape, the Pope says the police ought instantly to thrust her back. Now if you will recollect that when a young lady full of enthusiasm and fine sentiments, hearing exaggerated and rosy pictures of what convents are, rushes as a member of a Roman Catholic family into a convent, it is not unreasonable to suppose that in the course of five or six years her mind changes, her opinions alter, and that she may wish to retire from the convent. The difficulty is ever to let that be possible. You are aware that our Queen of England sends inspectors to bride-wells, gaols, and schools, and even takes an oversight of the rights of married women, in order that no one may be oppressed; but the Queen of England dare not visit or send an inspector to visit a single convent in England; and when I tell you that there are 205 convents in England and in them about 12,000 ladies some of noble birth, many of them of gentle look, and of all of whom I have heard of nothing discreditable or disparaging to their character, it does seem a wonder that our liberal and enlightened statesmen put up with this state of things, and it looks as if all were not right when they shrink from the light of the day. Respecting this branch of my subject, I want to call your attention to statements made in a book written by that most celebrated saint. Alphonse Liguori. Every Romat Catholic in Bath, Bristol, and throughout England, an a certain day in July, prays that he may be instructed by the teaching and blessing of St. Bonaventura. What is the teaching on religious life, as addressed by this saint to the nuns, in order to impress upon them, after they have taken the evil; the duty they owe to to the confessor and the superior? He says—this infallible authority, whose writings are faultless, and which every Roman Catholic prays to God that he may learn and understand—"Obey your confessor blindly, that is, never asking him any reason for what he does." That is his first instruction. The second is—"Remember that in obeying your confessor you obey God. Force yourself to obey him in spirit of all the fears you may entertain, for in obeying your confessor you are more certain of doing the will of God than if God sent an angel from heaven to tell you that will." Mark the crushing subjection of the poor fogitive nun to that priest who is appointed to receive her confession (Hear, hear). If all be so perfectly right within the nunneries, they would not shrink from having them inspected; but Liguori tells the nuns what looks as if all were not so perfect, as our Roman Catholic friends say, for he says—"Be careful not to make known outside of the convent anything you hear within that may discredit the superior or the sisters." He adds—"as you may imagine, the nun must be ready to give up all her property to the Church (that is practically to the priest), at the very first instruction of the superion's will; neither shall she complain if the superior takes it and applies it to the use of the convent without her consent or speaking of it at all." "The nuns may be most certain of never having to render an account of any action, if performed in the way of obedience, for these actions the superior is held responsible at the judgment seat of Almighty God" (Shame). He is very anxious, this same saint, to drive every young lady into a convent. In fact, his passion for conventualism is more than the passion for horse racing and gambling that some people have. It seems to absorb and swamp the whole man. He is anxious to teach every young unmarried lady throughout the world what a privilege it is to be a nun and what misery and wretchedness it is to be a wife, Therefore be sure to the young ladies—"How unhappy, I ask you to consider it, the condition of most married persons!" (That is not very complimentary.) You will receive bad treatment from your husband, disaffection from your children, and you will be annoyed at the control of your relatives. You will have your husband always breaking out in complaints of some sort and reproaches. Your servants will always be disturbing the house; and as for young children, you find them a perpetual nuisance" (Oh, oh,). In the first place, I have to comfort every lady in the room by telling them that St. Alphonse Liguori, who thus instructs the nuns, never was in England, and therefore knows not the English married life that he describes. He spent his whole life in Italy, under the shadow of the Papacy. Hence it is the married life of Roman Catholic he describes. We wish them all joy for the compliment he thus undesignedly pays to us (Hear, hear). I think, however, he must have had very bad taste to call children a "perpetual nuisance," for of all beautiful things, children are most so. I think the flowers of the field and the children of our homes are most like ancient Eden of anything I know; and the man or woman that does not love children must not be very lovable (Hear, hear), The truth is that Liguori was an old bachelor, who died at the age of 80, and must have formed his opinion of children out of his cold miserable heart (laughter). In the next place, the Pope says that the Church should occupy herself with scientific things, but should take care to correct science when it goes wrong. Now I think the Church has really no right to do so (Hear, hear). I admit at once that science has often gone wrong; but when it did so, it was no reason why it should be corrected by the Church. It should be done by a more exact induction of other facts and representations of science. For a priest to say that your science is wrong and your facts wrong, because his theology says they are, will never stand. I believe that all science will testify to God that Scripture and science will be found one, and that the seeming antagonism between them is only seeming. It is not lasting or real; but the true way is to leave scientific men to make their investigations and conclusions, perfectly satisfied that the inductive philosophy, or the Baconian method of induction, will always end in what is true and what is real. Whenever Christians become frightened, men do, I think they show a cowardly distrust—a distrust that does not become them, That scientific men have spoken a great deal of nonsense, that they have often ventilated their own private prejudices instead of recording the fair inductions from the phenomena of facts, is too true; but the longer we live, and the longer they work, depend upon it, the more you will be convinced that Genesis is not a myth, but an inspiration of the Almighty, man is just 6,000 years old, or not much more, and that all the talk in the Anthropological Society, about man being the development of an ape, of an ouran-outang being his grandfather a gorilla, or a mollusc being his great, great, great-grandfather in long past ages, is founded upon no fact, is based upon evidence that will not hold water, and we appeal from science drunk to science sober for a more just and reasonable conclusion (applause). In this celebrated document, the Pope winds up by condemning the Bible Societies as well known pests as they had been condemned by Gregory XVI., and many others of his predecessors of excellent memory; he claims for his Church universal supremacy, declaring that a national Church is no Church at all, unless it be attached to the Papacy; and then wishes that what he has said may be blessed by the Virgin, who destroys all heresies. It is a very curious fact, if you look at statistics, you will find that while Popery is gaining ground in England it is unquestionably true that all over the Continent is dying out.

In Belgium, the increase of Protestant churches in the last 50 years is marvelous. In France the increase is also great.—There are somewhere about 1,200 Protestant churches, where 50 years ago there was not above 20. The increase of the Protestant schools and schoolmasters is likewise very remarkable. Along with that decrease in the power, there is even a lessening of the number of the Roman Catholic priesthood. In the city of Paris, in 1793, there were 5,000 priests; since that the population has exactly trebled. Yet the Bishop of Oxford, in his correspodence with a French Abbe, ascertained that there were now just 900 priests in Paris, while, if they had increased in the same proportion as the population, they should have been 15,000. Regarding the state of religion in France, I myself asked an Abbe in Paris a question on the subject, and he told me that it was simply a pure atheism, that religion was dying out; there was fanaticism that would fight for the Church, but anything like religion in the Roman Catholic population of France seemed undiscoverable. I need not tell you that in Italy matters do not look much brighter. The property of the convents have been confiscated, and at this moment 11,000 priests have joined the Abbe Passaglia in protesting against the temporal sovereignty of, and the supremacy of the Pope, inviting him to become a primative and apostolic bishop, which he never can be. It is marvelous that the last sound of the retreating battalions of France will be in November or December, 1866, and it is a rather curious coincidence—I don't predict, but I ask you to wait and watch—that almost all the students of prophecy, starting from different points, and estimating the chronology of prophecy (which of course is difficult) have come to the conclusion that 1866 or 1867 is to be the end of the Papacy. It may not be so, and they may be mistaken in their dates; but the coincidence between Napolean giving the Pope notice that his lease expires in 1866, and the conclusion so many students of prophecy have arrived at, is too remarkable to be overlooked. At this very moment, also, Archbishop Manning, the head of the Papacy in England, has published a book upon the Papacy, in which he says that he expects Rome will be destroyed, and the infidel will triumph there; likewise that prophecy leads him to that conclusion, He is not alone in the Church of Rome in thinking so, but the strange phenomenon which I cannot explain is that while Popery in decreasing all over the continent it is increasing at a prodigious rate throughout England. So much so, that while in 1801 there were in England and Scotland 1757 priests, in 1865 they had reached 1569; in London the churches and chapels had increased from 1019 to 1171; and the convents from 162 to 211. Archbishop Manning further tells us that they are lessening their aggressive force on the continent of Europe, where they seem in despair, and are concentrating all their efforts on England. "The reason," he says, is this, "that England is the fortress of heresy; if we can strike England down, all Europe lies at our feet." They are not to do so by a blow; that is impossible, but step by step, piece by piece, by sapping, not by breaking up at once. The Prison Minister's Bill was one step, and the next now to be adopted, which is discussed in high quarters, and a very aid and sonorous thing it is, is to spoil the Church of Ireland in order to enrich the Church of Rome.—Now, do you think it that would be a benefit I appeal to every pius Dissenter, to every Liberal and every Whig, would that be an advantage? I believe not! Than the clergy of the Church of Ireland, a more devoted, spiritually minded ministry, does not exist in the three kingdoms, and I am of opinion in spoiling that Church you would raise up a hornet's nest in every parish where it was sustained by the State, and sanctioned by the power and prestige of a Protestant Government, be most disinjuring to the interests of the people and the well-being of that nation (applause). I regard it as one of the greatest problems of the day, and as a sign of that waning sensitive for Rome, which we all have so deeply to deplore, Suppose Romanism obtained the concession, do you think the moral well-being of the people would be much improved by it? No; I can show by the logic of irresistable statistics. For instance, the Roman Catholic population of England is about 1¼ millions, while the whole population is upwards of 20 millions; it is a remarkable fact that taking the mass of the prisoners in England one-fourth of the prisoners are Roman Catholics; which can only be attributed to this, that the teaching of the Roman Catholic Church is not a moral teaching, and, therefore, to endow it, or encourage, promote, or connive at it, is not a Protestant or English duty. Having quoted statistics bearing on the same point, culled from Irish and continental sources, the Rev. gentleman proceeded.

In the next place, I assert that Protestantism is not a negative religion; it is not a mere opposition to Romanism; it is based upon positive truth, and because so attached to positive truth it is opposed to the deadly and destructive errors that Rome propogates. There are certain great doctrines to hold which is essential to be a Protestant, but there are certain other doctrines, about which good men have differed from the beginning, and will ever differ to the end. Just as with the human body, there are organs which are essential, and the destruction of which is death. There are other organs that are both ornamental and useful, the loss of which would be a disadvantage, but not death. So in Christianity, there are essentials, to hold which is life, to deny which is death; and there are non-essentials, however useful, about which Christians have differed, as I said, and will differ to the end of time. What, then, does Protestantism hold as truly essential? First, that the Bible is the anchorage ground in which the buffeted ark can feel secure, in which the storm-tossed intellect can find a haven of repose and rest. An open Bible is the glory of our country. It ought to be the theme of our adoring gratitude to Almighty God. Hence Protestants will listen to what the Fathers say, and thank them for their kindness, but will take into their utmost soul what the Apostles state, and will live and die upon the strength of it. They hold the Bible not only as the rule of life, but as an inspired book. I believe that is inspired from Genesis to the Apocalypse, and that the sentiment, whether uttered in the Church of England, or my own church, or other Dissenting churches, that the Bible has the word of God in it, but is not the word of God itself, is playing into the hands of the Pope, and that Gentlemen who teach such theology have the best chance of being made cardinals when the Pope gets all his own way. I do not mean to say that the Apostles were mere amanuenses, writing down what was dictated to them; but I do not mean to say that they themselves had the thought inspired into their minds, and that they were so inspired in expressing those thoughts and words; that, under all circumstances, and the contingencies of translation contemplated, the Bible is written in the best and most perfect language in which it could possibly be composed.—It is not, then, more certain that God made the stars than that he inspired the Bible, and as the flower of the field is evidence of God its maker, a text from the Bible is to me evidence of God its inspirer (applause). Let go the inspiration of the Bible, and take up the notion that is advocated, that God's word is to be left to man to pick and choose after his own passions and prejudices, likes and dislikes, the next appeal would be to have some infallible judge This infallible judge is always at hand, and thousands in sheer despair, will rush into Popery, to escape the collisions and conflicts of hostile intercecine opinions. Never let go that

ALL QUIET.

From every quarter reports come in of peace. No Fenian, as such, has yet put a foot on Canadian soil. On St. Patrick's day we find that the province was unusually quiet. In Montreal there was an immense procession attended by eight bands of music. The procession halted at St. Lawrence Hall to pay their respects to His Excellency.—The bands played several national and loyal airs. His Excellency appeared at the window of the hotel, on which tremendous cheers were given. His Excellency addressed the crowd in a few very appropriate words, after which the bands played the national anthem, every one uncovering his head. Hon. Mr. McGee addressed the people in Victoria Square. He pointed out the status of Irishmen in Montreal and in Canada, and declared that they were ready to defend their privileges to death.

At Kingston there was a procession also, but all passed off very quietly. The order of procession was first Several speeches, eloquent and patriotic, we are told, were made—and J. O'Reilly, Esq., pledged the audience to raise 1000 men to go to the front if needed. The day passed off very quietly according to reports.

In Toronto also there was a procession, but as in Montreal and Kingston, every thing was orderly and agreeable. Bishop Lynch delivered a very loyal address in St. Nicholas cathedral. Protestants are said to have been present. The procession was not admitted as a body.

During the time of the procession, and all day, quiet prevailed. Several speeches were delivered, but there was no notice taken of them. That is the best method of killing demagogues and stump orators.

At Prescott all was quiet, but ready.—Ogdensburg was said to be full of Fenians. An American Revenue Cutter lay opposite all day, and the authorities were informed that any attempt to invade or pass over would be promptly met. The Ottawa field battery was also sent to Prescott. All fears were entirely allayed. The Yankee trader, however, might have taught them all a lesson of faith try and wisdom: while Fenians were wasting their time and money in Ogdensburg, and Canadian Volunteers were watching them from Prescott, the railway ferry boat was plying backward and forward until stopped (to the no small alarm of the citizens) during every moment to convey goods over to Uncle Sam before the treaty should be terminated. If Irishmen would take the hint, they would have less cause for complaint. Peace was the order of the day in Canada everywhere. This affords cause for thankfulness.

St. Patrick's Day in Peterboro.

The day was intensely cold, throughout, almost forbidding any one appearing out of doors. There were fewer people in Town than on ordinary days, the utmost quiet prevailed in every quarter, and the members of the St. Patrick's Society, here, deserve great credit for refraining from any public demonstration, in view of the uneasiness across the lines, and the threats of invasion of our territory. A number of the R. C. population attended service in their Church on that day, and passed most loyal resolutions; and went so far as to organize a company who are about to offer their services to the government if such services should be required. There are no fears of the loyalty of the people of Canada, of every religion. The Roman Catholics of Canada have everything to lose and nothing to gain by the Fenian movement, and hence their wisdom in refraining from any connexion with such foolish undertaking.—No matter how dearly the Irishman loves Ireland, he should love Irishmen still more; and his efforts should be to elevate not obliterate them.

We willingly insert the letter of "A Canadian Catholic" this week, and would as willingly do everything in our power to remove the cause of complaint. It is not right that a man, because he is a Catholic, or a member of a company whose Captain is a Catholic, should be insulted or in any way unduly interfered with. Protestants claim the right to be of what creed they please. They protest against the interference of any man in matters of opinion or of religion, and they should be the last to insult a fellow citizen because, perchance, he is a Catholic.

But at the same time "A Canadian Catholic" will see that his letter has too much threat about it. Does he mean to say that Catholic loyalty depends, for its continuance, upon whether every Catholic shall be free or not from every taunt or jeer that some foolish, insignificant, bigoted creature may dare to offer? If he does, we must confess that loyalty need not be looked for—as this is what need not be expected, ought not to be expected, and would be more than other volunteers enjoy. It is too common among protestant volunteers to use sneering language concerning members of even another protestant company, and we presume the same exists where all are Catholics, and hence they take the joke without offense, and pass on. It would be better if this were not so, but it is human nature, and will be. Let us hope, however, that nothing will be said or done that would mar good feeling between Catholics and those who think differently. If both parties will remember the two Bears—Bear and Forbear—all will be well.

THE VOLUNTEERS TO THE FRONT

For some days our noble Volunteers here were in readiness to leave as soon as marching orders were given. Drill was long persevered with and all were enthusiastic in making necessary preparation to meet the enemy whenever he made his appearance on our soil.

On Saturday night, about ten o'clock, a telegram was forwarded to Captain Rogers, of Asphodel, and Captain Leigh, of Lakefield, to proceed at once to the front. A courier was despatched to Lakefield—who arrived there about one o'clock—and notwithstanding the short notice, and the unseasonable hour, the company was very soon assembled, although many of them live several miles from the village, and the Company was in Peterborough about four o'clock next morning, all in the best of spirits. Capt. Rogers' Company was also in readiness in due time, and both Companies were at the station before the time appointed (nine o'clock,) where a special train was waiting to take them away. Both Companies are fine looking fellows, were in good cheer, and appeared anxious to move forward. Immense crowds of citizens had also turned out, early as it was, to see the brave fellows on the train, and the two Companies that remained waiting further orders, also turned out and escorted those going. As soon as the Companies were aboard, deafening cheers were given for them, and every one seemed anxious to bid them good bye and God speed. We had almost forgotten to mention that the Home Guards were present in large numbers. As the train was about to move off, we noticed mothers, wives and sisters troubled, and we also saw fathers bidding their sons good bye; not an unwilling look was visible, not a hesitating step was seen. We are sure that not one fearful heart left Peterboro that day.

At Millbrook, Capt. Bowden's Company joined the others and proceeded with the rest.

The Peterborough Companies remain at Port Hope, the Millbrook Company proceeded to Cobourg. At last accounts the men were still there, and well. No trouble has yet arisen; and the rumor of invasion, armed vessels, and every nonsense turns out to be bosh.

After the Companies had left, the Home Guards proceeded to the Town Hall, where Hon. Sidney Smith—who is raising a Company of Volunteers, if their services be required—made a short speech to his men, urging the men to prepare, so that they may be ready for any emergency; and calling on cowards, if any were in the ranks, to step out, and not disgrace the rest. Of course no one stepped out.

The people then all dispersed to prepare for the Sabbath observance. Capt. Kennedy's Company went to St John's Church, Capt. Poole's to ——

A GENEROUS COUNCIL.

The Council of Ashburnham, as will be seen in another column, has taken the lead in the good work of providing for the wants of the wives and families of those volunteers who, at the call of danger, had to leave their families, and perhaps in a few cases not very fully provided for. It is well known that many of the men earn their bread by the sweat of their brow, at the same time not a few of them require to exercise economy so as to make ends meet the demands of large families. The Council feared that some of those families might have to suffer in the absence of the head and provider, and nobly voted $100 to meet immediate wants, if such there should be. We trust that the good example thus set by the Council of Ashburnham will be followed by other Municipalities so that families not sufficiently provided for may not be allowed to suffer, while the father, son or brother has been called to the front to defend his country from the illiterating raids of lawless vandals.

COUNTY COUNCIL DUTY IN THE MATTER.

We trust the County Council will see that although Ashburnham steps in, in the mean time, yet the duty of caring for these families left without provisions, really and justly belongs to the County. Ashburnham, Peterboro, Otonabee, Smith and Douro have furnished the men. The time lost by the men is lost to these places, while other places are exempt yet. The protection is for all, and it is but reasonable that those who are exempted from going to the front, those who have lost no time at drill, and yet enjoy the benefits of security arising from the quick response of the Volunteers, we say it is but reasonable that those should aid and in supplying the wants of those families left without any one to provide for them; and we doubt not but that the County will come forward and show their appreciation of the Volunteers services by voting something for their families' support. It is not right, however, that any one should suffer in the meantime, as the County Council cannot be so easily brought together as the Township Council is, and it speaks volumes for the people of Ashburnham that they have been so ready to take the lead in the work. Let other Councils go and do likewise.

Fatal Accident in Pennsylvania.

On the 17th inst., James Weir, whose friends all reside in Otonabee, met his death by the bursting of the boiler of a Portable Steam Engine. Deceased was attending to the saw in a saw mill and several others were round the place when the boiler exploded. Mr. Weir and the engineer were killed, and another man was badly scalded. His body passed through the Town yesterday and will be interred to-day at one o'clock, p. m. He leaves a wife and three children to mourn their loss.

Heavy Storm.

During Tuesday night a very heavy thunder storm passed over this place. The Town shook under the heavy peals. We understand that the lightening struck the Black Horse Inn, kept by Mr. McKellar, and passing through the bar-room shattered the glasses, &c., and removed the spirits (!) out of a whiskey barrel. No one was hurt.

The Volunteers.

Our noble Volunteers are enjoying themselves at Port Hope. They are attending to drill, and the remainder of the time amusing themselves. We learn from private sources, that the Port Hope Volunteers will entertain them to a dinner to-day. Never a Fenian has yet thrown his face.

NEW YORK CITY FRIENDLY TO FENIANS.—The Common Council of the city of New York passed resolutions friendly to the Fenian movement and called upon all citizens of Irish birth or Irish proclivities to suspend business on the 17th, in order to encourage the Irish people to persevere in the work.

Sheep Stealing.

About three weeks ago a party were held than honest, went into the barn yard of Mr. Wm. Clark, of Springville, took hay out of the barn and gave it to their horse, then made a pen, drove four sheep into it, and having caught the sheep killed them. They tore out the entrails and left them in the yard. They also took the fat off the kidneys and left it in a pile, and apparently forgot it, as it was afterward found in the yard. Last week the Council of the Township of Cavan, we are informed, offered $200 reward for the apprehension and conviction of any one found or known to kill sheep. Not long after this an individual from Peterborough was driving along through that neighborhood, and, as report has it, went into a swamp where he was seen by two men who were in the swamp for some purpose. These men report the stranger as looking for the mutton, but they a little before had found nine quarters of mutton buried in the snow in the swamp. They, however, are reported as offering for $5 to say nothing about the matter. The man said he had no money and passed on. The men followed him to Springville and reported the matter to one or two. These recommended giving information to some magistrate, and soon John Dundas, Esq., was lead into the whole secret. He and Mr. S. W. Scott repaired to the place where the mutton was found, but in vain to look for any track but one, and found no carcasses whatever. The informer, however, gave them several quarters which he declared he had found in the swamp. Two magistrates who saw the meat think that it had the appearance of being in salt a few days. The quarters found have also been deprived of the kidney fat, pointing out the flesh as that of Mr. Clark's sheep. The matter at last accounts was unravelled. Mr. Dundas had the meat, but could get no information that would lead to conviction. Individuals are drawing their own conclusions. It is hoped that the guilty parties will be discovered and be forced to pay the penalty.

The Volunteers' Complaint.

We have been complained of for having intimated in our last issue that Captains Poole and Rogers and their Companies attended Religious Services on Sabbath, but omitted to mention that Captain Kennedy and his Company did the same. We willingly acknowledge the omission, but we assure the volunteers of Captain K's Company that the omission was only accidental. We had not the slightest idea of insinuating that the brave fellows of that Company were less attentive to religious duties than the others—by no means. Captain Kennedy's Company are No. 1 men, and will no doubt prove themselves so if put to the trial. We also made a slight error in saying that the other companies attended St. Johns Church on that day, as Captain Poole's Company attended services in the First Presbyterian Church, and a Volunteers informs us that Captain Kennedy's Company attended the Wesleyan Church.

Drill Shed.

There was a public meeting last night to get a Drill Shed. It was too late to give particulars. The object is a Drill Shed, and also a shed for the Agricultural Exhibitions. It is much needed: resolutions were unanimously adopted to request the Town Council, through the Mayor, to take the necessary steps to provide a suitable one, as soon as possible.

BOOK NOTICES.

THE CHURCHMAN'S FAMILY MAGAZINE.—This popular monthly for March has again been laid on our table. It contains several interesting articles which will no doubt be read with interest—every Churchman may read it to advantage.

LONDON SOCIETY, for March, has also been forwarded to us. This periodical is for amusement. The contents of the present number are: "The Senior Wrangler;" "Apollo in Great Russell Street;" "A Glance at the Life of Laurence Sterne;" "Patti's Revenge;" "The Operations of Lawrence Reeve;" "The Merchant Princes of England;" "A German Athletic Festival;" "Hot-weather Life of a Magistrate in India;" "Lily—Illustrated by Adelaide Claxton;" "Art in the Auction Room;" "Clubs and Taverns;" "Amy's Secret;" "The Ides of March;" "Up and Down the London Streets"—with Seven Illustrations. The above monthlies are sold by W. C. Chewett & Co., Toronto; also by Graham & Stratton, Peterboro.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK, for April is a most excellent number. For beauty of engraving—both steel and wood, we think it cannot be excelled. "The Last Bouquet." An exquisite steel engraving. The artist has done justice to the subject in a masterly manner. The usual Colored Fashion-plate, containing five figures—all seasonable dresses, and very beautiful. Leaf-shaped Needle-book, printed in blue. Among the latest arrivals from Europe will be found the following:—A Fashionable Ring-dress. Two Robe Dresses from A. T. Stewart & Co., New York. The Etiole Paletot, front and back view. Latest Styles of Dress, for young girls, four figures. New Hats. Fashionable Hats, from J. R. Terry, New York. The Novelties for the Month embrace the following:—Bonnets, Caps, Collars, Sleeves, Paletot for a little girl, and Misses' Talma. The Work-Department contains a variety of useful work for ladies. The Leaflet Stitch. Match-box, ornamented with a Butterfly. Stocking Darning. Toilet Pincushion. On page 309 will be found a very handsome design, in bead work, for the Cover of a Box to hold Counters or Cards. The whole page is constructed with type, and is one of the handsomest specimens of the art we have ever seen. The literary matter for this month is rich and varied. Marion Harland, Mary Janvrin, Miss Frost, Mrs. E. F. Ellet, M. A. Denison, and other well-known writers appear. Read about our old friend, Mrs. Daffodil.

The Lady's Friend for April.

In the steel plate for this number, "Waking," we find the usual superiority maintained by this magazine, for exquisite naturalness and high artistic finish. It is a sweet heart-picture of waking endearments between mother and child; the clear sunrise streaming through the bro kering vines about the lattice and lighting up the scene—morning light and morning life, both pure, both fragrant with the breath of heaven. The fashion plate is as usual unsurpassed. We sometimes wonder how it is that the publishers invariably secure this point. Even when the same artists have been at work there seems to be an unconscious favoritism that reserves for The Lady's Friend their best efforts and most signal successes. Very appropriately in this April number the children, spring buds of men and women, have it all to themselves, and an uncommonly pretty, graceful group they make. The wood cut illustrating "The Forsaken Wife" is full of tragic pathos; a winter scene, dreary and desolate as the heart of the sufferer.

Then follow a few of the wood cuts that every month offer their timely assistance to the ladies toward making a pleasing appearance—that important part of the business of life. A captivating bertha, a breakfast dress, useful and elegant in design, and a high bodice with basque, the front of which is ingeniously reflected from a mirror, are some of these. For music we find "Maidan's Eyes," a song from Festus—music by F. Schelling. For literary matter there is "Echo Vale," a story of a smuggler's cave; "Maud's Temptation," picturing for parents the evil influences of some fashionable boarding schools; "Rescued by a Ghost;" the continued story, "Zillah," the denouement of which seems very uncertain, and the rival characters so winning the reader's interest that even his wishes as to the ending are in a state of indecision; "The Lock of Golden Hair," a fantastic rhyme from the rich and graceful fancy of August Bell; the tale of "The Forsaken Wife," told with such truth and power that no man or woman can read it unmoved; and "Uncle Richard," the moral of which is excellent.

The Work Table patterns for embroidery, dresses, &c., we commend to the industrious fair. The Editor's Department, Book Notices, Receipts and Fashions, conclude our list of attractions.

Price $2 50 a year; 2 copies $4 00; 3 copies (and one gratis) $6. Specimen numbers will be sent for 15 cents. Wheeler & Wilson's celebrated Sewing Machines are furnished as Premiums.

Address Deacon & Peterson, 319 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

It is pleasing to know that the Provincial Government has already received offers of volunteer companies which make a total of 180,000.—Ottawa Citizen.

TOWN COUNCIL.

MONDAY, March 12th, 1866.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Present—His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Toole, Wilson, Wrighton, Stevenson, Doherty, Ormond, Millar, Cox, Hamilton, Chamberlain and Burnham.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read over and confirmed.

Petitions were read from John B. Dunn, Thomas Beatty and George McCombe, and 62 others. The first two asking for a certificate for a Tavern License, and the last asking the Council to issue five additional certificates to meet the requirements of the floating population of the town.

Two communications from John O'Donnell, Secretary of the Fire Company, were read. One complaining of the apathy of inhabitants at the late fire. The other informing the Council that the Fire Company had organized themselves into a company for Home Protection, and asking the Council to furnish them with arms and ammunition for 75 men. The first communication was referred to the Fire Committee. The second was received.

A petition from widow Finley, asking for assistance, was referred to committee on Charities, together with a request for aid in the support of the orphan children of Edward Powers.

The committee on Finance recommended the payment of William Coulter's account for $2.07; Jas. Roun and Joseph Lundy for $2.30.

In the matter of the petition of the R. C. School Trustees the committee, after meeting and going into the discussion of the subjects presented therein, found difficulties in the way, and they therefore agreed to leave the solution to a legal gentleman who has given his opinion, which is appended, and submitted as the Report of committee in relation to the matters complained of by the Trustees. It may be proper to state that the complaint in the petition referred to three distinct items. The first related to monies levied and raised from the supporters of the R. C. School, in common with all others, for the payment of interest and sinking fund for Union School Debentures outstanding, and complaining that the said R. C. school supporters had not refunded to them a sufficient amount. The difficulty here arose in reference to loss occasioned by the issuing of new debentures to relieve those falling due. This difficulty has been satisfactorily arranged between the Trustees and the Town Treasurers, which settlement was approved by the committee. The second complaint is that in levying the annual School Rate, a sufficient amount had not been raised from the Protestants to meet the demands of the Trustees, consequently the balance had to be made up out of the general funds of the Town, and as a portion of said funds were levied from the supporters of R. C. school, the petitioners prayed that such portion be refunded to them. The third item referred to the deficiency sustained in paying annually to the commissioners the sum asked for by them, as interest and sinking fund for the Union School Debentures.

This will appear by the following statement: Suppose that $700 are levied for interest and sinking fund from the whole Town. The R. C. school supporters pay about $100 of this sum, which has to be refunded to them, leaving the sum of $400 to be paid out of the general funds, of which $100 they claim their portion.

These two last items were submitted to Mr. Dennistoun, and his opinion is against the prayer of the Trustees of the R. C. School.

The committee found the sum of $65.90 due to the petitioners—the Trustees of the Roman Catholic school.

The committee on Charities submitted a report of expenditures, and recommending the payment of T. Saunders' account of $34.07. The report was received and adopted.

On motion of Mr. Ormond, Col. Haultain, Sheriff Hall, and Mr. Burns were heard in reference to the Protestant Home. The matter was referred to the Charity committee, with a request that Mr. Ormond be associated with the committee.

On motion the Mayor was requested to investigate all the By-Laws that have been passed since the Town has been incorporated, and report a plan of consolidating all the By-Laws now in force.

A By-Law was introduced and passed to delegate the power of the Council to certain persons therein named for sanitary purposes.

On motion Messrs. Ormond, Millar, Ewing and Burnham were appointed a special committee to receive sealed tenders for the market tolls for the present year, and to dispose of the matter as they may deem expedient.

The Council adjourned for two weeks.

ASHBURNHAM COUNCIL.

The Council of the village of Ashburnham met on Monday, 19th inst.

Present—A. C. Dunlop, Esq., Reeve, and Messrs. Clark, Mowry, Sutherland and Ludgate.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and approved.

A communication from Mrs. F. W. Haultain, Secretary of Protestant Home, was received informing the Council that Margaret Moore had been received into the Home, and asking the Council to appropriate the sum of $1.50 per week for her maintenance.

On motion of Mr. M. Mowry, seconded by Mr. Clark, the sum of ten dollars was granted to the "Home" for the support of Mrs. McCutcheon or Margaret Moore, now in the Home, but the Council would not pledge itself for any weekly sum.

Moved by Mr. Sutherland, seconded by Mr. Clark, that

Whereas, The Ashburnham Volunteer Company have, by command of the government, marched from their homes to guard the frontier of our country from an invasion of lawless miscreants, we deem it our duty as loyal subjects of her Majesty, and also as neighbors and friends to protect and supply the wants of the wives and families of said Company, and that we pledge ourselves, unitedly as a Council, also in the capacity of private individuals, to supply their wants as far as in our power, and that the Reeve and Mr. Mowry be a committee from the Council to attend said wants, and report thereon at next meeting of Council.

Resolved, That the sum of one hundred dollars be placed at the disposal of the committee, on purpose to relieve the immediate wants of the wives and families that may require aid.

The Council adjourned to meet the first Monday in April a. 7 o'clock P. M.

COMPULSORY EDUCATION

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I promised to give some extracts to show how the compulsory system of education is viewed in England—that cradle of liberty and civil rights. First, I shall allude to a Report from a conference held in Birmingham, in the month of December, 1857, on Preventive and Reformatory Schools. It says—"The children whose condition requires the notice of the Committee are those who have not yet subjected themselves to the grasp of the law, but whom by reason of the vice, neglect, or extreme poverty of their parents, are inadmissible to the existing school establishments, and consequently must grow up without any education; almost inevitably forming part of the 'perishing and dangerous classes,' and ultimately becoming criminal. Second those who are already subjecting themselves to police interference by vagrancy, mendicancy, or petty infringements of the law. Third, those who have been convicted of felony or such misdemeanor as involves dishonesty. The provisions to be made for these three classes are: for the first free day schools, for the second industrial feeding schools with compulsory attendance, for the third penal reformatory schools.' Not a word here of imposing "pains and penalties" on parents for not sending their children to school and that too among the children who compose the 'dangerous classes,' upon which the argument for compulsory attendance at school, of Dr Ryerson and Judge Hagarty turns. Thes "Arabs of the Street," "Outcasts of Society," "Human vermin," are to be treated according to the situation they are found in, and compelled only to attend school, when their "vagrancy or mendicancy or crime" justifies police interference. If any where, it is in large cities such as Barmingham, where the pernicious influence of these uneducated classes is felt. And it is yet to be learned how this evil is to be got rid of. In a debate in the House of Commons in 1858 on the motion of Sir John Pakington for a commission to enquire into the present state of popular education in England. Mr. Cowper, Vice-President of the Committee on Education in referring to the existing system of education says, "that system had many defects. In some respects it was inferior to the continental systems. But there could be little doubt that it was better suited to the English people than the German system, that it was in fact as well suited to the English people as the German system was to the German people. At present the rights of English par nts are so scrupulously respected that they were allowed not only to choose the school to which they would send their children, but to refuse if they pleased to send them any where. He did not believe therefore that there would be any utility in the Commissioners enquiring into the questions whether there should be power given as in Germany to compel parents to send their children to school." Lord John Russell at the same date, after alluding to the efforts made by others as well as himself to forward the cause of education in England, and urging upon the House the importance of improving the present system—not in overthrowing it, but in extending its operations, by governmental pecuniary assistance as well as advocating the proposed commission, thus expresses himself: "the people of England may, however, in my opinion without adopting any such scheme, or indeed any very general scheme be induced to extend that system of education which is already in force. It is said that the appointment would be productive of considerable expense. I may, however, remark that, as we have been told this evening £600,000 are annually spent for educational purposes we may very legitimately endeavour by means of the labours of the proposed commission, to ascertain whether that sum might not be so managed as to go further than it now does in the extension of education in this Country. I am then of opinion if this motion be carried a very considerable object will be effected. We possess in this Country the inestimable advantage which the people enjoy in being at liberty to read at their schools the great works of our English authors. They are brought up in the habits of liberty suitable to our constitution. No compulsory action could produce anything like the advantages which result from that freedom, and I for one cannot give my assent to any scheme which would tend to deprive them of its happy influence."

In the above extracts it is plain to be seen that the principle of compulsion advocated by our Minister of Instruction would not be tolerated for a moment in England. If it is regarded there as an infringement upon parental rights, as the above extracts abundantly prove, shall we the descendants of Englishmen in free Canada submit to have so degrading a measure introduced into our school system? I have also carefully looked over the evidence given before a committee of the House of Lords in 1855, on the working of the National System of Education in Ireland, to discover if anything like compulsion were in it. I find the very reverse. The difficulty there arises more from the religious element than the secular. The regulations invariably provide for the sacred rights of parents, and in no instance is compulsion hinted at. Archbishop Whately, who was long a member of the Board of Commissioners, in his evidence before the committee, refers to the remarks of a Roman Catholic Bishop at the opening of a district model school in Newry. He says of the national system, "it excites all the youth of the whole country into its schools." In 1858 there was granted for public education in Ireland the sum of $1,650,000, and out of a population of 6,000,000 no less than 600,000 children were attending the National Schools, being just 10 per cent. of the population. In Upper Canada we have a population of about 1,500,000; we have (in 1864) 271,698 children returned as attending the public schools, being a trifle over 24 per cent. In England, in 1858, but 576,000 children were being educated by the government system of education, while there were 2,000,000 children between 5 and 15 years, in all, receiving education at school, making only a trifle over 14 per cent. of the population; while some two or three millions of children are not at school, some are at work, some learning to steal and every thing that is bad. But yet with all this need of education in England and Ireland, none of the able, illustrious and benevolent gentlemen who take a lively interest in education, scarcely ever hint so much as compelling parents to send their children to school. It remains for our arbitrary, irresponsible Chief Superintendent of Education to inaugurate this system, and force it upon the people of Canada. His coercive bill of 1855 was thrown out by the government as it deserved to be. He brought the subject before the people at a school convention six years ago, and although he has attempted since to carry it through, Parliament, the Government, has failed to entertain it. His perthacity in again canvassing the country for an opinion on the measure is ominous. Can it be that he has some favorite scheme to carry out in connection with it which is hid from the public view? He hinted while here that he might have inserted this with the other improvements (?) proposed, in a bill, and had it passed without an appeal to the people. But of what value is an opinion of the people as given at these conventions? Every where that I read of, before the votes were taken as in Peterborough, three-fourths of the people had left. His own proxy stale and faulty arguments, used for the ninety-ninth time, tired the people out, and when the discussion took place, as it did every where, many saw as much against as for the proposition, and cared not how the vote went. I find, too wherever he was opposed he manifested temper. Quite natural for a man exercising an irresponsible arbitrary power for 20 years, especially a man conscious of his ability to make the greatest man in the country dread crossing swords with him. Soon after his tour in 1847 the question of the University convulsed the country. In like manner in 1860, a fierce controversy was carried on between the Methodist Conference and other parties, relative to the distribution of the funds of the University among the various Colleges in the country; Dr. Ryerson figured very conspicuously in this controversy, and I always imagined that that tour had more or less to do with the University question. The part he then took in advocating so strenuously what the agitators were pleased to call "University Reform," but literally University spoliation, was sufficient to cause his removal from the head of the educational system of the country. At the conventions then he advocated Free Common Schools, Free Grammar Schools, and compulsory education. I have seen a draft of a bill of his, probably drawn about this time, in which he sought to get a supervision of the University as well as the other schools. It is really too bad that the Chief Superintendent of Education for Upper Canada should have devoted his energies in seeking to destroy that noble institution which is the pride of every Canadian. And who knows but some new move is about to take place in reference again to the University? This stamp indicates that something is up, which time will soon develope. Be that as it may his present favorite hobby of compulsory education, as an adjunct to free schools, will be seceded by default of the people. Let us hope that the Legislature, as before, will spew out the loathsome measure, and so prevent Canadians being bamboozled by having a measure incorporated in their constitution worthy only to be placed in the laws of the Czar of Russia, or among those of a mediæval age. A long dark career of efforts to destroy our chief seat of learning will be written against him by the future faithful historian of Canada, which with this last and most odious attempt to enter the sacred precincts of parental right, will detract seriously from the merit that might be recorded him for his efforts in establishing and maturing his present system of common schools. In conclusion, Mr. Editor, I have to repeat my astonishment that none of the gentlemen advocating the compulsory measure can be brought out. Was their endorsation of the principle a mere idle commitment to Dr. Ryerson? Or have they so unbounded confidence in him that they view him as infallible in any measure he advocates? Something of this latter was hinted at by one of the speakers. Well here are some of us that know enough of his past history and doings, as to be unwilling to trust him with any thing. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the space you have given me to ventilate my views, I remain,

Very truly yours, J. E.

Peterborough, 19th March, 1866.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—While as much is being done and done well to improve the sanitary condition of our cities and towns, and while much has been written on the subject, there is one point of some moment which I think has been in a great measure overlooked—and that is, the way to meet the epidemic whose advent is so much dreaded. Cholera must be met in the same manner as an invasion—promptly and fearlessly. It may not be in the power of three or four hundred of our Loyal Volunteers to repel and discomfit three or four thousand foes. But, advantageously posted and cautiously handled, they might keep them in check until reinforcements could arrive—who, mayhap, might turn the fortunes of a doubtful day. So with cholera—the slightest premonitory symptoms, the most trifling diarrhœa, a passing spasm, should be attended to instantly, and in rural districts particularly, where medical assistance may not be procured under three or four hours, if at all. I would suggest that every family, if possible, should get some medicine prepared and keep it in their houses. Not with the view of curing cholera. Far be it from me to indulge in the fallacy that every man should be his own doctor, or his own lawyer either. Those who try such a system generally have to foot the bill, whether it be of costs or of an undertaker. But I would recommend the keeping of medicine in families, to the end that a person attacked should have something at hand to hold the disease in check until medical aid could be procured. It may be said, and truly, that what would cure one might kill another. But it must be borne in mind that I only advocate this method as a temporary arrest, and not as a long trial to result in a verdict of kill or cure.

I have lived in large cities during the epidemics of 1832 and 1854, and I know from experience that with all the advantages to be obtained in a large and wealthy corporation, numerous and well appointed hospitals, efficient nurses, and a largely peopled profession of skilful, energetic and zealous medical men, that the demand for assistance was far in excess of the supply; and I feel certain that should it please the Almighty to permit this visitation in an aggravated form here, had our professional men the hands of Pizarros, or the speed of the swift-winged Mercury, they could not, however willing, render that prompt aid necessary.

I submit the following recipes, any of which promptly and judiciously used, will, in nine cases out of ten, keep disease under until medical aid can be procured:

No. 1.—Laudanum, 2 oz.; Spirits Camphor, 2 oz.; Tinct. Capricum, 2 drachms; Tinct. Ginger, 1 oz, Essence of Peppermint, 2 oz; Hoffman's Anodyne, 4 oz—mix. Dose—1 tablespoonful for an adult.

No. 2.—Tinct. Muriate of Iron, 1 oz.; Oil of Aniseed, 75 drops—mix. Dose—20 to 30 drops in half a glassful of cold water.

Should diarrhœa gain ground increase dose gradually to a tablespoonful.

No. 3.—Equal parts of Oil of Turpentine; do of Peppermint; Spirits of Camphor; Tinct. Lambanum—mix. Dose—For Diarrhœa, 1 teaspoonful; for Cholera, half a tablespoonful every four hours in a little brandy.

And here let me remark that many people fly to brandy or some other spirit as a special remedy against cholera. In many cases this is a foolish thing. Brandy might be of momentary benefit to a man who never indulged in stimulants. But the intemperate, or even those who claim to be moderate (?) drinkers, will delude themselves most miserably and most effectually if they put faith in alcohol. I am not a fanatic. I do not say that total abstinence will prevent an attack of cholera or any other disease. But I do say, and I know, that mentally and physically the man of abstinence—who is "temperate in all things"—is best able to endure and most likely to weather the storm of any disease, endemic or epidemic.

Above all things I would advise the community to avoid giving way to a morbid feeling of fear. Fear predisposes the system to malady—particularly those carrying the terror of sudden death with them, as cholera or fever. I will add but one word—there is a consulting physician without whom I am sure our medical friends feel they cannot work very well. He is always on hand, omnipresent and omnipotent. He never tires or wearies in doing good. The poorest has His aid equally with the rich. He is no respecter of persons. He can heal the body and the soul also. Whatever betide in Him let us put our trust, and we shall not have occasion to regret it.

I am, dear sir,
Faithfully yours, S.

Persistent Provocation.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR,—During the present Crisis in our affairs, it is exceedingly to be deplored that any portion of the people of this country should have their feelings persistently outraged by having taunts and unjust aspersions cast upon their loyalty and patriotism. It seems to make no difference what course the Catholics pursue, they cannot escape foul slanders and insulting epithets. If they do not rush into illegal associations to drill and arm with a zeal commensurate with their hot-headed neighbors, they are denounced as Fenians—and disloyal. If they take the only course open to them as law-abiding citizens, to proclaim their abhorrence of Feninism, and by uniting with their protestant neighbors to form a Volunteer Corps, and with a prospect of fight before them tender their services to the Authorities, they are equally abused and misrepresented. Only last night, in passing to their homes, in a quiet and orderly manner, after drill they were unceremoniously referred to by a couple of respectably protestants, as "Priest-Kelly's Volunteers."

There are a few facts which these men would do well to ponder. One of these is, that the great majority of the Lower Canadians, and a proportion, by no means small, of the Upper Canadian Volunteers and militia, will, in the event of actual hostilities be composed of these much abused and calumniated Catholics. It is well in the present crisis that these men are loyal, and if they are to remain so, the present taunts should be spared; for, were it otherwise, and were the Fenians to invade this country and find one-half the population banded against the other, the result would be most disastrous to those same persons as well as to the Country generally.

Now, Sir, there is a point, beyond which even forbearance ceases to be a virtue, and I respectfully call upon you, as a public Journalist, and your intelligent Protestant friends, to frown down the unjust and villainous attempt of a few misguided men to drive a respectable and law-abiding class of citizens, if not into disloyalty, at least to desperation; and should evil come of the systematic attempts apparently made to accomplish this object, the public and the authorities too, will know on whom the charge of wanton and persistent provocation will fall. These men are known, and with them perhaps "discretion were the better part of valor."

Yours faithfully,
A CANADIAN CATHOLIC.

Peterborough, March 20th, 1866.

Warlike Appearance of the Ancient Capital.

The excitement in the city regarding the Fenian invasion still continues, and in military circles the most active preparations for defence, are being vigorously prosecuted. The Volunteer forces which were called to arms on Wednesday night, and which were kept ready for an emergency all the following day at the drill-shed, were yesterday regularly billetted upon the inhabitants of Montcalm Ward in the neighborhood of the drill-shed. Colonel Sozor, Brigade Major de Montenagh, with Mr. Josh Bowles, as magistrate, and surgeons Montizambert and Sewell, yesterday morning proceeded to select houses on the St. Louis Road, Cross, Amable, St. Michael, D'Artigny and Scott streets, for the accommodation of the men of the Force. Chapham Terrace and the residence adjoining has been occupied by the cavalry and a portion of the fort artillery, while the rifles are billeted in houses in other streets. No distinction of persons or classes has been made, and so far as we could learn, the occupants have submitted good humoredly to the annoyance and trouble thus imposed upon them. In some houses as many as twelve volunteers are provided with quarters, while in others a lesser number, according to the accommodation offering. The Government will provide the men with rations daily, from the Esplanade Armory Stores, to consist of 1 lb. meat, 1 lb. bread, and 1 lb. potatoes to each man. The allowance to each householder for billeting is 10 cents per diem for each man, and he is obliged to furnish them with cooking utensils and light.

At roll-call yesterday morning, a number of volunteers were found to be absent, and a corporal's file was immediately despatched to hunt up the truant warriors and arrest them. To secure their attendance, the bill letting of the corps was resorted to.

On the part of the regulars in garrison, the same activity is displayed. But few soldiers were allowed out yesterday, and all had to be in barracks at eight in the evening.—Fatigue parties from the 7th Royal Fusileers and Royal Artillery, were employed in removing war stores, siege and field guns, ammunition, &c., from the Queen's wharf to the Upper Town. After dark, double guards were posted at all the city gates, and at the Queen's stores, the men being supplied with sixty rounds of ball cartridge each. Patrols of the regular force also paraded the streets of the city, lower town, and suburbs during the night. Everything has a warlike appearance, and the city is, to all intents, in a state of siege.

Some important information must be in the possession of the Government, that Quebec is selected as the first place to attack, for we hear of no such unusual preparations taking place westward where there is more cause for alarm. The Montreal papers of Thursday morning have scarcely a word about the order to call out the militia. In fact there was little or no excitement there. We are shrouded in mystery, but as we are not permitted to know our fate, we must philosophically submit to the natural course of events, and trust to the bravery of our defenders for protection.—Quebec News, 19th.

CLOSING OF THE CITY GATES.

The military authorities have decided that to-night, and from thenceforth till further orders, the gates of the city will be closed against all passage without exception from midnight till six in the morning; and St. John's Gate will be occupied by military, who will prevent ingress or egress.—*

Peterborough, March 14, 1866.

Among the most important of modern Medical discoveries, stands the Canadian Pain Destroyer.

As a Family Medicine, it is well and favorably known, relieving thousands from pain in the Side, Back and Head, Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Sprains, Bruises, Cramps in the Stomach, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Bowel Complaints, Burns, Scalds, Frost-bites, &c. &c. The Canadian Pain Destroyer has now been before the Public for a length of time, and wherever used is well liked, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction, where the Directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

We speak from experience in this matter, having tested it, thoroughly, and therefore those who are suffering from any of the complaints for which it is recommended may depend upon its being a Sovereign Remedy.

The astonishing efficacy of the Canadian Pain Destroyer, in curing the diseases for which it is recommended, and its wonderful success in subduing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and in relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of remedies for these complaints. Orders are coming in from Medicine Dealers, in all parts of the Country for further supplies, and each testifying as to the universal satisfaction it gives.

The Canadian Pain destroyer never fails to give immediate relief. All Medicine dealers keep it. Physicians order and use it; and no family will be without it after once trying it. Price only Twenty-five cents per Bottle.

All orders should be addressed to

FINKLE & LYON

SEWING MACHINE CO.

OFFICE 581 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

GUARANTEE.—After a fair trial, if any purchaser does not regard the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine as superior to any machine in market, he can return it and have his money. It has taken many of the highest prizes—is less complicated than any other first class machine,—does a wider range of work without changing,—requires no taking apart to clean or oil and no "lessons" to set needle, regulate tension, or operate machine.

N B. Any Clergyman sending us two orders for Machines, shall receive one for himself as a present. The same proposition is extended to Professors and Teachers.

We have now completed our New Manufactory at a cost of some $200,000, including Patents and important Improvements; and the object of the above proposition is to secure the immediate introduction of our improved machine into every town in the United States without incurring the great expense of a travelling agent.

This proposition cannot avail in towns occupied by our own agents.

Please send for descriptive Catalogue, with samples of sewing.

most precious truth that holy men of old not simply thought, but spoke, as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. I know that objection has been made to the diversity of style in the Bible, but that diversity is its charm. The Koran was written in one style, by one man, and it is the dullest book in existence. The Bible is in different styles—the Psalms of David, that have sounded from the Euphrates onwards to the Thames, to the Don, to the Dee, the Neva, and the Tiber; the gorgeous prophecies of Ezekiel, and the glowing prophecies of Isaiah; the terse, proverbial wisdom of Solomon; the majestic, yet simple historical narrative of Moses; the tender pathos of St. John; the strongly marked Roman writing of Mark; the eloquent and cultivated language of Luke; the splendid logic of Paul; and the golden glories of that city that hath foundations, was portrayed, as never object was portrayed, by St. John when at Patmos, in the Apocalypse (applause). Another distinctive truth of Protestantism is, that there is no other name under heaven (I care not what name it may be, or what it may not be, what muse or what charm it may have) by which you and I can be saved, except the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. In the next place, Protestantism holds what the Scripture confirms, that there is but one atonement, so perfect that repetition is absurd and addition is impossible—an atonement that you have not to make, not to wait for, but that you may have now, without money and without price. This is given us, not because of anything done by us, but because of something done for us 1800 years ago. Beautiful thought! Jesus took on him my nature, and endured the curse that I had drawn down, and I escape it. He obeyed the law that I could not obey, and he deserved and earned back the glories that I had forfeited and lost for ever. My sins on him brought him to the cross. His righteousness in me will elevate me to a crown of glory. When Jesus died there was nothing in him worthy of death; when I shall cross the threshold of heaven, there shall be nothing in me worthy of heaven. What was in me was the cause of his death; what was in Him—righteousness, white and pure—is the cause and the foundation of my reward. He, the spotless lamb, took upon Him the tainted fleece of me, the lost sheep, and He dying, I hereafter shall receive from Him the spotless fleece of His righteousness, and it will be well with me for ever and ever (applause). Protestantism means the distribution of the leaves of the tree of life, that are for the healing of the hearts of the nations of the earth. What we are to preach to you, and what I preach to my people constantly, and will do, I trust, by God's grace, as long as I live, is that you have nothing to wait for, nothing to pay, nothing to do, no penance to endure, no sacrifice to make, but just to look and live, take the Almighty at his word, and go home and be happy.—That is Christianity; that is the religion of the Bibles "It is the spirit and the bride say come, and whosoever"—elect? No. Predestinated? No. Worthy? No. Upright? No. Reformed? No—but "whosoever will let him come, and taste of the waters of life freely." (applause). I believe, in my conscience, that God Almighty will save, this very moment, the most unworthy of you; but he won't save the unwilling. It is not your unworthiness that disqualifies you, but your unwillingness.—He that pleads that he cannot be saved because of God's decree, pleads what is not true, for God would save all through the name and blood of the Lord Jesus Christ. Depend upon it if we accepted the Gospel in all its fulness, love, and power, there would be fewer perverts to Romanism, and more enthusiastic devotedness to Protestant Christianity (applause). One thought more; the essence of Protestantism is, that God is our father; but is it not too true, that our constant idea of God is that He is a very awful being? Religion, on the contrary, instead of being so sepulchral, was emphatically sent to make us holy. If you are not happy it is not religion that prevents you from being happy, but the want of it. Hence, when you teach it to your children, teach them that religion is a privilege of heaven, is a land of sunshine, that the Bible is the most delightful of all books, and that Sunday is the sweetest and happiest of all days. The Rev. gentleman having dwelt on the injudiciousness of giving children collects and passages of Scripture to learn as tasks for misbehaviour, a course calculated to excite in their minds gloomy views of, and a distaste for religion and thereby making them more likely to fall a prey to the wiles of Romanism, continued. I feel for the Roman Catholic, especially as being unhappy. When the Roman Catholic dies, he may be the godliest and most exemplary member of the flock; but as in the case of Cardinal Wiseman, he does not go to heaven. The Cardinal is not in heaven yet. You ask, how do I know that? Because prayers are offered up in every Roman Catholic church throughout England for the rest and repose of his soul.—Where? Every Roman Catholic tells you, in Purgatory. The holiest go there, and bad people go to hell. No Roman Catholic can pass into heaven without going through the purgatorial fires. What an awful thought for the Roman Catholic mother, who sees her daughter die, and feels that she has gone into the most excruciating torments; so with the Roman Catholic husband, who sees his young wife die. Would that I could only put an end to the misery of such convictions, and teach them the blessed truth that it is our privilege to know, that "that absent in the body, yet present with the Lord," that in the case of the Christian, his last sleep is everlasting refreshment, that his last pang makes him free to all, heaven itself, that the sunset of time blends with the sunrise of glory, and that the Christian knows not what it is to feel the chilly night between. Such is our hope (applause). The Rev. speaker having advocated the claims of the Protestant Reformation Society, resumed his seat amidst loud applause, after speaking for upwards of an hour and a half.

The Rev. W. Cleme tson, from Liverpool, afterwards gave some particulars of the operations of the Society, which he shewed, was very much needed at the present time, and that it had been abundantly blessed, both as regards the conversion of Romanists and the preservation of Protestants.

The Chairman thanked Dr. Cumming for his eloquent address, and the meeting terminated with the benediction.

FREE TRADE IN THE UNITED STATES.—An agitation for the Free Trade has set in in the neighboring republic, which promises to be formidable. Free Trade Leagues are being organized everywhere, and on the 1st instant, in the Senate, Mr. Morgan presented the memorial of the Free Trade League of New York, for a continuance of the present Reciprocity Treaty, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mrs. Jefferson Davis is on her way to Canada. So says a telegraphic despatch from New Orleans, at which place Mrs. Davis was yesterday.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. The stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate, showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

PIANO-FORTE.

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano The construction is simple and natural. all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrumen is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings re attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old heavy form of stringing by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Deinos is the inventor. By those improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
M. x Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Burrill,
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
m. Henry Fry,	Charles Fradel

Mr. EGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble, it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm HENRY FRY, late musical cric of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal verasimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept 5—Upon a careful examination of Deinos Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilliancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the full power of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr S. B. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination in points of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,

L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN

SEWING MACHINES.

EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB. 14th, 1860.

Salesrooms, { 536 Broadway, New York. 262 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles of mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock of shuttle stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nainsook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health.

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it alm st impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply themselves with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

But in a more especial manner do we elicit the patronage of

Merchant Tailors,	Corset Makers,
Coach Makers,	Gaiter Fitters,
Hoop Skirt Manufacturers,	Shoe Binders,
Shirt and Bosom Makers.	Vest and Pantaloon Makers.
	Dress Makers.

Religious and Charitable Institutions will be liberally dealt with.

One half-hour's instruction is sufficient to enable any person to work the Machine to their entire satisfaction.

LLOYDS GREAT TOPOGRAPHICAL RAILWAY and COUNTY MAP of ENGLAND, IRELAND, SCOTLAND and WALES—Six feet large, mounted and varnished; cost $100,000 and four years time; was finished July 28, and is the best map ever made since the world was first made; shows 200,000 cities, towns villages, market places, post offices, castles, country seats and 38,000 railways and railway stations, with the distance between each station marked plainly, and the official name and total length of each railway in actual operation up to June, 1865, is given. The railway stations are all numerically and alphabetically arranged. The lakes, rivers, hills and mountains are exhibited, with the altitude of each in feet, made from trigonometrical surveys by our own engineers, draughtsmen and Photographers sent to England expressly to make a superior map of that country: the whole engraved on steel, colored superbly in counties, mounted and varnished. Price 8 shillings sterling ($2). No map at $20 can compare to this. Canvassers throughout the world wanted. Also men, with a small capital, to go to Canada, Chicago, Cincinnati, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, East and West Indies, Australia and California, to open offices. Can make a fortune wholesaling this and other maps to sub-agents. Eighty thousand copies of this map were subscribed for in England before going to press, as can be shown by our agents' letters to us. Ten new maps now under way

RESIST THE DEVIL.

It's fair I ken, yet what the matter,
Auld horney lad, I doot ye flatter;
If I submit ye wad sune shatter
My peace o' mind;
Deave me nae mair wi' your fair clatter,
Get ye behind.

It wad be sweet, I dinna doot ye,
To taste the fruit ye lay before me;
It wad set neebors in my breastle
At ance tae fecht;
Sae tak' awa' your pretty posie
Out o' ma' sicht.

I winna do't, tae there's an end o't,
If I wad yield I wad repent o't,
Gae some where else an' try tae vend it;
But woe tae him
That buys your ware an' do's na tent it,
He's sure tae sin.

Auld Clootie—cock your lugs an' leuk,
See, here's ma shield, I fand it i' The Beuk,
The vera sicht o' 't's like tae mak' ye peuk,
I ken fu' weel;
Sae dauner aff tae your hot neuk,
Or then ye'll reel.

In crookie den ye should be keepit,
Hy Gcd's comman' ye'll yet be stekit,
Just for a wee ye may be glaikit,
Ye tousie tyke;
An' in oor lugs try mak' a risket
Just like a byke.

See there "he's gone as sure's a gun,"
As quick as sparks flv up the lum,
Or beams o' licht fa' free the sun,
Wi' changin' hues;
While through ma lug his elritch croon,
Gaes wi' a whis.

Noo, ye wha fecht wi' weapon's guid,
Don't turn your back though smeared wi' bluid,
Pu' doon the pride o' him that's proud,
'Cause he's a rebel;
Tak' ma advice, ye'll find it guid,
Resist the Devil.

Literature.

A WORD IN SEASON.

Among his brethren, Abraham Farfel was considered a 'Godly man,'—That was, in fact, the appellative with which many of his church associates distinguished him. In prayer meetings his strong fervors were electric, moving all hearts as by a kind of spiritual magnetism. In class meetings, his stories of conflict with Satan, and triumphs over the enemy of souls, were listened to with the deepest interest, and lessons of hope and encouragement taken therefrom by humble-minded followers of Him who walked amid temptations without a faltering footstep. His 'leader' had no words of warning for Abraham Farfel. The burden of his weekly counsel was mainly in this wise:—

'Go on, my brother, in the straight and narrow way your feet have entered. Fight on in the good fight of faith. Keep your armor whole, and let no rust-spot dim the brightness of your sword. How beautiful is the Christian's life; how noble the truly Christian man! Angels steal from their supern l heights to look upon them, while a divine admiration fills them with ineffable delight. A crown of glory awaits you, my brother. The heavenly mansions are prepared. Oh, walk onwards without a wavering step! Turn not to the right nor the left; but onwards, straight onwards in the way you have chosen; it is the narrow way to Heaven.'

So thought Abraham Farfel's class leader who met him only once a week, on Sunday mornings, at the class-room; and so thought nearly all of Abraham Farfel's brethren in the church, who only saw the pious side of his character.

In the world, however, that outside wilderness in which, according to the belief of some, no flowers of holy living can take root and grow, in the world, away from which so many religious people keep their religion, Abraham Farfel was seen and regarded in a different light. Few men were more eager to get gain, or clutched at gold with a more rigorous hand. He was shrewd, sharp, and exacting—claiming his own to the very uttermost farthing; and too often, we fear, getting a farthing that belonged to somebody else while rigidly bending on securing his own

Mr. Farfel was not religious through any love of Heaven—else had he sought for heavenly states of mind, which include unselfish neighborly love—but from a dreadful horror of the worm that never dieth, and the fire that is not quenched. And to 'escape the wrath of God,' he gave up his Sundays to excessive piety, that won for him a saintly reputation among his brethern And, in the blindness of his folly, he imagined that, for acts of devotion, and hypocritical semblances, he had acceptance with God. Poor, weak, self-deceiving human nature!

Mr. Farfel was the owner of a row of ten small houses, standing in a narrow, unventilated court. He had built them as an investment, which, if looked after, would pay handsomely. Very poor people were his tenants, and he had the rents collected monthly.—No regard whatever was paid to their health or comfort. He made no repairs that could be avoided. The rent was all he cared for

One day the collector called to make his monthly returns. Abraham Farfel run his eye over the list of settlements. He knew every house and every tenant.

'Ward has not paid.' And he pushed his spectacles away from his cold grey eyes, and contracted his hard forehead.

'Ward is sick,' said the collector.

'Sick, ha! How comes that?'

And he looked at the collector as if he were to blame in the case.

'Were you ever sick, Mr. Farfel?'

He had come so often into close contact with the man, that he understood him thoroughly.

'What has that to do with Ward?' was returned, a little impatiently.

'Nothing, perhaps. I thought the query might suggest the idea of a cause lying outside of the poor man's controle. But, as I said, he has been sick, and can't pay the month's rent.'

'Hum-m. Can't pay.' The small ripples on the surface of Mr. Farfel's outer life had subsided and all was smooth. He had betrayed himself a little; but the veil which had been pushed aside, was drawn back instantly.

'Well? what then? How much furniture is there in the house?'

The collector shook his head.

'Not six dollar's worth?' The brows which had been smooth, showed two or three deep wrinkles.

'Oh, yes; Ward's furniture is worth more than a month's rent.'

'All right, then.' Mr. Farfel's tone expressed relief and satisfaction. 'How soon does he expect to go to work again?'

'I'm afraid, poor fellow, that his working days are over,' said the collector, in a voice touched with sympathy.

'Then he'll not be able to pay up?'

'No, sir; there's little hope of that.'

'Hum-m-m. Well, it's a bad case for him. You're certain he has effects enough to cover the rent now due?'

'Yes.'

'Very well—I'm safe. But what ails the man?'

'He's been weakly for some time; and troubled, in spells, with a bad cough.—Three weeks ago he bled freely from the lungs, and since that time has not been able to get out. I think his days are numbered.'

'Hum-m-m. Well. He must go, of course, if he isn't able to pay the rent.—We can't have any lame ducks about, you know. Has he any friends? Or, must he look to the poor-house?'

'He has a son in Reading, I believe.'

'Oh. Well, he'd better get to him as quickly as possible. Did you give him notice to vacate the premises?'

'No.'

'Why not? If he can't meet the rent, he can't stay.

'A man, sick it may be unto death, Mr. Farfel, is entitled, I think, to some humane consideration. Ward has paid his rent, punctually, for two years; and now, he pleads inability, and asks some leniency, on account of severe illness.'

'Leniency? How? What? I don't get your drift. He doesn't want to pay his rent?'

Light had come into Mr. Farfel's mind.

'He can't pay it,' said the collector,

'He must pay it,' answered the landlord.

'Mr. Farfel,' the collector's voice dropped to a tone of persuasion, 'I think the case of Ward deserves your kindest consideration. He is very poor, and prostrate with a sickness that I fear will render him dependent on others during the short time he will remain on the earth. Suppose you forgive him the rent due.'

'Preposterous!' ejaculated Mr. Farfel. 'He has the means of paying a just debt; and let him pay it, like an honest man. He will sell his furniture before going to his son in Reading; and, in all fairness, he should pay me out of the proceeds. His wife and his son must take care of him. They're not worth much if they can't do that.'

'Then you won't forgive him the debt?'

'No sir. You must see to its collection. That would be a very bad precedent. Half my tenants in the court would be on the sick list within three months, and intercessors for a remission of their rent. No, sir. That way of doing busines is not in my line. I pay every man his due; I'm honest to the farthing; and I hold all men to the same equitable rule. I am just, sir; and consider it fairly my right to exact justice from others. Mr. Ward has no more claims on me for six dollars, than a thousand other other poor men, in the same condition, have. I'm not called upon to scatter my hard earned substance in this wild way.'

'The poor are in God's hands,' said the collector. His feelings were not only interested in the sick tenant, but a little excited towards the hard-hearted landlord, the quality of whose mind he knew too well; and he helps them by means of pitying human hearts, and ready human hands. No claim has been made on you in behalf of the thousand poor men of whom you speak; only this one, helpless and wounded, has God brought in your way. Do not be as the priest and Levite to him, but as the good Samaritan.'

'Excuse me, if you please,' said Mr. Farfel, drawing himself up in a half-offended way. 'I employ you as my collector, not my preacher. I flatter myself, sir, that I comprehend my duty to God.'

The collector bowed; and without another word on the subject, proceeded to make his returns. After he had paid over the various sums which he had received, and folded his large pocket-book, he was moving away, when Mr. Farfel said:

'You must see to getting that rent from Ward, who is to leave the house at once, so as to make room for a better tenant.—Mind, I hold you responsible.'

The collector turned back quickly, and confronted Mr. Farfel with a look of strong rebuke on his face, saying as he did so:

'You call yourself a Christian man, I believe?'

'Sir?' Mr. Farfel was insulted

'A Christian man, so far advanced on the heavenly journey, as to have forgotten the Lord's Prayer?'

'Sir, I cannot permit this! It is an outrage!'

'Good morning!' said the collector; and in a moment after Mr. Farfel sat alone. His mind was considerably disturbed, and it took some time for it to run clear; when it was clear, he found an uncomfortable state remaining. The last remark of his collector puzzled him; it was so strange. 'Forgotten the Lord's Prayer.' What did it mean? The sentence haunted him. It was a long time since he had offered that prayer among his daily petitions. Its terms were of too general a character to meet his states, wants, and aspirations; and for this reason he avoided its idle repetitions. But now he crossed over the words and sentences, in search of the meaning his admonisher had intended to convey.—On the petition, 'Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors!' his thought naturally lingered. To this he had no doubt, the collector referred. But its special application he could not see; and he was about pushing the subject from his mind, when his heart suddenly lost a stroke, and then throbbed on with jarring impulses. A new interpretation—at least for him—was suggested. 'As we forgive our debtors.' How do I forgive? This question unraded itself. 'For if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father in Heaven forgive your trespasses.' And this truth from the Divine Word, involving a law of spiritual life far above the reach of his low-soaring perceptions, warned him almost like a living voice.

'As we forgive our debtors!' How the meaning grew upon him! That prayer might be for a blessing, or a curse; dependent on the life and state of the petitioner.

'How do I forgive?'

Ah, now came the strife? And it was long and painful. Fear of the undying worm, and the unquenchable fire, which had so often haunted his imagination, and not a spirit of obedience, helped him in the combat with selfish and worldly loves. Humanity was victorious; not a higher and purified humanity, but that lower image thereof, which acts in bondage and fear instead of from the sweet, tender, yearning impulses of an inflowing divine love.

The sick man's debt was remitted; if not from the heart forgiven. How much better if it had been forgiven; for, not though our acts have we acceptance of Heaven, but in the states from which they flow.—Arthur's Home Magazine.

The two Belles, or the Choice of a Wife.

'Come in!' and Marian Hartly, the belle of an aristocratic circle, and the queen of a score or so of hearts, raised herself from her reclining posture on a velvet lounge in her dressing-room, to receive a hearty kiss from the lips of her dearest friend Ida Evens.

'Oh! I am so happy to see you this afternoon, Ida, I was feeling so lonesome, and so tired after the ball last night, that I could not make the exertion to dress fit to make my appearance down stairs. I don't see how you happen to look so fresh and bright,' and Marion glanced at the glowing lips and sparkling eyes of her friend.

'Perhaps the reason I don't feel so tired as you do, Marion, is that I left about twelve, several hours before you I presume.'

'Yes, indeed,' returned Marion; 'I would not be so foolish as to leave when the gaiety is at its very height. You missed a great deal of pleasure by leaving so early, Ida.'

'Perhaps so,' was the quiet reply; 'but if I had remained much longer, I would have been unfitted to rise in time for breakfast with papa, and I know he would not enjoy his coffee half as well if I did not pour it for him.'

'Well, you were always different from me, Ida. I don't believe I have breakfasted in any other room than this for the last two weeks. It is such a trouble to dress for breakfast when there is no one to admire me but papa and mama.'

'What were you reading, Marion?' and Ida picked up a book that had fallen from off the lounge.

'Oh, it is such a delightful book, so thrilling. It is called 'Broken Hearts,' or, 'The trial of Euphemia;' but of course you will not like it, for I remember you once told me you never read such books. I have been reading it all the afternoon. How have you been spending your time, Ida?'

'In various ways,' returned Ida. 'I have been practising a new piece of music.'

'Have you. What is it, anything pretty?'

'I like it very much; it is a sweet little song. Papa is so fond of hearing me play and sing in the evenings for him, that I devote quite a share of my time to music.'

Marion yawned and shrugged her pretty shoulders.

'That is just like you, Ida, if you were me you would find you had quite plenty to do to learn brilliant pieces, to perform at the most fashionable parties. But do you know, Ida, I think we will have a most delightful time at Mrs. Barton's ball, to-morrow evening. I hear that Mr. Readinson, the richest and most charming gentleman of the season, has just returned from a tour abroad, and is to be present, and, Ida, I intended to set my cap for him.'

Ida laughed a merry, joyous laugh.—'Why, Marion,' she exclaimed, 'it is scarce a week since you told me you were going to use all lawful endeavours to secure the affections of Mr. Fred, Rolfe. What has caused you to change so suddenly?'

'Oh! I am positive I should not like Mr. Rolfe, why, Ida, do you know the other evening, when I asked him how he liked a piece of music I just played and sang he actually had the audacity to tell me that, most likely he would have enjoyed it better if he had understood the words.'

Ida smiled. 'Not very complimentary certainly.'

'No, indeed, and when he asked me if I was fond of reading, and I told him the kind of books I read, he said he did not approve of such light reading for young ladies. I was so surprised at his assurance, that before I had time to reply we were interrupted, and so the conversation ended. I advise you to cultivate his acquaintance, Ida, for I verily believe he can outdo you in preaching against the frivolities of the present generation.'

The hours flew swiftly by, and it was almost dark when Ida Evens rose to go.

'I will see you to-morrow evening, I suppose, Ida,' said Marion, at parting; and, you just see if I don't walk straight into the affections and fortune of Mr. Readinson.'

Mrs. Barton's elegant rooms were, on the succeeding evening, filled with all the wit, beauty, and wealth of the city, to use her own words, her dear five hundred friends all present.

Conspicuous among the many fair forms that glided through the rooms was Marion Hartly. Dressed in the height of fashion and glittering with jewels, she presented a most striking appearance.

'How beautiful,' though Charlie Readinson. 'The owner of such a beautiful form and countenance fail to be the possessor of a mind equally as fair.'

And as he watched her graceful movements as she glided the dance, he thought how dignified she would look at the head of his establishment as Mrs. Charlie Readinson, and while he thus communed on the beauty of Marion, Fred Rolfe, the gentleman whom the fashionable had declared possessed of so much assurance and audacity, was chatting quite pleasantly with Ida Evans. He looked beneath the mere surface, and, instead of like Charlie Readinson, admiring the brilliant form and features, he, while he was not insensible to the beauty of his fair companion, was perhaps, more bewitched by the well stored mind, than by the glances of the dark eyes that in themselves were almost irresistible.

And as days ripened into weeks, and weeks, into months, so the friendship of Mr. Readinson and Marion, and that of Fred. Rolfe for Ida deepened into love, and, when the city was again in the height of its gaiety, there were busy preparations going on for the two weddings.

At Marion's urgent request both the ceremonies were to take place at her home, and, accordingly, we find both Ida and her standing, surrounded by their bridesmaids, in the same room where we first made their acquaintance dressed in most gorgeous attire awaiting the arrival of the guests.

'The ceremony will commence in twenty minutes,' who having assured herself that everything was in proper order, hastily entered the dressing-room for a minute.

'Just enough time for another survey of myself,' exclaimed Marion, as she gazed proudly at the beautiful image reflected in her mirror.

'In fifteen minutes,' murmured Ida, and slipping noiselessly from the gay crowd, she entered a small vacant room, and dropping on her knees, prayed earnestly that she might be enabled to discharge the new duties that she was about to take upon herself, and that she might walk right in the path that she was on the eve of entering.

And with such different feelings in their minds the two maidens approached the altar; and with just such different feelings did they enter upon their new lives.

Mr. Readinson had loved for the beautiful exterior, the glittering surface, while Mr. Rolfe had chosen one whom he thought possessed not only the ability to shine in the hall-room, but to make happy by her bright smile the home fire-side. We shall see who made the better choice.

* * * * * * * * * *

Two years have passed, and now let us again look in upon our friends. It is in the home where taste and wealth have done everything to make it happy, that we find Mr. Readinson. Seated in his library, his feet on the fender, and a cigar between his teeth he lazily watched the wreaths of smoke that half enveloped him.

'How shockingly lonesome it is,' he murmurs; 'people pity bachelors, and say how lonesome they must be, but for my part, I never spent half the dull evenings before my marriage that I have since. I do wonder if that party will end to-night and Marion ever get home,' he continued half aloud. 'But then I need not care for she is always so fatigued after a party that she has nothing to say until she wants to be escorted to another, I wish she thought less of ball-rooms and more of home;' and tired of his solitary vigil, Mr. Readinson betook himself off to his club, where he was obliged to find the enjoyment that he sought in vain for at home; and from which he did not return till after mid-night.

And what of Mr. Rolfe and the fair Ida? The drawing-rooms at their home are used for comfort, as well as for the accommodation of guests, and the same evening that Marion Readinson chases with flying feet the midnight hours away, while her husband wanders restlessly about the club rooms, her friend Ida and her husband, are enjoying a pleasant evening by themselves. A bright fire is burning in the grate in the back parlour, the gas sheds a soft light over the rich carpet and costly furniture, and Fred Rolfe in dressing gown and slippers, the production of the dainty little fingers of his Ida, leans comfortably back in a large easy chair in his hand is a book from which he has been reading aloud; and as he pauses to cut a leaf with his penknife, his eye rests lovingly on Ida, the same Ida, only if possible more loving than ever. A peaceful, happy look plays over her countenance as she listens to the voice of her husband. She is busily engaged at a piece of crotchet work, a smoking cap for Fred. Her joy and happiness are all centered in her own home and at her husbands fireside. True, they like the society of their friends and are not so selfish as to exclude themselves from all company, but their chief delight is in each others' society, and in the endeavor to promote each others' happiness.

And now, reader, whom do you think of the two made the wiser choice.

When the Highgate omnibus conductor called out "All full inside!" Lamb, who was half asleep in his corner, woke up to stammer out, "Well I can't answer for the other gentleman, but that last piece of pudding at Mrs. Gilman's did the business for me."

The name of Roger having been written on a sack, by some chance the last letter was concealed, when a person read it Roge (Rogue.) "How can that be?" retorted a bystander 'True.' replied the other, 'it wants u (you) in it."

PHILOSOPHIC SLEEP.—We read that a physician of Magdeburg, who had just died prematurely at the age of 109, has left it on record in his will his longevity was due to his having slept with his head to the N. and his heels to the S., so that the magnetic current passed through him, and increased his vitality.—There is no reason why every body who wants to be 109, should not try the means thus recommended, though we see chances of much compensatory irritation in the room that Metropolitan and other masters of families will make about the disarrangement of bed-room furniture.—The idea of sticking a bed across a room, because the south in its present position stands E. and W. will, under a proper despotism, be simply impossible. But supposing the plan to be adopted, it will be necessary to put one's pocket compass by the bed-side as a companion to one's watch.—Then, again, are we to sleep by the true true north or the magnetic north? This question would have occurred to Mr. Stanley's father, when on the subject of dangerous. In a sleeping husband to be aroused by a shrill warning. "Now, Mr Candle, there you lie snoring at the N. N. W., and to-morrow you will want the doctor; but don't think I'm going to send for him, to have his orders laughed at." It will be touching to behold the waitress, when at the couch where infant Beauty sleeps. Her pensive watch (and company), the silent mother keeps. "Sidney, dear, do not roll round to the West in that manner! have I not promised to take you to see Chang, if you'll easily sleep N and S." And the mode of solution will be improved. 'Why Bricks, my boy, how well you look!—Where did you buy your compass, I think certification, for I get the awfullest nightmares!" The word of command will no longer be "Go to bed," but "Come, turn to box and compass, young-folks." How far an iron bedstead, like an iron ship, may effect the needle, will also have to be considered.—Punch.

Once in a church, a young man who carried the collecting plate, before starting to collect, put his hand in his pocket as usual, and put a shilling, as he supposed on the plate, and then passed it round among the congregation, which numbered many young and and pretty girls. The girls, as they looked at the plate, were astonished and amazed; and the young man taking a glance at the plate, found that, instead of a shilling, he had put a conversation lozenge in the plate, with the words. "Will you marry me?" in red letters staring everybody in the face. None of the young ladies, however, closed with the offer,

A JOKE ON THE FENIANS.—In Detroit the other day a Fenian placard was issued which wound up with the usual "God save the Green." Some parties, with an eye to the truth, pasted the word "horns" after the green, thus making it read "God save the Greenhorns!" It is not less to say that the Fenians were exceedingly wrathy, and the last heard of them, they were offering $5 reward (in bonds we suppose) for the name of the joker.

A club is being formed in Paris called 'The Club Silence." The rules are that not a word is to be spoken in the club by members or attendants. Eating, drinking, smoking and reading will be allowed, but nothing else. The attendants are to receive written orders only.

THE VALUE OF NONSENSE.—Artemus Ward has cleared $50,000 by his books and lectures. His nonsense has availed him more, pecuniarily, than the literary talents of any American except Washington Irving.

TERRIBLE DEATH.—An unfortunate inebriate, Joe Balston, after having spent all his cash in the groggeries of Philipsburg, Centre county, Pa., was thrust out to find his way home the best way he could.—Failing to find the brige across the Moshannon, he boldly dashed into the creek to wade it, but ere he had proceeded two-thirds across, his limbs refused to perform their office. He grasped a bough of an over-hanging tree unable to advance further, and soon the fast congealing water cemented close about him a tomb of ice, which stretched from shore to shore. Two days after the he was found standing there rigid as an icicle, his knees imbedded in a sheet of the frozen element seven inches thick, his body sustained a little forward hands clutching the bough, eyes astare, and despair pictured on his features.

It is rumored in England that Princess of Schelesewig-Holstein, will be elevated to the English peerage, under the title of the Duke of Kendal, and reside permanently in England. This intended step is in accordance with the understood wishes of the Queen, who naturally desires that at least one of her grown up daughters should remain with her.

THE EXCITEMENT OVER.

The uneasiness consequent on the rumors of invasion has in great part died out, and just now there is a reasonable calm. The Volunteers who went to the front have nothing to do but perfect themselves in their exercise. If we may judge from the tone of the press both in the United States and Canada the excitement is dying out everywhere except in Ireland. It is now hinted that some American papers especially one or two in New York city were doing the puffing and blowing of the Brotherhood for the proceeds of a few Irish Bonds, but that these do not sell so readily and the needful being short the steam is at low pressure. One thing is certain, there is less blowing than usual.

Some are of the opinion that the ready response of the volunteers and their appearance on the Frontier damped the ardour of the F. B., but that as soon as a false sense of security is brought about, at a moment least expected they will make a dash. It is argued that the enterprize could not yet be given up, without casting odium upon the leaders, and that rather than that, they will wait awhile, then make a feint that may induce the interference of the authorities of the United States which will afford a sufficient pretext for dropping the matter as impracticable; such interference would also afford an excuse for delay, in the meantime the money collected from the dupes of Fenianism would be spent, and how shall the Emerald Isle be liberated without money?

However, some more prophetic than other mortals, think the danger is not yet passed. The cost of the present excitement may deter ministers from continuing the gallant volunteers at the front longer than absolutely required. Already some companies have been allowed to return to their regular avocations. Captain Kennedy received orders on Tuesday to dismiss the men from duty, till further orders at least.

The people, however, are not yet tired of military display. In Port Hope our gallant fellows have been feted and admired. Not a voice has been raised against government for their action in calling out so many men, although the daily cost cannot be far from $20,000 a day. Canadians show a willingness to bear their portion of self protection, and our hopes are that this display of readiness will prove a warning to marauders to keep away from our borders.

The following from the Hamilton Spectator affords an example of Canadian patriotism:—

"When the American flag was fired upon at Fort Sumter, an act which ought to have roused the patriotism of the people, the President called for 75,000 men for ninety days; and he had to promise a hundred dollars bounty and a hundred acres of land to each, in order to secure their services, and even then it was nearly two months before they were in the field. That was the effort of twenty millions of people; and the offer of one hundred and eighty thousand, from among a population of three millions, without the prospect or the promise of bounty in any shape, within eight days after sounding the alarm, affords a contrast of which Canadians may well feel proud.

THE DRILL SHED.

In our last we referred to a meeting that was held for the purpose of taking the necessary steps to get a Drill Shed. Although we have had, we may say, three Volunteer Companies—as Ashburnham is almost a part of the Town—yet they have not had a proper place to drill in, being compelled to use small rooms, and other places, as they could be obtained. The County Council heretofore, with commendable liberality, agreed to aid in the work of erecting a suitable building, and that body, we believe, is as willing as ever to do something, provided the Town will come forward with a liberal grant towards it. At the last Council meeting a committee was appointed to consider the matter, and report as to what amount could be granted to such an object; also to find what the County Council will be likely to do, and whether the government will aid the undertaking. The costs are set down at $2,000 to $3,000; for this, it is believed, a good substantial building, of such dimensions as would suit the proposed object, namely, a drill shed large enough to permit the manœuvring of four or five companies, and also be a suitable place for Agricultural exhibitions, and other large meetings. One thing is certain, if a shed is about to be erected it is as well to make it large enough at once. The extra cost will not be very material, and it ought to be constructed so as to be commodious and durable, and be suitable for more purposes than one. We do not propose to become a military people altogether. We trust after the present fuss that our Volunteers will return to peaceful and industrious habits. Yet we can scarcely hope to be exempt from military training in order to be ready for any emergency. But apart from all these considerations a large shed is required for exhibitions, concerts and large meetings, and we consider the present an opportune moment for obtaining it.

THE SITE.

The trouble will be a suitable site. The majority of those we have spoken to, speak of the old burying ground as suitable. The ground is level and not materially out of the way. An act of Parliament, however, will be required before it can be used for the purpose, but this will not be difficult to obtain. The question will arise, however, as to what body should have control of the ground—the Town Council or the County Council; We refrain just now to advocate which body should have the control; the Town Councils will be able to settle that themselves. But immediate action should be taken if we are to have a shed this year.—For this purpose we think it would be advisable for the Committee already appointed to open communication with the Warden so that application may be made at the approaching session of Parliament for an act to vest the property in some one of these bodies. We trust the Committee appointed by the Town Council will at once set to work.

ORNAMENT THE GROUNDS.

This one Stipulation, however, should be made, that which ever body gets the control of the grounds should be compelled to lay out and ornament them, so as to make the place a public promenade where our citizens could withdraw for an hour, and where flowers, shrubs and flowing fountains might be so arranged as to render the place attractive and delightful. Surely the citizens of our Noble Town can afford a pleasant retreat from Carping cares for an hour now and then during our summer evenings.

THE LATE COLONEL CRAWFORD.

We were unable last week, owing to the lateness of receiving the intelligence of this gentleman's demise, to do more than merely notice his death and age. We have since been supplied with some particulars respecting his history, which we cheerfully communicate. Born during the struggle for American Independence, and living in the stirring times of the Irish rebellion, and during the tragic events of the first Napoleon, he readily assumed his share of duty incumbent upon every loyal subject. In 1829 he emigrated with his family to this country from the county of Down, Ireland. He resided a short time in Lachine, subsequently made his way to Cobourg, and from there in 1830 to Peterborough. He bought land and settled in the Township of Douro, about seven miles above here, where he erected a sawmill, the first erected in the Township. Here he encountered some of the privations and trials incident to backwoods life. Some time after he purchased land in the Township of Smith, and lived on it till he removed into Town in 1848. In 1849, under the Baldwin-LaFontaine Government, he was appointed Crown Land Agent. This office he held for 10 or 11 years, until it was removed to the back country. During the whole period of his incumbency of this office we never heard a whisper of a charge of corruption or maladministration against him. His official, as well as his private character, was conspicuous for strict honesty, and unflinching integrity. In his intercourse with the public he was marked for urbane and gentlemanly conduct towards all. On the occasion of his leaving Ireland his neighbours and friends presented him with an address, accompanied with a very handsome and valuable tea service, as a mark of the high esteem in which they held him for his kind, gentlemanly, and uniform upright department. As a parent he was kind, indulgent and affectionate—as a friend grateful, generous and trustworthy—and as a man, upright, honest and guileless. He earned for himself as he richly deserved, the appellation of "An honest man." Peace be to his memory.

A FALSE REPORT.

It is rarely necessary for us to occupy our space in vindicating our own character from any aspersion, but more especially from the aspersion of doing any thing that has the appearance of disloyalty. We are not behind any of our fellow countrymen in our devotion to the crown of Britain, and to our country's cause. But inasmuch as we have been asked to give a reason for the removal of one of our hands, just at the time that the volunteers were called out, and as the removal was attributed to our turning him off because he went to drill, we deem it due to ourselves to say that the whole report is without foundation. On the morning the telegram came ordering the volunteers to be ready at 24 hours notice, one of our hands immediately stopped work and at once demanded a settlement. We remonstrated and advised him to work until further orders would necessitate the step he was taking, to which he answered that 24 hours were few enough to settle his business, and it was with flattery we got him to work off the paper, or the last part of it. He again demanded a settlement, which was complied with, when he put on his coat and left. Shortly after we engaged another hand in his place. When he came to his senses next morning he desired to go to work again, but we had a man in his place—and because of this he reported we had dismissed him for going to drill. The public will thus see the grounds for the report. The facts being that he demanded a settlement, and the balance due him, and left work of his own accord—and in a great degree contrary to our wishes, as our business demanded the presence of at least our usual number of workmen. We give the above facts in order to set ourselves right with the public, although the groundless reports of an unprincipled fellow-mortal could do us no real injury, but certainly would not make us less loyal or more patriotic than we have heretofore been.

We had determined to give ourselves or our readers no trouble about the report, but being interrogated by several parties we trust this will not be considered out of place.

Calumny Corrected.

It will be remembered by our readers that a few weeks ago we gave an extract from the Montreal Witness, but emanating from the Le Canada, in reference to some alleged ill treatment of a Catholic at Bobcaygeon. The Lindsay Post informs its readers that the Catholic referred to, whose name is Powers, and who lives in the neighborhood of Lindsay, where Mr. Boyd of Bobcaygeon aided him in obtaining a farm as we are informed, called on him (Ed. Post) and requested him to say that he parted with Mr. Boyd on the best of terms; that during the period he was with him, extending over a period of several years, his country or creed did not militate against his comfort or interest, and that the people of Bobcaygeon never treated him otherwise than in a kindly and neighborly manner—nor has any one heard of such a thing. Thus the matter is set at rest by the party said to be ill-used. As we before remarked the whole affair was a falsehood, concocted by some unprincipled fellow who thought thereby to bring disgrace on a gentleman of honor and integrity, but especially for the purpose of representing protestantism in the worst light. Every friend of his country, and of religious freedom, should frown down such disgraceful attempts to array creed against creed, and thus destroy the harmony that otherwise might exist among differing sects.

Butter Boat.

Our butchers have been catering for the public and have been successful as far as sale is concerned.

Yesterday, John Walton, Esq., of Smith, took to our cattle market fifty animals—beeves, sheep and, two heifers—that will compare favorably with anything in the province. Mr. Walton has long been noted for fine animals, but for size and quality combined these were believed to surpass anything ever offered in our market. The four animals were purchased by LePlante and Winch; one of them weighed 1500 lbs., and unitedly the four weighed 5600 lbs.

Mr. Jas. Howden, Butcher, has, of his own feeding, four animals of superior quality, and whose weights unitedly exceed those fed by Mr. Walton, by eleven pounds. Their weights are: 1st. Four year old heifer, 1,171 lbs.; 2d. Five year old steer, 1,560 lbs.; 3rd. Four year old steer, 1,440 lbs.; 4th. Aged beast, 1,520 lbs. Total, 5,611 lbs.

Mr. Heather, another of our butchers, has a beef that weighs 1,600 lbs., a little over the weight of any of the above. Mr. Heather has also provided a number of fat sheep, fed by Adam Hall, Esq., of Smith, and of fine quality. It will thus be seen that 12,611 lbs. of meat, besides large quantities of mutton, have been provided for the Easter market, and if after the abstinence of Lent, we do not get satiated, it will be our own, not the fault of our enterprising butchers.

Storm and the Fenian Myth.

During the thunder storm of last Tuesday night, one of the "sons of toil," residing in an adjacent township, fatigued by the labors of the day, and with a conscience void of offence, retired to rest a little after ten o'clock, but was soon afterwards awakened by an unusually loud peal which shook the place, and jumping up exclaimed—the Fenians!! the Fenians!! In a moment he conjured his excited imagination all the horrors of an invasion, and thought the house was surrounded by ruthless hordes of the marauders. Although he soon became conscious of his mistake, yet so deep were the impressions, that he was unable to get reconciled with morpheus during the remainder of the night, and up to a late date shows unmistakeable signs of excited feeling.

Oil! Oil!

A meeting has been held at Sheriff's Corners for the purpose of forming a company to prospect for oil, and at the meeting it was agreed to organize a Joint Stock Company for the purpose of boring a test well in the neighbourhood of the Hunter farm. Prospects of a company being formed are good.

The Lecture To-Night.

I. O'Beirne, Esq., Local Superintendent for the Town, will deliver the customary Annual Lecture in the school building this evening. Subject:—"Hints to Parents, Teacher and Pupils." The lecture will commence at 8 o'clock p. m. We hope there will be a good audience.

Gold.

The price of gold in New York has been steadily declining; it is now 125½. It is beginning to be generally feared that a collapse is at hand. There is a general depression of business, real estate is going down, rents are becoming fabulous, and the greatest apprehensions are current that a panic is near.

Temperance.

We are requested to state that there will be a public meeting in the Templars Hall, Scott's Block, on next Thursday evening, at half-past seven o'clock, p. m. Rev Mr. Scott, of Keene and others are expected to be present and address the meeting. The Good Templars extend an invitation to all.

Literary Club.

This evening the officers for the ensuing year will be nominated. A full attendance of the members is desirable. Meeting at the usual hour.

Dr. Kingsid, we are glad to learn, has been appointed by the Government Surgeon of this Post. Volunteers will now have a Surgeon of their own to attend to their wants. The Doctor's duties extend to all Volunteers under arms here.

CORRECTION.—In our last Report of Town Council proceedings, we made an error in copying from the minutes the name of Mrs. Finley instead of Mrs. Hurley, as it should have been. We have made the correction as soon as we discovered the error.

DEPOSITS IN CANADIAN BANKS.—The Trade Review says that the deposits in our banks have been for some time steadily increasing, and that they now amount to more than the capital of the whole banking system. These deposits are partly from the South American States placed here on the breaking out of the war, and not yet drawn, and they amount from two to four millions. The settlers who have saved money and deposited it have now in the banks, according to the same authority, thirty millions. Capitalists, also, have large sums in the banks to be invested. The permanent deposits amount to twelve millions.

The Albany Evening Journal, the organ of Mr. Seward, Secretary of State, thus speaks of the Fenian movement: "It is time for our fellow-citizens to understand that while such silly coalitions and extravagant threats as have heretofore distinguished the Fenian movement, can only be regarded with amusement, or contempt, they will not be permitted to disturb the honorable relations of this Government with its neighbors by violations of neutrality, the only result of which would be to make that infamous which is now ridiculous."

The Perth Standard says that a volunteer, named Tucker, of Captain Poole's Company, Carleton Place, refused to obey orders, recently. He was arrested by order of the Brigade Major; and has been sent to Montreal, there to be tried by a Court-Martial. A few month's confinement, and a few dozen well laid on, will perhaps change the young Finnegan's ideas of military discipline.

BELLEVILLE COUNTERFEITERS.—The trial of these noted characters has lately taken place. Rayaard Quackenbush, one of the party, died in Jail the day before the trial of his confederates. Of the others, one has been sent to Penitentiary for 3 years, the other two for 2 years. The gang had existed for over 30 years.

THE COST OF THE UNION AT ANY TERMS.—It is stated officially that 70,000 men are employed in keeping the South in subjection.

TOWN COUNCIL.

MONDAY, March 26th, 1866.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Present—His worship the Mayor, and Messrs Burnham, Ewing, Stevenson, Toole, Wrighton, Hamilton, Millar, Ormond, Doherty, Chamberlain and Wilson.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication from the County Clerk to the Town Clerk was read, informing him that the Commissioner of Crown Lands had required the $3000 promised by the Council and Town of Peterborough to be deposited in the Bank, and further that no more work should be done till the said sum was so deposited. The communication was referred to the Finance Committee.

Petitions from John Wilson and Benjamin Reynolds were read, asking the Council to allow them to sell liquors, as they had no other way of obtaining a livelihood.

The Committee on Fire stated that they were not ready to report, as they have it in contemplation to introduce a By-law to remedy the evil complained of.

The Committee appointed to Superintend the letting of the Market Tolls, reported that they had given them to James Henry, his offer, ($342,) being the highest.

A report from the Committee on Charities was read, recommending the appropriation of $100 to the ladies of the Protestant Home, with the understanding that further appropriations by the Committee for the present should cease, considering it necessary for the managers of the Home to care for all classes of the community without distinction as to religion. The report was received.

A report from the License Committee was received, stating that all licenses allowed by statute had been granted; but also stating that if—when the Assessors make their returns—another license can be granted they recommend that it be done.

An account for wood for charitable purposes was presented and ordered to be paid.

Mr. Ewing introduced a health By-law, which passed all the readings.

On motion of Mr. Toole, Messrs. Chamberlain, Hamilton, Doherty, and the Mayor, were appointed a special Committe to see what sum can be appropiated to building a Drill Shed, jointly with the County Council, and also to ascertain whether the government will contribute jointly with the above Councils.

A petition from Wm. G. Greer was read, stating that he had taken the premises of George McCombs and had requisite accomodation for a tavern, was ready to comply with all necessary conditions and praying for a license to keep a tavern.

A communication from William Croft was also read, informing the Council that he had paid $50 last year for a license which he never received, and asking that the above be paid him back.

A petition from John Douglass was also read, complaining that the shanty of Mrs. Plunket was on the street adjoining a lot of his on Murray Street, upon which he was going to build, and praying the Council would order the shanty to be removed.

The matter was referred to Committee on Streets and Bridges.

On motion of Mr. Toole, the chief Constable was ordered to construct a sidewalk on the west side of George Street between Mr. Stevenson's store and Mr. William's.

Mr Stevenson moved that the petition of J. Wilson and Benjamin Reynolds be referred to the License committee, with a view to ascertain if any relief can be granted to the Petitions.

Mr. Toole moved in amendment that Messrs. Chamberlain, Hamilton, Stevenson, and Doherty, be a committee to whom the petitions of Reynolds and Wilson should be referred.

The amendment was lost.

The original motion was also lost.

Several petitions were allowed to remain on the table.

The Council adjourned for two weeks.

By request of the friends of the deceased referred to in the annexed letter, we publish it, in order to remove certain rumors that have been afloat of Fenians having had something to do with the death of the unfortunate man. The letter clears the whole matter:

CHERRY TREE, Venango Co, Penn., March 17th, 1866.

MR. JOHN G. WIER,—

DEAR SIR:—By request of Mrs James Wier we take this opportunity to narrate the dreadful accident of the 17th. Jas. Wier left his dwelling and went to the steam mill run by him and his partner John F. Alcorn. A few minutes after we arrived at said mill, just in time to witness the most dreadful scene. We had just commenced to saw when the boiler exploded, and in one instant Jas. Wier was numbered with the dead. At half past twelve o'clock the boiler bursted, and Wier was blown against the side of the mill and scalded badly; both of his legs were broken and his thumb and fore-finger of one hand blown off. He never uttered a word—his death was instant. We ran to him as soon as possible but could be of no use, as he breathed but two or three times after we reached him. No cause can be given for the accident, as the steam was not as heavy as it had been many a time before. His body was taken to the house and properly cared for, and all the respect paid to his family that could have been had they been at home and among his friends. Mr. Wier's partner was absent from the mill and escaped the horrible accident. The engineer was also killed, and one other man badly scalded. Mr. Wier was well respected by his neighbors, and loved by his hands. We remain,

Very truly yours,
JAS. MCCURDY, Head Sawyer,
A. W. ALCORN, Assistant.

P. S.—Mr. Wier was in good health and spirits, and stood beside me and told me he thought we would have a good afternoon's run I told him I thought we would. Those were the last words he ever uttered, and in one minute he was in eternity. JAS. MCCURDY.

(For the Examiner.)

The examination of School Section No. 1 in the Township of North Monaghan, taught by Miss Greenlow, came off on Friday, the 16th instant. There was a goodly number of parents of the pupils, and visitors present, who appeared to take a deep interest in the school and in the proceedings generally. The scholars were examined in reading, writing, English grammar, geography, English history and arithmetic by the teacher. In reading the pupils exhibited marked proficiency considering the very short time Miss Greenlow has been in the section, and the answering, spelling and definitions given by them showed that great care had been taken in their training. The writings were arranged so that a copy of last quarter's penmanship was pasted to a copy of the quarter now ending, and the parents and friends were enabled to obtain, at a glance, an idea of the progress of each pupil. The geography class which has been commenced since January, with the exception of a few pupils, acquitted itself well, the training being evidently intellectual. The solutions in arithmetic were given on the blackboard, the questions being proposed by the teacher, and also by Mr. Stratton, who shortly assumes the duty of Local Superintendent for North Monaghan, &c., and the results were readily and correctly obtained. At the close of these exercises several of the pupils read short compositions, which were creditable to them, as all the children were very young.

Those present expressed themselves highly gratified with the state of the School, and the progress that had been made by the pupils, considering that for the short period the teacher has been over the School, the results are most satisfactory. Several parents expressed their high appreciation of Miss Greenlow's labors, and, on motion of Geo. Tully, Esq., unanimously voted a recess of two days, to be taken whenever it would best suit the teacher's convenience. I may also add the School (45 in attendance) was most orderly during the whole day, the pupils delighting in adding to the general harmony by their quiet and orderly conduct.

A PARENT.

North Monaghan, March 27th, 1866.

THE CANADIAN VOLUNTEERS.

The Fenian excitement has demonstrated that Canada is abundantly supplied with good fighting material, and the response to the recent call for volunteers, shows that it comes forward with the most creditable alacrity to the public defence. The great uprising in the North to put down rebellion, was not more hearty and enthusiastic than the rush to arms in the Provinces. To say these volunteers would not give a good account of themselves, if occasion presented or required, would be to deny the bravery of the Anglo-Saxon race. During our own troubles the Canadians crossed the border to join our army, and they fought the foe as well as the best. During all the alarms and excitement which have recently occurred on the frontier, we have not heard of a single instance of cowardice among the volunteers. To all intents and purposes, the alarm at Prescott on Friday, 16th, was as much a test of courage as could have been instituted by the actual presence of the enemy; yet the men in an incredibly short space of time were assembled at the rendezvous, formed in a line and ready to meet and repel the foe. The consternation among the populace, and the shrieks of women and children, had no effect upon them. In this connection we will say, though we may not be credited with sincerity, that this display of courage by the Canadian volunteers affords us the greatest satisfaction and pleasure, for we have always contended that courage and manly qualities were not confined to a particular portion of the human race, but that liberty, intelligence, free institutions and discipline will make good soldiers anywhere. Canada need have no fears with such defenders.—Ogdensburgh Journal.

PRICES IN ENGLAND IN 1865.—Wheat in advancing. It was 38s. 5d. a quarter in the last three months of 1864, and 44s. 10d. a quarter in the last three months of 1865. Beef by the carcase, in London, was on an average 5¾d. per pound; about ½d. below the price of the corresponding season of 1864, and a half-penny per pound dearer than it was in the autumn of 1863. The mean of the quoted prices of beef ranged from 4¾d. to 7d. a pound; mutton from 5½d. to 8¼d. in three months. The average price of mutton in the last three autumns was 6d., 6¼d. and 6¾d. a pound. The rise in the price of beef was 10 per cent., of mutton 15 per cent. in two years. The best potatoes sold at from 3s. to 4s. 6d. per 112 pounds, and were much lower than in 1854.

APPREHENSIONS OF THE YELLOW FEVER IN THE UNITED STATES.—Dr. Thomas Sims, late Surgeon of Volunteers and former Medical Director of the Third Army corps, has been appointed Special Health Officer for the States of South Carolina and Georgia, on the recommendation of General Sickles, and starts for Charleston on Saturday, with full powers to call upon all military and naval authorities for necessary co-operation or assistance. His hurried departure gives color to the rumors of yellow fever at Key West, which were discredited because it had never been known to appear so early in any former season. The closest observers among medical men unite in predicting its early appearance this year, and even now its ravages may have commenced.

A truly loyal Resolution was passed on Monday night by the St. Patrick's Society of Kingston, to which we refer our readers. It is so much the interest of the Irish Roman Catholics of Canada to support the Government, that the utmost reliance may be placed upon their fealty at the present moment. The 'argumentum ad hominem,' is after all the touchstone of man's loyalty. Governed as they are, the Queen has not in all her vast Dominions more loyal subjects than her Irish Roman Catholic Subjects in Canada.—British Whig.

THE AWARDS.—The Arbitrators between the Government and the Public Buildings' contractors, have awarded the sum of $200,000 as the balance due to Jones, Haycock & Co. It will be recollected that the commission appointed by Mr. Sandfield Macdonald's Government made it out that this firm had overdrawn its account to the extent of $60,000. There is a wide difference between the two awards.

THE CHOLERA AT MOBILE.—Advices from Montgomery, Alabama, dated on the 16th inst., have been received in Washington, by Dr. C. W. Homer, Chief Medical Officer of the Freedmen's Bureau, informing him that a report was in circulation there that the cholera had made its appearance at Mobile, Ala., although the report was not traced to any reliable source.

THE PETITION IN FAVOR OF IRELAND.—It was announced in all the churches of Toronto on last Sunday by His Lordship and clergy, that a petition was being prepared, to be sent to the Imperial Parliament of England, praying that august body to grant to Ireland the same justice that Canada desires, to make the people contented and prosperous, viz:—1. Local Legislation, 2. Free Church, 3. Free Education, 4. Justice to Tenants.

A trial of speed and endurance between an Arab and an English thorough-bred horse took place on the 20th ultimo, between Cairo and Suez. The Arab reached Suez, a distance of ninety miles, in seven hours, fifty-six minutes, thirty seconds; while his competitor broke down at the seventy-third mile.

The Messrs. Molson of Montreal have turned their whiskey distillery into a sugar refinery.—It is now in working order. The firm could not stand competition with Upper Canada and say that their loss would have been about $300,000 per annum had they continued.

THE SCHOOL LAW.—We notice that the Township Council of Elizabethtown has agreed to petition the Legislature against the proposed alterations in the School law.

The Queen's Speech was forwarded to Paris in eleven minutes by five wires, and appeared in all the evening papers shortly afterwards.

The Rev. J. Macfarlane, D. D., moderator of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, died on the 6th.

A free trade league is being organized in Montreal, with branches throughout the province.

Earl Russell, since he became Premier, has laid aside the razor and allowed his beard to grow.

The Poet Laureate is busy upon another poem of considerable length and of much importance.

The Volunteers of Great Britain amount to 177,000 men, a gain of 7,000 men during the past year.

The French soldiers are accused of eating up all the rats in Vera Cruz.

The State of Chili sent to England last year 47,000 tons of copper.

The Pope will be seventy-four years old on the 13th of May next.

In England alone, eighty one children are born every hour.

There are about 20,000 military in Ireland at present.

THE FENIANS.

From the London Times, March 9.

We used to be told in our nurseries that a bad officer, heading his men to a charge, called out, "Go on;" a good officer, "Come on." The language of the Irish People is, perhaps unavoidably, "Go on." Every body is urged to throw himself into Ireland, and, no doubt, some do, but the great majority remonstrate, and pay what may be called ship-money. Most are content with rather visionary projects, instead of things they might at least try. They have absolutely given up all thought of Canada, on the ground that it is only Irish soil they want. So, at least, we read in the Irish People. It has been proposed that all the enrolled Fenians, numbering about 400,000, shall abstain from the use of British articles to the extent of £4 a year, which will be equivalent, they reckon, to the loss of £1,600,000 to British manufacturers. It is forgotten, however, that the American Custom House would have to bear some of the loss, and that articles of clothing constitute a large and least dispensable part of the British imports. Have the Fenians taken a hint from the Sans Culottes? The Irish have money enough in America. This is not their want. No Church is so prosperous there as the Catholic, nor the Irish People. It has 2,000 churches, with a vast number of large schools, asylums, orphanages, and hospitals, with 3,000 beds. If money could do the work, Ireland would soon be theirs. But while they are talking out there, they inform their American readers that everything is ready for action to Ireland. Dublin, they say, is one magazine. All the ports are supplied. The constabulary is Irish, and, as they declare, neuter; the militia are Fenians to a man. There is drilling on every hillside. The Fenian oath is administered under the shadow of the Horse Guards; not that it is necessary, for every Irishman is a Fenian already. If he repents and wishes to flee—he must fly—to America. This is said, no doubt, to account for the increasing immigration from Ireland. Indeed, every sensible Irishman sees that, of the two evils, fighting a desperate battle in Ireland is worse than having to pay a dollar a month in America.

Mr. O'Mahony and Mr Stephens are the twin heads of the movement, and their claims appear to be no longer disputed. They were members of Smith O'Brien's staff, and upon his disconsolate retook themselves to Paris where they spent some years. The story is told, we presume, by Mr. O'Mahony himself, for the Irish People is his organ, and bears his name and superscription. Stephens lodged in an attic in the Quartier Latin, ill-clothed, ill-fed and going out only at nightfall. He joined a Republican club of the most thorough-going character he could find, one that visited treachery and even simple desertion with what is significantly called "summary chastisement." He did this for the double purpose of doing a little work of the sort he liked, whether on French or Irish soil, and of learning the arts of secret organization and terrorism. He wanted to see how men could be enrolled and drilled for action, and made to render implicit obedience to a secret authority. All went on well, and the final scene of action promised to be transferred from Paris to Dublin, when one fine day Louis Napoleon turned the tables on them, and the two arch-Republicans had to bolt for their lives. This little story accounts for the dislike and even contempt which the Fenians feel for the French nation, and which may be traced even in a Fenian account of the Norman Conquest and the foundation of our old Norman families. Since then the interesting couple have devoted themselves to Ireland. With the only five franc piece Mr. Stephens ever saved out of vulgar industry, he and his companion tossed till two worthies—heads for Ireland, tails for America, Stephens won, and since that has walked through every village and hamlet in Ireland, taking notes, winning pledges, and communicating everywhere the design in progress. According to the Irish People, he is a man made for persuasion and command; with such a figure, such a bearing, such small, bright eyes, such a forehead, such arms, hands, and feet, such curly hair, such a mouth, and such teeth as to be positively irresistible. He can talk and write in all languages fluently and gracefully, particularly in Irish. He is indefatigable, can subsist on nothing, sleep on straw, and remember everybody he ever saw or heard of. His power of disguise is magical. The police will never catch him. They cannot even prevent him from carrying on his part of the business, for the Irish People tells us he is at his post, and presides over the Fenian administration as usual.

FENIANISM IN ROME.

(Rome Correspondence of the London Times.)

A highly respectable Irish ecclesiastic had heard of the existence of this spirit in the Irish College, but knew nothing from his own observation; it might be so, nay, was likely, and that young men had expressed themselves warmly. He had heard too, of an effort being made to create an impression on the mind of the Pope, "but they'll get nothing by it," he added; "His Holiness cann t depart from a principle he has once laid down and made known." Two years have elapsed since the American Bishops, of whom there are about thirty-five, wrote—that is to say, a few of them—to Rome for instructions how to act toward the secret then rising into existence. The answer, as might have been expected, directed that it should be discountenanced. Since then only four of the Roman Catholic Bishops in the United States, and they are Irishmen, have openly protested against Fenianism. They are the Archbishop of St. Louis; the Bishop of Philadelphia, educated in the Propaganda; the Bishop of Chicago, educated at Maynooth; and another whose name I have not. The other Bishops, without expressing any sympathy with it, have permitted the epidemic to spread. As to the feeling and action of His Holiness, there can be no doubt. A friend of mine, who lately had the honor of an audience, tells me that he spoke to the Pope of the disorders which he himself had witnessed in Ireland, for which His Holiness expressed great concern, and was gratified at hearing that his communications to Archbishop Cullen had been received with so much satisfaction by all men of order and piety. There are several Irish families at present in Rome, Roman Catholics, and of considerable social position, but all appeared and were greatly relieved at the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act. Of Irish ecclesiastics of high rank, Dr. Kirby, the Rector of the Irish College, and Monsignori Quin and Murray, who leave shortly for America, in the strongest terms denounce the movement. Even here, therefore, the purely Irish element, especially if it be of any social consideration and if ecclesiastical, reprobates a movement opposed to all laws, human and divine.

GEN. SWEENEY'S ARMY.

(From the Globe.)

The New York World has, it seems, assumed the character of Fenian organ. It had the other day an article describing the Fenian "army of invasion," in which, besides some details about generals, colonels and lieutenants, was a professed statement of the force at Gen Sweeney's command. Statement we quote:

New York (State and city)	infantry	3,600
" "	cavalry	2,200
" "	artillery	600
Massachusetts, all arms		3,500
New Hampshire, all arms		1,500
Vermont, all arms		1,200
Connecticut, all arms		2,000
Maine, all arms		1,000
Pennsylvania, all arms		4,000
New Jersey, all arms		2,000
Illinois, all arms		5,000
Missouri, all arms		4,000
Virginia, all arms		800
Michigan, all arms		2,400
Maryland (Baltimore)	infantry	1,200
Louisiana (New Orleans)	infantry	1,000
Georgia (Savannah)	infantry	800
South Carolina (Charleston)	infantry	1,000
Rhode Island, artillery		400
Ohio, infantry		3,000
Indiana, all arms		2,500
Tennessee, all arms		1,500
Kentucky, infantry and cavalry		2,000
Wisconsin, all arms		2,000
Iowa, all arms		1,000
California, all arms		2,000
Total strength of Sweeney's force, organized into regiments and battalions, to date		53,000

This is a very poor story. The World will never do for a Fenian Organ if it can only find 50,000 Fenian soldiers, after hunting from Maine to South Carolina and California. True, it is boasted that this force will be doubled shortly; but, to come up to the mark, the World must multiply by ten instead of two. We recollect that the N. Y. Herald correspondent here managed, some time ago, to find more Fenians in Canada alone than the World finds in the whole United States. The Herald man found as many of those dreadful creatures in a small town or village in this country as the World in some cases finds in a whole State. The World must try again.

IRELAND.

New Feature in the Fenian Bonds—Another Council Surprised the Session—Further Reinforcement of Troops, &c.

(Dublin Correspondence London Times.)

During the stay of the Commander-in-Chief, considerable friendly intercourse took place between her officers and the residents of Kingston. On more than one occasion, in conversation, the American visitors on record the opinion that the Irish people who had taken up with Fenianism had been rarely humbugged. I have just learned a fact, on undoubted authority, which shows to what a daring extent the Fenian leaders are carrying the imposture. A number of bonds have arrived in the city of Waterford, from New York, beautifully executed in the form of bank notes, signed by O'Mahony and two others. They are for sums varying from £20 to £50, bearing eight per cent interest, to be paid when the Irish republic is established, with this remarkable peculiarity—they are bonds on the Carraghmore estate. It is calculated, no doubt, that some of Lord Waterford's tenants will cash these bonds, believing that they will thereby secure their farms and the farms of their neighbors rent free in perpetuity. There is reason to believe that similar bonds upon Irish estates have arrived in other parts of the country.

Yesterday evening, about eight o'clock, the police, in consequence of information received, arrested twenty-seven persons at the public house No. 7, Cork Hill, not seven perches from Dublin Castle, and not double that distance from the head police office.

Among those on the premises at the time, and who were taken into custody, were John Slattery and Thomas Slattery, the proprietors of the establishment, and William Slattery, their brother. Several of those arrested were in the taproom at the time of the entrance of the police, and were engaged playing cards, while others were in front of the shop counter. Some resistance, or rather an attempt to escape, was made on the part of one or two of the prisoners, but without success. The majority of the prisoners are permanent residents of the city, but a number of them are stated to have arrived here recently from Manchester. There is one soldier among the number, belonging to the Second battalion of the Sixteenth Rifles. His name is Samuel McCann, a native of Manchester, James Murphy, alias McCabe, another of the prisoners, is stated to be a deserter from the Tenth Hussars. The others are nearly all laborers and artisans employed in various parts of the city. The prisoners were taken to Chancery Lane station.

At Boyle, on Saturday night, a party under the direction of Sub-Inspector Lynch proceeded to the dwelling of a man named Travers, about one mile from the town, and found snugly concealed in the back of a ditch the following warlike articles, in excellent order—viz., five pistols; a like number of powder flasks, full of fine powder; a large quantity of bullets, and also of detonating caps, together with two shot pouches. Travers was instantly arrested, and, after information duly sworn, fully committed for trial at the present assizes.

The Tamar troop ship arrived alongside the Carlisle pier at Kingston, at ten yesterday morning, having on board the Seventy-fifth (Stirlingshire) regiment, from Gosport, Portsmouth and Exmouth, for Dublin, in command of Colonel E. P. Gordon.

The Asphard, transport, is expected at Kingston, from Woolwich Arsenal, with one hundred and thirty tons of war material for Dublin; ninety tons of gunpowder, and a large amount of other similar stores being among those shipped. The ship Planet, with army stores, is also expected, having left Woolwich on Saturday for Kingston or Dublin.

THE ARSENALS.

In the House of Commons, on the 7th inst. Major Dickinson, on behalf of the honorable member for Abingdon (Colonel Lindsay), gave notice that his honorable and gallant friend would to-morrow call the attention of the Secretary of State for War to the unprotected and insecure condition in which many thousand stands of government arms now in the hands of the volunteers are placed.

(From the Cork Advertiser, March 8.)

ALARM IN DUBLIN.

The ladies of Dublin were considerably frightened by a regular cannonade that took place on Saturday morning, at daybreak. Numbers of them rose and dressed two hours earlier than they would, and began to think of securing their valuables, &c.—Considerable relief was felt at finding that it was not that a fleet of Fenian privateers was bombarding Kingston, but only the Pigeon House Fort saluting the new American frigate with twenty one guns, and being saluted again in return.

ARRESTS—THE SEARCH FOR STEPHENS.

The Irish Police continued to carry into effect with great vigour the extraordinary powers given by the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act. An important arrest had been made at Strabane in the person of Mr. Underwood, a barrister, well known in connection with the Irish national movement. It was rumored that Stephens had been harboured at the house of Mr.

GREAT CONDITION MEDICINE.

As a Condition Medicine for horses "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy" has no equal. Its effects in this respect are astonishing; many horses were supposed to be broken down and almost worthless, have by the use of a few packages been restored to a healthy and sound condition, all traces of the disease having been completely removed, and have been sold for from $20 to $75 more than they would previously have brought; when you want a horse medicine get "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy," and we know you will be perfectly satisfied with the result.

Remember the name, And see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY
IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

PRESCOTT, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

None genuine unless signed, I. Butts, on the Wrapper. Prepared by Seth W. Fowle & Co., Boston, and for sale by all dealers in medicines.

Among the most important of modern Medical discoveries, stands the Canadian Pain Destroyer.

As a Family Medicine, it is well and favorably known, relieving thousands from pain in the Side, Back and Head; Colicks; Colds; Sore Throat, Sprains, Bruises, Cramps in the Stomach, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Bowel Complaints, Burns, Scalds, Frostbites, &c. &c. The Canadian Pain Destroyer has now been before the Public for a length of time, and wherever used is well liked, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction, where the Directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

We speak from experience in this matter, having tested it, thoroughly, and therefore those who are suffering from any of the complaints for which it is recommended may depend upon its being a Sovereign Remedy.

The astonishing efficacy of the Canadian Pain Destroyer, in curing the diseases for which it is recommended, and its wonderful success in subduing the tortuing pains of Rheumatism, and in relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of remedies for these complaints. Orders are coming in from Medicine Dealers, in all parts of the Country for further supplies, and each testifying as to the universal satisfaction it gives.

The Canadian Pain destroyer never fails to give immediate relief. All Medicine dealers keep it. Physicians order and use it; and no family will be without it after once trying it. Price only Twenty-five cents per Bottle.

Selected and Original Poetry.
Correspondence.
Commercial Reviews.
Home and other Market Reports.

And during the Session of the Legislature,

A Concise Summary of Parliamentary Proceedings, and
The Speeches of Prominent Politicians.

In a word, no pains or expense will be spared to make The Post a first class weekly journal, worthy of British America, and a faithful exponent of public opinion,—alike welcome to the politician and the general reader.

In its political character, The Post will be firm in its adhesion to the Liberal cause,—knowing neither sect, nationality, nor sectional prejudices. It will seek to perpetuate the happy connexion subsisting between British America and Great Britain, and to that end will advocate the great measure now under discussion for the Confederation of all British America under one government as being best calculated to cement the Empire, and to promote the happiness of these provinces, develop their vast internal resources and open up new channels of commerce.

Especial efforts will be made to place before the public, reliable information as to the character, resources, and capabilities of the great, but comparatively unknown, regions of the valley of the Ottawa—its numerous tributaries and new settlements.

☞ Friends at a distance who will send in the names of five subscribers (with the cash) will be entitled to a copy of the paper for a year gratis, and all others are respectfully invited to send in lists of reliable persons who may be willing to become subscribers on the credit terms.

A SEWING MACHINE, WORTH $40,

Will be given as a bonus to the lady or gentleman sending the largest list of prepaid subscribers (not less than 100) before the 1st of Jan., 1867.

FINKLE & LYON

SEWING MACHINE CO.

OFFICE 521 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

GUARANTEE.—After a fair trial, if any purchaser does not regard the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine as superior to any machine in market, he can return it and have his money. It has taken many of the highest prizes.—is less complicated than any other first class machine,—does a wider range of work without changing,—requires no taking apart to clean or oil, and no "lessons" to set needle, regulate tension, or operate machine.

N. B. Any Clergyman sending us two orders for Machines, shall receive one for himself as a present. The same proposition is extended to Professors and Teachers.

We have now completed our New Manufactory at a cost of some $200,000, including New Patents and important improvements; and the object of the above proposition is to secure the immediate introduction of our improved machine into every town in the United States without incurring the great expense of a travelling agent.

This proposition cannot avail in towns occupied by our own agents.

Please send for descriptive Catalogue, with samples of sewing.

GRAHAM & STRATTON

Peterboro, January, 1866.

How I Ought to be Married.

"Why, be funny, Sal. I've got a rib and a baby." Shadows departed! —oyster stews, brandy juleps, cigar boxes, bootjacks, shirt-bosomed shirt buttons, whist and tambourines, galoops, long stockings, juvenile dramas. Shadows present—hoopskirts, handkerchiefs, watch chains, candles, paregoric, bird syrup, sore throats, and doctor bills. Shadows future—more nine pound babies, more bird syrup, etc., etc., I'll just tell you how I got caught.

I was always the dreadest, ten cantered bashful fellu you ever did many it was kinder in my line to be taken with the shakes every time I saw a pretty girl approach me, and I'd cross the street any time rather than face one. Tonga's heroism I dubbed the critters' for I shot behind a fence looking through a knot-hole, I couldn't look long enough.

Well my sister Lib gave a party one night and I stayed away from home because I was to bashful to face the music. I hung around the house, whistling "Old Dan Tuckey," dancing to keep my feet warm, and watching the hands bob up and down behind the window curtains, and wishing the thundering party would break up so I could get to my room. I smoked a bunch of cigars and as it was getting late and very uncomfortable. I concluded to skin up to the door post. No sooner said than done, and I quickly found myself snug in bed.

"Now," says I, to I bet rip! dance till her wind gives out! and cuddling under quilts, Morpheus grabbed me.

I was dreaming of soft shell crabs and stewed tripe, and having a good time, when somebody knocked at the door and waked me up.

Rapped again and I laid low.

Rap, rap, rap!

Then I heard a whispering, and I knew there was a whole raft of girls outside.

Rap, rap!

Then Lib sings out!

Jack, are you in there?

Yes, says I.

Then came a roar of laughter.

Let me in says she.

I won't, says I.

Are you in bed? says she.

I am, says I.

Get up, says she

I won't, says I.

Then came another laugh. By thunder! I began to get riled.

Get out you petticoated scarecrows! I cried, can't you get a beau without hauling a fellow out of bed? I won't go home with you, so clear out!

Then th owing a boot at the door I felt better. But presently, oh, moral buttons! I heard a still small voice, much like Lib's and I said:

Jack you'll have to get up, for all the girls things are in there.

Oh what a pickle I think of me in bed, all covered with shawls, muffs, bonnets and cloaks, and twenty girls out side waiting to get in! If I had stopped to think I would have fainted on the spot. As it was I rolled out among the bonnet wire and rib-bon in a hurry.

Smash went the millinery in every direction.

I had to dress in the dark—for there was a crack in the door, and girls will peep—and the I tumbled about was death to straw hats. The critical moment came. I opened the door, and found myself among the women.

Oh, my leghorn cries one; my dear darling velvet, cries another; and they pitched in—they pulled me this way and that, and boxed my ears, and one bright eyed little piece—Sal——her name was—put her arms around my neck, and kissed me right on my lips. Human nature could not stand that, and I gave her as good she sent.—It was the first time I ever got a taste and it was powerful good. I believe I could have kissed her from Julius Cæsar to the Fourth of July.

Jack, says she, we are sorry to disturb you but won't you see me home?

Yes, says I, I will.

I did do it and had another smack at the gate.

After that we took a turtle doving after each other, and both of us sighing like a barrel of cider when we are away from each other.

Twas at the close of a glorious summer day—the sun was setting behind a distant bogpen—the chickens were going to roost—the bullfrogs were commencing their evening song—the polywags in their last wiggle before retiring for the evening—and Sal and I sat on an antiquated black log, listening to the music of nature, such as tree toads, grunting pigs, and now and then the mellow music of Bill Jone's jackass, wafted to our ears by the gentle breeze that sighed among the mullen stalks; and came heavily laden with the delicious odors of dung hills and pigsties. The last lingering rays of the setting sun, glancing from the bright buttons of a solitary horseman, alone throuble a knot hole in the bogpen full in Sal's face dying her hair with an orange peel hue, and showing off my threadbare coat to bad advantage. One of my arms was around Sal's waist, my hand resting on the small of her back—she was toying with my auburn lock of jet black hue; she was almost gone and I was ditto. She looked like a grasshopper dying with the hiccups, and I felt like a mad turtle choked with a codfish ball.

Sal, says I, in a voice as musical as the notes of a dying swan, will you have me.

She turned her eyes heavenward clasped me by the hand, had an attack of heaves and blind staggers, and with a sigh that drew her shoe strings to her palate, said:

Yes.

She gave clear out then, and squatted in my lap.

Well to make a long story short, she got the dry, and we practiced every night for four weeks how we would walk into the room to be married, till we got so as we could walk as graceful as a couple of Muscovite ducks.

The night the company and minister came, the signal was given, and arm in arm we marched through the crowded hall.—We were just entering the parlor door when down I went kerslap on the oilcloth, pulling Sal after me. Some cursed fellow had dropped a banana skin on the floor, and it floored me. It split an awful hole in my cassimere right under my coat tail.

It was too late to back out, so clapping my hand over it, we marched in and were spliced and takind seat I watched the hasting of the bride operation. My groomsman was a little tight, and he kissed her till I jumped up to take a slice, when, oh, horror! a little six year old imp had crawled behind me, and pulling my shirt through the hole in my pants, had pinned it to the chair, and in jumping up, I displayed to the admiring gaze of the astonished multitude a trifle more white muslin than was pleasant. The women giggled, the men roared, and I got mad, but was finally put to bed and all my troubles ended.

The man who undertook to blast his neighbor's prospects, used too short a fuse, and got blown up himself.

The custom of advertising is a custom that brings custom.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 26, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 16th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches, Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost coats into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very liberal and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day. We give Agents 50 per cent. on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for sight.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in TUNE than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong Iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old harp form of stringing by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Baritl.
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry.	Charles Fradel

Mr. SIGISMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes. They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal versimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5.—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr. B. B. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,

L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN

SEWING MACHINES.

EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB. 14th, 1860.

Salesrooms, { 536 Broadway, New York, / 252 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles of mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shuttle stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nansook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health.

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it almost impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply themselves with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

PULMONIC WAFERS!

The most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered for all diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, Difficult Breathing, Sore Throat &c. &c.

THESE Wafers give the most instantaneous and perfect relief, when persevered with according to directions never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health, who have tried other means in vain. To all classes and all constitutions they are a blessing and cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or how severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly decayed. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

TO VOCALISTS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS.

these Wafers are peculiarly valuable, they will in one day remove the most severe occasional hoarseness and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and intelligibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass, and clearness, of which purpose they are regularly used by many Professional Vocalists.

The Great English Remedy!

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

LIKING AND DISLIKING.

Ye who know the reason, tell me
How is it that ins inct still
Prompts the heart to like, or not like,
At its own capricious will?
Tell me by what h dden magic
Our impressions first are led
Into liking—or disliking—
Oft before a word be said?

Why should smiles sometimes repel us?
Bright eyes turn our feelings cold?
What is that which comes to t ll us—
All that glitters is not gol ?
O, no features, plain or striking,
But a power we cannot sh n,
Prompts our liking or dislikiug,
Ere acquaintance hath begun!

Is it instinct—or some spirit
Which protects us, and controls
Every impulse we in crit
By some sympathy of souls?
Is it instinct—is it nature?
Or some freak or fault of chance,
Which our liking or disliking,
Limits to a single glance?

Like presentment of danger,
Though the sky no shadow flings;
Or that inner sense, still stranger,
Of unseen, unuttered things!
Is it—O, can no one tell me—
No one show sufficient cause
Why our likings—and dislikings—
Have th fr own instinctive laws?

AULD ROBIN GRAY.

CHAPTER I.

Jeanie Grahame was one of the blithest, bonniest lasses to 6 seen in the ancient kingdom of Fife, from the Leven Loch to the Bay of St. Andrews: (speaking of her as I first saw her) happy as a mavis, and bright as a June rose. What she afterwards saw and underwent was a cruel to have wasted and withered a' the beauty that was e'er bequeathed from heaven to woman.

The affairs of auld Walter Grahame had been long back-going, and were now come to a poor pass. It would, indeed, be difficult precisely to point out the cause; but the guids and gear, collected by the grandfather, Wattie o' the strong back (so called from his being famous at putting the stane,) had begun to dwindle in the days of his son Alexander, who succeeded him in the farm of Rowan-brae; and so great was the confusion to which things had been allowed to run that Walter, the second o' the name, and Jeanie's father, might be said to have fallen to a fruitless inheritance, and to have been left wrestling in a sea of troubles—

Being the head of a family, and come to that time of life when moving about the Laird has muckle mair of incumbrance than measure in't, Walter struggled hard to better his lot. He was up early, and lay down late—drove his sin cart to the markets—toiled in the field—hedged and ditched —and submitted to every drudgery along with the truest menial o' his workmen. All, however, was in vain. It seemed as if the bow of Providence was bent against him—that he was a doomed man—and that nathing was destined to thrive in his unfortunate hands.

His wife and he had foregathered in their better days, and if it may be said he bore up wi' a stoog fortitude, it maun be confessed that oh! she tholed all the depreations to which their straitened means compelled them. When a high-spirited, careless young lassie, she had married for love (as the saying is), against the will o' her relations, that were a' wealthy and well to do in the world; and, when she could afford to keep up her degree, and blush by them in a gown of French silk, to the full as guid as their ain, every thing was well enough. It was otherwise, however, when year by year oblieged her to dispense with s me wee bit article of accustomed finery, and a back-going fortune estranged faces that had often smiled around her mair plentiful table. True it is, that with the changes o' life so we change; and tha' with the tunes o' fortune we are ower apt to turn. Her temper began sour; she took to liking an ill tale against her neighbor; and, as the farnily purse began to grow lighter, so in proportion did her wounded pride begin to show itself. Wud she condescended to bow down before them that had sae lang treated her as an outcast from their families? Na, na, that wad have been as much as owning she had been in error, and thegwin the right—Sooner wad she perish of cauld and hunger; or be forced away into strange districts to beg, from door to door, a crust of bred and a drink o' water, from the hands of the charitable.

Oh! but Jeanie Grahame, the daughter, was a dear, sweet, bonnie lassie! I was half in love wi' her myself; and that is muckle for a douce married man to confess. Her behaviour to her parents, during all the time of their backgoing and misfortunes, was most patternlike—a sight to see as a sermon to hear. She was the very heart and soul of their household, and seemed to shed a glint of true pleasure ower the hame of honest poverty. Educated to the best o' the means that even their most prosperous days all wed them, she submitted to every accumulating little want without a murmur. Still she was the same innocent, contented, cheerful lassie; still she was the light o' her father's e'e, the pride o' her mother's heart. With them beside her she seemed to fear no evil, and to despise every hardship; her duty seemed aboon a'. She soothed a' their misfortunes—cheered all their rain repinings—cheered them with the smiles o' her sweet face—and seemed to a stranger and that had no cause for tears in this world; but, for a' that, she sometimes grat to herse'f in secret.

Auld Robin Gray, the Laird of Stanedykes, I mind him weel. He was a tall, lourshouthered carle, a guid way up in his sixties at the time; an' strong, hard-set features, and a broad, three-story wig. His face was remarkable for naething but his rough, bushy e'e-brees, that, grizzled wi' years, looked like snawy arches thrown ower a pair o' grey sparkling een. Many and mony a time, when a callant, passing that road, have I seen him, standing at the bit parapet wa' before his house, with his hands in his pepper-and-salt coat pockets, his staff aneath his oxter, and his blue bonnet on his pow, looking at the folk passing on the road from Wemyss to Dysart, or glinting his ee ower his braid fields, surrounded wi' fine auld trees, where the cows stood chowing the cud of fatness, and his whistling ploughlads turned up the mools wi' the glittering share; proud no doubt a' the time to ken himsel' the laird o' sic a rich inheritance. Except for his keen hawk's ee, ane could scarcely have fand him out; however, there are surer ways of discovering a man's heart, than from the cut of his bodily looks, and where was the neighbor that ever had occasion to lend him a guid word, or the beggar that e'er departed from his gate muttering a blessing.

The long and the short is, that auld Robin was a doure, hard-hea ted, selfish man—the king o' misers; scraping and screwing frae a' corners during the day, and from year to year; screwing what he could by all lawful shifts out o' others, and denying himself amaist the necessaries of life. In the early part of his youth he had married a cousin of his ain, a daughter of the Laird o' Lowth, who, after living wi' him six or seven miserable years, took farewell o' this world it is to be hoopt, for a better, the latter part o' her life having been wane than purgatory—a dull, broken-hearted creature, that left him the father of an only son and heir.

In the course of years and nature the son, Jamie grew up a bonny, black-haired laddie, fu' o' the mirk of human kindness, funny and frolicksome; and seemingly determined to make up, in the eyes o' the world, for the sourness of his father's disposition by the sweetness of his ain. In all games and exercises he was the foremost; and not a lass in the parish of Dysart or Kirkcaldy wad have scrupled to have set her cap at him.

Mony a girn and mony a bitter word did the laird gie; yet the outbreaking of youth were born by the gruff and cauld earle better than could have been expectit. Whether however, as he grew aulder, the father's temper grew mair fractious, or his affection to his callant grew mair cauld, was hard to discover; but it became visible to all, from the usuage he underwent, and the drudgeries to which he was made to yield, that the matter wad soon be past the endurance of a proud-hearted, free-spoerited lad—and so it happened; for, in a fit of resentment and sorrow, he betook himsel' to a vessel setting sail frae Leith to the West Indies, leaving to the doure, gruff auld miser, and to his housekeeper, sand blind Nancy, to mak' a kirk and a mill of the pleasureless domicile and property of Stanedykes.

On the very night before Jamie set aff there was a grievous parting between him and Jeanie Grahame. They seemed made for one anither; and if, as some suppose, nature formed human creatures in pairs these were the twa that it meant to meet. From the years in which the heart first opens to love, they had loved each other like brother and sister; but with feelings still more warmly kindled and more deeply rooted. Neither had ever been in love before—it was first love, full to the over*flowing wi'* passion and power—to which a' the other loves of life (if men can really and truly love twice) are but as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal. Sair, sair, did Jeanie greet, and beg o' him no to gang awa'; lang did she hing upon his neck, while her burning tears drappit down on his hands; but na, his purpose was fixed—fixed by an oath, as if he had been auld Mede or Persian; so, after explaining to her the absurdity of his remaining at a hame where he could never better himsel'; and of his submiting to a state of miserable and slavish dependance; he said he was only about trying to push his ain way in the world, and to get into a situation that would not render their coming together a thing, as it now was, altogether hopeless. "No no," he said "Jeanie," taking a farewell kiss frae her lips, "you mauna cry—it cannot be otherwise. It were cruel to you, as weel as my-sel', to stay where I now am. I must—must leave you, Jeanie, and mind this—if I get on in the world you will see me soon; if not, try to forget what has passed; and, my dear, dear Jeanie, mind that I leave you a free creature—as free in promise as God's delight—as free as before I saw ye—and, when I am far away ower the sea, and forgotten, refuse not a guid offer for the sake of the foolish, silly, thoughtless memory o' what has passed betwixt us. So, maybe, when I come hame—if ever it be my fortune to come hame—a crazy, weather-beaten, broken-down auld man, I may see ye surrounded wi' ye're bonny bairns and ye're proud guidman—No, hang me, I wad be sooner shot through the head like a dog than see the man that duired, in my hearing, to ca' Jeanie Grahame his wife!"

When the auld miser fand that his son had tarn his will in his ain hands, and had decampit, he had a grievous contention wi' the bitterness and blackness of his ain speerit, and he vowed that, only son as he was of his, he wad cut him aff wi' a shilling; come what like't of the guids, gear, and chattels, he lament'at he couldna carry to the grave with him. Naething wad mak him relax in his purpose, his determi*nation* was as fixed as the whunstane rock; and the friends that were sae forward as to presume offering a word o' advice, fand that they were only rivetting the nail of hatred more firmly in the laird's bosom.

Considering the ties o' nature, ane wad have thocht that the course of time must have blunted his wrath, and reconciled him to Jamie; but for otherwise. His speerit had gon a bend that couldna be straightened; so, indeed of relenting, every day appeared to mak him mair inveterately cruel. Twa simmers had passed oure, when the laird received a letter frae his son, in which Jamie lamented the step he had taken, and the way they had parted, hoping that, when he saw him again—as he shortly expectit to do—a' the past wad be forgotten.

The auld neer-do-weel had scarcely patience to read the letter thro', ere he tore it into a thousand tatters, and trampt them below his feet. "Come hame when ye like, my man," cried the unnatural father, in the bitterness of his doure rage, "come hame when ye like, ye'se never mair be son of mine. Ye have brewed the cup o' wilfu' disobedience and ye maun drink it to the dregs—deevil cares how bitter the dregs may be. Forgive ye! faith lad, ye ken me. I'm no the willow whand to be bowed to your purpose. Do ye hear that?" added he, tapping sand-blind Nancy, his house-keeper, on the shoother, an auld withered-looking witchwife, that deserved a tar barrel on the top o' Lomond hill, for better than mony that suffered there;—do ye hear that? Our bonnie son Jamie is thinking of paying us a veesit soon. Do your hear what I'm saying?"

"Nonsense, laird, nonsense. Jamie coming hame?" answered elootie's dochter, wi' a grin that showed her blackened stumps. "Oo, ay, he'll be coming to marry his bit bonny sweetheart, oure by, Wattie Grahame's dochter, ye understand, laird."

This was setting fire to tinder. The laird looking first black and then blue, glowered in Nancy's withered face for a minute without speaking, like a man lost within himself, then giving his head a shake and screwing his mouth up to a whistle like a man that has, after muckle trouble, seen his way thro' a puzzle, he clappit his bonnet on his pow, and away down the road to Rowan-brae.

At Walter's everything was looking dowie and mair dowie, glumier and gloomier. The cattle, ane after anither, had been selled to pay the landlord his rent.—The barn yard was threshed out and empty. Sheriff-officers frae Edinburgh were seen like wild cats in the gloaming, prowling about his bounds wi' docketted accounts in their side pockets, threatening, pouthing and storming; while, to crown a' Walter himself, by a tumble frae his cart shaft in the dark, had gott a his arm broken. It was a hame o' cauldrife poverty and wretchedness. Misfortune after misfortune showering down upon them, had at length soured ed Walter's heart, and broken down his speerit. His wife, who could have tholed her poor fate better had she been among strangers, began to sink under a pride so so mortally wounded, and she grew every day mair crabbit and ill-tempered, as she tarnpit oure the thocht o' their afflictions affording a cause to crowing to her negl ctful relations. The warst of all, however, was that they were neither o' them sae young as they once were; the snawe of old age had begun to gather round their brows, and they hadna the warm hopes of youth to see bright days aiend years to come.—Jeame, puir thing, grew up wonderfully, and tho' doing everything for the best, she took hard words and crabbit looks, without a murmur; exerted herself frae morning to night in managing the household concern; and lookit like a stray sunbeam let into a dwelling of darkness.

Ane might naturally ask—had she nae consolation which helpit her to oppose this heave speerit to the storm? had she nae secret help? nae kind letter? nae blithe tidings? None—none; frae the night of the parting she had heard not a syllable frae or about him. She kent frae his own lips that he was aff to the West Indies, and she had heard from others that the West Indies is the European's grave.

IN MEMORIAM.

THE REV. HENRY CRAIK.

BY THE REV. R. NORRIS, CLIFTON

(From the Bristol Mercury.)

Scotland has seldom given to the South a richer gift than that received in the life and character of Henry Craik. Scotch adventurers may be found everywhere, while her sons of toil, genius and culture adorn every land; but in the career of our deceased fellow-citizen we have lost one whose adventurous spirit was controlled by a deep toned piety and whose ripe scholarship and and unadorned eloquence of life and tongue made his presence amongst us of incalculable worth. Happily, in his case, he was a man of appreciated goodness and felt power. He was the last to desire a complimentary epitaph when gone, but the first to wish to hold a place after death in the memory and affection of the good and faithful.

We sincerely trust the memoir to be published of this esteemed servant of Christ will give to the public a definite and living portrait of his character. The events of his life were simple; they were neither startling nor unusual. By the side of his esteemed colleague, the Rev. Mr. Muller, it appears tame and unimpressive. The Orphan House and its christian mission have so striking an effect from their diffusive beneficence, and the thrilling report of their dependence and yet increasing progress, that the quiet ministrations of Henry Craik have almost escaped the attention of the public. But his life and character were full of incident and meaning. His character was unique, his life singular. They may be made productive of great good. Though dead he yet speaks. We sincerely trust that the voice coming even from the grave will be listened to by many an obedient ear and loving heart.

We would respectfully urge the estimable man to whom his papers have been entrusted rather to delay the memoir, than fail in infusing into the detail the genial spirit of our departed friend.

Considering the ties o' nature, ane wad have thocht that the course of time must have blunted his wrath, and reconciled him to Jamie; but for otherwise. His speerit had gon a bend that couldna be straightened; so, indeed of relenting, every day appeared to mak him mair inveterately cruel. Twa simmers had passed oure, when the laird received a letter frae his son, in which Jamie lamented the step he had taken, and the way they had parted, hoping that, when he saw him again—as he shortly expectit to do—a' the past wad be forgotten.

His appearance was at times almost grotesque, and but for a watchful home, we suspect it would have been as alien from the ordinary secular as from the clerical garb. We have sometimes been with him when the broken umbrella, his faithful friend and the oldest hat have, by mistake, been donned for the best attire. The collar of the coat was looking a ter the sleeves, and the necktie had comfortably nestled itself behind the head. When in such a state he had just come to the surface after a deep digging for a Heb ew root, or a dive into the depths of authorities to see whether the Keri of the Hebrew should be admitted into the text. His intense devotion to the study of the Scriptures made criticism a recreation, and in his most humorous, impassioned or depressed moments it was never unwelcome. When amidst beautiful scenery, and affected almost to tears by its witchery, a passage of the Divine word would come to crown the scene. But with it would occur the readings and interpretations that reverence or enmity had ever suggested. Nor did this break the spell. If a critical friend was present, nature would have to wait, till the moot point was settled. Then the landscape came afresh, the more fascinating and beautiful that it had not rebuked his momentary forgetfulness of its charms. Poetry and sentiment at times lured, but never mastered him.—He could enjoy the one and indulge the other. But they were recreations enjoyed, but not obeyed

His unsuspicious nature and purity of character were without weakness, but not without peril. They exposed him to deception. When doubt of truthfulness was awakened, his watchfulness and resoluteness proved that his simplicity was only guilelessness, and his trustfulness the triumph of charity. He was ever ready to confide, slow to detect, but when deceived indignant in rebuke. Intentional deception he could not endure. To be acquainted with him was to respect him, and to know him was to love him. His trustful conversation, kindly fellowship, Scotch reminiscences, love of fatherland, English sympathies, devout utterance in the few, more of a model friend than he had been accepted by the many as a model preacher.

An oppressive sense of responsibility checked indulgence in more literary pursuits, yet he found time to keep abreast of the current literature of the day, and watch with deep solicitude the phases of the controversies that were disturbing the Church of Christ. In some he took an active part, in nearly all a deep interest, and if he had lived, this winter would have witnessed his indignant condemnation of the modern attempt to cre ate a church, or reveal a religion, without a creed. He had proposed a series of lectures against this attempt. While holding with an eager grasp the old standards of the evangelical faith, he grew in catholicity of spirit. His reading had become more liberal, his public sentiments less confined, and his friendships more extended.

In his early life he had passed from the home culture and discipline of an estimable Scotch clergyman to a tutorship in the South of England. The education of home and of the University of St. Andrews had prepared him to do honor to his new position. He was highly esteemed, no still true to his early devotion to classical studies. An apparently accidental association with Mr. Muller, gave young Henry Craik fitting opportunity for the revelation of his power. He became an earnest acceptable preacher of the Gospel. Adopting the views of the Baptists, his course was in the main prescribed. He did not join the Baptist denomination, but, with Mr. Muller, came to Bristol, and sought to establish a Christian Church. An open and unpretending ministry was the principle on which the attempt rested. They met with many suspicions and much opposition from the religious public. Both these honored men with instinctive wisdom, gave themselves mainly to work. The one to become the prince of our philanthropists, the other the model student and preacher. In each department success came.

Religious controversy was to them an unwelcome employment. Teaching, preaching and working their loved service. The small company soon became a formidable following. Generous and liberal helpers unexpectedly sprang up, and from the East the true travelled West, until Salem and Bethesda chapels became the accepted substitute for the name of a sect, and Ashley-down Orphan Asylum the evidence of a noble beneficent triumph. Faith in the Word was honored in the chapels. Faith in the Work was blessed in the Asylum.

Of Mr Muller we need not write. His monument time has already reared. Those structures of real magnificence, that form the home for nearly 2000 orphans, both conceal and reveal the nobility and simplicity of his character. His deceased friend claimed no such honor. His devotion was emphatically to the Divine Word. He labored and watched to catch its very whispers, while his hearers received from his lips the fullness of its counsels, and the wealth of its revelations. Biblical words were to him as caskets. He suspected a jewel in each. He erred sometimes, but not often. The grammatical value, rather than the spiritual force of a passage, would captivate him. The form became more important than the principle it embodied. But these instances were few in contrast with the abounding of fruitful and sober exegesis.—We would pass them by if veneration for his memory did not demand an exact fineness of our friend. With these admissions, we leave Mr. Craik, confessedly, one of the very best commentators that Holy Scriptures ever had. Through him for thirty years their infinite variety and resource have ministered to the guidance and consolation of thousands of hearers.

We would confess our deep regret that he had left behind him commentaries on only one or two portions of the Scriptures. His independent criticisms on Alford, Bishop Ellicott, Tregelles and Scrivener have been gracefully appreciated by these learned men, and they probably would share the regret that so successful a student and critic had not lived to record his matured judgment in a written commentary on the text. His work, however, is done, and the absence of the teacher should make the student a more solicitous, habitually to be taught of God.

As if impelled by some premonition of his approaching removal to his better home, he had long indulged the hope of visiting the scenes of his early days. The opportunity came, and he joined his honored brother's family sojourning amidst the lake scenery of his native Scotland. To them, more than to many, such companionship, scenery, and associations would yield intense joy. A joy the purer, in that so much of Heaven would be blended with the scenes. But disease brought disappointment, and soon he was compelled almost to hasten back to his home at Clifton. From that there was one contiguous descent to the grave. A long and painful illness ensued. Loving hearts and medical skill and care joined to stay the hour of departure. He himself had the impression that his work was not yet done. To his honored brother, with another friend present in this chamber of sanctified affliction, he expressed the wish that he might yet bear the fruits of bygone labors into the earthly storehouse of his great Master. His desire seemed natural. Such stores as he possessed could not, in human seeming, be spared. They were more needful for earth than heaven. But not so was the decree of infinite wisdom and love. By such discipline are we taught that though God puts such treasure in earthen vessels, the vessels are not the treasure. They may be broken, but the riches remain.

The last days of our departed friend were those of suffering and calmness. Amidst all peace reigned. His soul stayed itself on God. There was no exultation, but much tranquility. Neither doubts nor distrusts disturbed his last moments. All was peace. Once he said, as we were standing by his bed-side, "God's promises is precious; I feel its value; it is my stay, my hope; but it is good to have about me and in my chamber those I love. I feel how merciful and kind it is of my heavenly Father to give us these objects of human affection and sympathy. Like their presence; they help and cheer me." His beloved wife and dear daughter were moving about his tender heart, and soothing its sorrows, and assuaging its pains. They were ministering to his peace. And thus in them his keen eye of faith and love saw his Lord. They to him were gracious and needed gifts from His hand. The last words addressed to us when passing round his bed of languor and pain were, "Dear M——, when you hear it is all over, give God thanks." These words followed us. They enjoined a duty we knew to be well nigh impossible to obey. It would require great resignation and faith to praise God for taking away such a man and such a life as Henry Craik's. But we have learned already that often an apparent loss is a great gain. To him the most be, and to us it may be true. We may, then, calmly say, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." It is all over; let us give God thanks.

He was carried to the grave on Tuesday, amidst the sorrows and regrets of thousands. Whether by design we know not, but with marked propriety the Cathedral bell was tolling as the funeral passed through College-green; and in Bath street the shops and offices of the Jewish merchants and traders were partially closed. The day was gloomy; the very heavens seemed to sympathise with the sorrowing crowd. A long line of carriages and mourners followed the remains to the cemetry, and there thousands waiting the interment. Among them were nearly all the Baptist and Independent ministers in the city. A clergyman, Mr. Doudney, was present. Two brethren officiated, and gave utterance to the sympathy and sorrow that pervaded. All was genuine. Each seemed to be bearing a heavy burthen. It was felt to be a time to mourn and weep. A master in Israel had fallen. But the sorrow was not as those with not hope, for all felt, "blessed are the dead that die in the Lord."

Bristol has lost many citizens and benefactors during these last twenty years; the brazen columns and massive monuments of our cemetry tell of losses that no language can express. But of all, none surpass that which has been sustained by the church and the world in the death of Henry Craik.—Neither mural tablet nor marble monument is needed to perpetuate his name. A multitude now and many hereafter will trace their likeness to Christ to his ministration. It will be increasingly seen how largely the Divine Spirit used him to awaken to life and mould into spiritual beauty the new creature in Christ Jesus. And to the impress of the Lord stamped on the new character, shall be traced the faithful work of the under-servant who labored for such a joy and such a reward. "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars for ever and ever."

Let us breathe the prayer that we may follow in his steps, so that "to live may be Christ, to die gain."

The Man of Principle.

Chaplain remarks—"When we speak of a man of principle, we do not mean a man who does right for fear of penalty, or one whose virtue is ostentatious. We do not mean a man who keeps true to morality as the world goes, but who violates the great spirit of morality by numerous evasions.—We do not speak of the man who is clothed in respectability, while he is secretly mean and fraudulent. No! we mean the man whose hand is the agent of conscience, whose lips are anointed with integrity—the fair executioner of whose character is not tarnished with the least blur of shame whose fingers never itch for unjust gain—the man to whom we would trust a lawful secret with all confidence that it would be locked in his bosom as in a chest of iron—whose midnight action is as honorable as his noon-day bargain—whose clasped hands is as a sealed bond—whose promise is comparable to sterling gold—in whose soul justice is so equally balanced that no passion can warp it—whose honesty is so sturdy that it will not bend to any expedient—whose clear eye of purity and truth fairly shames temptation. Such a man, though clothed in homespun apparel, has something great in him. Kings feel less regal in his presence. He asks not our respect—he commands it. He has an unconditional surrender of our confidence, for he is a man of principle."

A Quaker having sold a fine looking but, blind horse, asked the purchaser:

Well, my friend, dost thou see a sy fault in him?

No, was the answer.

Neither will he see any fault in thee said the Quaker.

ARE THE TROUBLES SETTLED?

So much has been written for which there was no foundation, and so much is now being written that must be mere speculation, that all opinions have to be taken for what they may appear worth. Fenianism is evidently well played out, and while it may not be altogether defunct, it is fast expiring. There can be no raids by land, however. Our Volunteers, and thousands of others, are ready to defend the country, and thin the leaders have learned without the shedding of blood, other than, perhaps, having a row among themselves. But people are ever on the alert to find some direful omens or portents of a plague. The fisheries is now the great field of danger. The Fenians will become fishermen, say the wise ones, and thus by exceeding the bounds of American fishermen and continuing to do so, provoke the interference of Her Majesty's cruisers, and in due time the interference of the United States Government. This may appear very plausible and probable—it is certainly possible. That Fenians will become fishermen and dredge and toil, waiting for an opportunity for all this, is not very probable, however. The leaders are not so devoted to the liberation of Ireland as all that. It is one thing to go about in the Railway cars and pass a pleasant evening in a hotel, after haranguing a motley crowd, but a far different thing to toil on the Atlantic in a fisher boat, harangue a shoal of motley fish, and then go to work and gut and salt the take. Our minds may be at ease, and leave the matter in the hands of Great Britain and the United States.

All the rumors that are set afloat at New York and Chicago are not to be believed. Some apparently should not cause any uneasiness. Head Centre Stephens is one day reported in New York, the next report leaves him in Paris, and a third has the police of Ireland ferreting him out among the cities or mountains of that island. One thing is certain he will soon turn up, and his whereabouts be known, until this, reports are merely given to satisfy the desire that exists for information. Fenianism is dying out even in Ireland, every day leaving less hopes of even an attempted rising.

IN OTHER QUARTERS,

The troubles of the old world are not entirely settled. Prussia and Austria are not on the most amicable terms, and there are ominous signs of a disruption. Napoleon has not yet settled Maximilian on the Mexican throne, and there are signs of resolutions in the American Senate relative thereto. Spain and Chili have already exchanged shots—the result will no doubt be disastrous to Chilian commerce for awhile. But Spain has not been able to manage her South American colonies hitherto; they may again prove too many for her. There is also the appearance of trouble in China, so that although our troubles are about over, there are troubles in other lands.

THE VOLUNTEERS HOME AGAIN.

On Saturday last the two Companies that had been called to the front returned, there being nothing for them to do, no Fenians to fight. At the cars the Companies were met by Captain Poole's Rifle Company and also by Captain Kennedy's Company. There was, besides, an immense concourse of people, consisting of every age and sex, who anxiously awaited the return of our brave Volunteers. As soon as the train made a halt the two Companies made their exit and were warmly received by the other Companies and most cordially by their friends.—Captain Poole made a speech on the occasion, in which he welcomed them home, praised the readiness with which they had turned out to meet the foe, should it present himself, and, while he earnestly desired peace, expressed the strongest conviction that Captains Roger's and Leigh's Companies would again be in the van against any enemy whatsoever. Three deafening cheers were then given for the returned Volunteers.—After this the other Companies escorted the Ashburnham Company to their armory, and to Captain Rogers' dwelling were cheers and salutations almost rent the air.

Captain Rogers, in dismissing his men, was, by the way, are most devotedly attached to him, thanked them for their attention and good conduct during the time they had been on duty, and trusted that they would always be ready to serve their Country and their Queen, to repel the invasion of any foe. He also remarked that there were others as ready as they had been and no doubt as willing to go, but by good luck the Ashburnham company had been called out first. He again thanked them for their order and good behaviour, and dismissed them, to meet on Monday evening.

MILITARY SPIRIT CONTAGIOUS.

During the absence of the Volunteers, the boys of Ashburnham organized themselves into a company, under the captaincy of a son of Captain Rogers, and getting their clothing as arranged as to be somewhat uniform, armed and paraded the streets as if veterans. They are most enthusiastic in getting up their company, and have obtained a considerable sum by subscription for the purpose of obtaining uniform of a becoming sort. If the excitement should keep up for any length of time, we would have grandsons, no doubt, who, if not at the front, would be able to defend their homes, so that everyman might go to such a degree has the military spirit invaded the people.

UNITED STATES.

From all quarters the great idea is, that ere long there will arise difficulties of no common magnitude in the financial position of the United States. The most shrewd business men are of the opinion that the next six months may, or will, perhaps test the wisdom of such as immense inflated paper currency, and will also test the ability of the Secretary of the Treasury and of the Legislature to keep the country out of a Commercial and Financial crisis. We find the bank of England is shortening its loans, and thus materially limiting the manufacturers and exporters and more or less tending to curtail business with the United States and also other foreign speculation. There is also a falling off of importations with the United States, which it is believed will continue for some time, and all this is considered as pointing to some change in the money questions of our neighbors.

THE PRESIDENT.

At no period in the history of the United States did they require a President who would be able to direct and control the will of the people, as expressed either Legislature or by leaders, and would also be able to restrain the dominant party from oppressing the conquered, and would be above siding with the victors to oppress the weak.

There is also at present a foolish preference in the North for the freedmen above many—though white, and a consequent desire to grant them too much,—we suppose in return for the great wrongs heretofore inflicted by the institution of slavery. It is just to make reasonable amends for the evils inflicted, and it is right to elevate the freedmen, to raise them if possible to an equality with their white neighbors, and it is just to grant them equal privileges and immunities as the white man enjoys. But it would be unjust to the white man to grant the freedman more than the white man enjoys. This the people of the Northern States appear as if wishing to do, and it certainly requires a man of wisdom and firmness to stand between the two and grant the one all they need, and at the same time not encroach upon the rights and privileges of the other. This man they have in Andrew Johnson. True, Washington demands the admiration and veneration of the American people as the Father of their Country. Abraham Lincoln will live in their esteem as he who carefully and wisely piloted the American ship through the storm of rebellion, and by his moderation and wisdom had the vessel brought into the haven. But Andrew Johnson will deserve no less a place in the esteem and veneration of the American people for the manly, independent course he has pursued since his elevation to the Presidency, and although the purblindness of the present age may be unwilling to see the wisdom of his course in vetoing the Freedmen's Bureau Bill, and also in again vetoing the Civil Rights Bill. Posterity will see it and acknowledge the wisdom of his course and the integrity of the man, who would not sell the rights of any of his fellow-citizens for either emolument, power, praise or threatening, and who was bold enough to, twice in one session, oppose the will of the Congress, and place his veto upon their acts, because he thought them unwise and unjust.

The people of the South deserve both justice and respect. They are willing to return to the Union if allowed to do so. President Johnson desires their return. The people of the North most unwisely will not allow their representatives a place in the Senate. This course, if proceeded in, will embitter the people of the Southern States, and will tend to increase the ill will that did exist, and will have the effect of making them enemies instead of reconciling them, and it is a question for American statesmen to propose: why is it that if at the time of Lee's surrender the people were sick of the war and longing for peace on any terms, and ready to accept gracefully the pardon of the government, and ready to submit to any conditions that might be made, why are they now arrogant, exacting and intolerant if it be not the unwise policy pursued toward them. This one thing is certain, that the milder the policy pursued toward them the sooner will their wounds be healed and their affection gained. With the West dissatisfied and clamoring, and the possibility, nay the probability, of trouble with Mexico and France, it is foolish to drive the people to desperation who for four years so terribly fought for independence. "Let your moderation be known unto all men," is a maxim worthy of imitation even by politicians. But besides a war for principles and opinions there are other troubles. A leading journal says: "The fight is now between Mr. Johnson and his political opponents, and the issue will be watched with interest."

FIRES.

On Sabbath morning, our citizens were aroused at a rather untimely hour, by the alarm of fire. It proved to be an uninhabited house next to Capt. Poole's dwelling, that some one had imagined would be better out of the way, and consequently fire from some quarter had been applied to the old boards, and as fire soon destroys old boards, it had the desired effect upon this old building.

On Tuesday evening, a bright light from the east indicated fire in the direction of Ashburnham. The Firemen prepared for a journey, but wisely deferred the labour of hauling the engine so far until satisfied what it was. It proved to be an old dwelling that had been fired. We did not learn the damage

New Rifle Company,

We are pleased to learn that the Government have recognized a new Rifle Company in Peterborough. This makes the fifth company in this district—enough for a Battalion. We hope that the parties who have the drill shed in hand will bestir themselves. Now is the time, we want the shed. We hear that parties are trying to get up a Band in connection with the Volunteers. We hope they may succeed. The following are the officers of the new company:—Hon. S. Smith, Captain; Jacob Greene (cadet,) Lieutenant; R. B. Lundy, Ensign; Henry W Smith, Color Sergeant; William Toole, 2d Sergeant; A. Leitch, 3rd Sergeant.

Union School Board.

On Tuesday evening there was no meeting, there not being a quorum. Members present—Messrs. Lundy, Stevenson, Dumble, Helm, Gilmour and Cameron. Absent—Col. Haultain, Dr. Burnham, Dr. Poole, Dr. McRae, Messrs. Clinton and Coulter. Will the absentees make a note of this, as some of them have but once appeared at the Board since appointed.

Dr. Rverson and the firm of Jas. Campbell & Son are now pitted in a controversy on the school book monopoly. There is unfairness in some breasts, that never rests or lets rest.

To Farmers.

Mr. Calcutt, who so energetically labored last year to introduce the growth and culture of flax, in this week's issue informs our readers that he has flax seed for sale and distribution this year also. Last year was the first year that flax had been tried to any extent in this part, and although the season was rather unfavorable, the cultivation untried and the farmers to a great extent unacquainted with the manner or means of preparing the fibre, yet we understand that the flax crop paid very remunerative returns.—Mr. Calcutt deserves great praise for his enterprise in setting up machinery at considerable cost, also for purchasing the raw material and providing a home market at once. He now offers the seed on favorable terms. Farmers would consult their own interests by obtaining some seed and giving another trial.

Personal.

We learn with pleasure that Mr. Edward Benson, son of J. R. Benson, Esq., of this Town, and pupil of Dr. Burnham, has passed his final examination at Victoria Medical College, Toronto, and graduated as M. D.—Mr. Benson graduated at Bellevue College, New York, last year, and consequently can practice his profession in either the United States or Canada. We are informed, however, that he intends sticking out his shingle in our own good town, but wherever he may do so, he has our best wishes for his success.

The Committee of the Protestant Home beg to acknowledge with thanks the following donations for March. John English, 1 cord of wood; Miss Patton, 1 shirt; Mr. James Kearney, of Medina, N. Y., $1; from the Episcopal Bazaar, per Miss Ferguson, basket of buns and bread; Miss Lila Roche, Sunday school papers for the children.

New Publication.

THE PLACE BRITISH AMERICANS HAVE WON IN HISTORY.—We have been favored by the author with a very interesting little pamphlet on the above subject, a Lecture delivered by Henry J. Morgan, Esq., at Aylmer, L. C. It is tersely written, contains much information concerning British American worthies, and will be read with interest every where in British America. We purpose giving it to our readers next week.

THE SCOTTISH AMERICAN JOURNAL.—This very popular Journal continues to provide instructive and amusing literature for its readers. The next number promises to contain a NEW TALE from the pen of Captain James Grant, the author of "Second to None," "Rob Roy," &c., &c. The Tale, entitled "The King's Own Borderers," is a military romance, and promises to be very interesting and attractive, the chief scenes being laid in connection with the expedition of Sir John Moore, in which the gallant 25th Foot so actively participated. This story bids fair to rival "Second to None," or any of the authors previous works. Besides the attractive reading in the Journal, it contains from time to time the news of the day relative to the important events that are transpiring both in the old and new world—and on this account deserves a chief place among periodicals.

Atlantic Cable.

The greatest efforts are being made to carry into effect the laying of the new cable. It will be stronger than any heretofore made, and as the machinery will be according to the most philosophic plans, it is hoped to be successfully laid this season.

From the Ottawa Citizen, of 2nd instant, we learn that estimates of the probable quantity of white pine made this year on the Ottawa will be about 12,195,000 feet, and of red pine 1,375,000 feet. Below Ottawa city, including Gatineau, 1,100,000 feet; Northern railroad, 1,500,000 feet; on the Trent, 2,500,000 feet. Total white pine, 17,595,000 feet; red pine, 1,375,000 feet.

KILLED.—John Young, an employee on the Ottawa and Prescott railway, was killed by being crushed between two freight cars at the Ottawa station, on Saturday last.

GREAT EMIGRATION FROM IRELAND.—According to the Cork Examiner, upwards of 4,000 persons left, by way of Queenstown, for the United States during the first week of March.

SCHOOL EXAMINATION.

The quarterly examination of the School in Section No. 1, Township of Smith, taught by Mr. Taylor, was held on the 17th of March. There were present 57 scholars, and a majority of the parents of the children of the school.

The following are the names of the pupils in the various classes to whom prizes were awarded:—

5th Reading Class—Wm. H. Manning 1st, Wm. Simpson 2nd. 4th—Elizabeth Roseberry 1st, James Holland 2nd. 3rd—John Young 1st, Edward Blewett 2nd.

Sequel—Coleman Blewett 1st, Agnes Nickles 2nd.

2nd Reading Class—William Preston 1st, John Northey 2nd.

1st Class Writing—Hannah Holland 1st, Robert Nugent 2nd, Margaret McKee 3rd. 2nd do.—Angus Nichols 1st, Sam'l McKee 2nd.

1st Class Arithmetic—Samuel Duff 1st, Charles Moore 2nd. 2nd do.—Margaret Holland 1st, Elizabeth Moore 2nd.

1st Class Grammar—Robert Nugent 1st, Samuel Duff 2nd. 2nd do.—Charles Moore and Isabella Duff equal. 3rd do.—Elizabeth Moore 1st, Robert Moore 2nd, Geography—Wm. H. Manning 1st, Rob't Moore 2nd.

Physiology—Isabella Duff 1st, Margaret McKee 2nd.

Prize for good conduct and attendance Charles Moore.

Owing to the length of time taken up in examining the above classes, those in mental arithmetic, euclid and algebra were not fully examined.—Com.

The Trade Review, although advising farmers to cultivate little barley this year, says it will have a ready sale in the States, and at remunerating prices. The barley of Canada is superior to any grown in the States, and the Brewers of Philadelphia declare that if they cannot be supplied with the article in Canada, they will export all they want from England. Our contemporary says they will pay the duty of 15 cents per bushel themselves, rather than want it. If so, why advise the farmers to sow little.

PRIEST KILLED.—On Tuesday night, while the Rev. Father Sinnott, of Adjala, Simcoe County, was ridding on horseback in his diocese, to visit a sick person, the horse took flight from the lightning, threw the reverend gentleman and killed him. His body was found on the road yesterday evening. He was above fifty years of age and much respected by all who knew him.

GREENCASTLE.—On Friday a man named Stevenson, for over 20 years employed as a compositor in the tribune office, died at Toronto. The Hon. Mr Brown attended his funeral in person, and paid off a mortgage of £40 on a house owned by the deceased. This act of generosity on the part of Mr Brown is worthy of honorable mention.

BURLEIGH TOWNSHIP COUNCIL

Council met on the 7th March pursuant to adjournment.

Present—John Carroll, Reeve, David R. Castilay, Caleb Sonsley, Patrick Scott.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication from Chas. R. Stewart, Esq., Agent for the Canadian Land and Emigration Company, to the Reeve, was read, asking the Reeve to compromise with his Company for the amount of Taxes claimed against them.

Mr. Thomas Stuart, Treasurer, submitted his sureties.

Verbal applications were received from Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Hall, requesting to be appointed Assessor and Collector for the current year.

A petition from James Young was read, praying to be allowed to perform his statute labor on concession line between 10 and 11 in the Township of Chandos.

Moved by Mr. Castilay, seconded by Mr. Sonsley, that a reduction of $254.27 be made from the county rate erroneously charged against the lands in the Townships of Harcourt and Bruton for the year 1865. The County Council having remitted the county rate on those lands.

Moved by Mr. Castilay, seconded by Mr. Scott, that Mr. Hall be appointed Assessor and Collector for the current year, and that his salary be 10 per cent. on all sums collected.

Moved by Mr. Sonsley, seconded by Mr. Scott, that a By-Law be now read confirming the appointment of assessor and collector, also of path-masters, pound-keepers and fence viewers.

Moved by Mr. Castilay, seconded by Mr Sonsley, that the application of Peter Phelan to be attached to School Section No. 1, Burleigh, be allowed to lie over till the next meeting of Council.

Moved by Mr. Castilay, seconded by Mr. Sonsley, that James Young be allowed to perform six days statute labor on the concession line between 10 and 11, in compliance with the prayer of his petition.

Moved by Mr. Scott, seconded by Mr. Sonsley, that an order be issued in favor of the Auditors for the amount of their salaries.

Moved by Mr. Sonsley, seconded by Mr. Castilay, that this Council do now adjourn to Tuesday, the 8th May, to meet then for the purpose of holding the Court of Revision and for general business.

EDWARD HALL, Clerk.

BIBLICAL EDUCATION.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—In looking over the Examiner of the 12th instant, I observe an article, by "A Young Man from the Country," in which there is a strange jumble of ideas concerning "things that differ", and a lame attempt in "way of argument (if argument it may be called) to justify the most objectionable part of Dr. R's new school bill, "compulsory education."—This part of the 'Young Man's' article I can leave in the hands of "J. E." to settle, believing him perfectly able to do it; while it will be my task to endeavor to prove that education separate from Bible training cannot suppress crime. It is the great discovery of the age and Dr. R. "A Young Man from the Country," and certain others have now ascertained that the merely mechanical arts of reading and writing and accounts are more efficacious in bidding human depravity, in cherishing moral principles, and in tending to public usefulness than the means of divine appointment The "Young Man from the Country," speaks of Scotland being "one of the most educated and enlightened countries in the world," the might have added moral, including also the North of Ireland) Let me ask him what did this? I will answer:—The religious training of the school and the fireside. But withdraw religious training from the fireside, and the daily bible lesson from the school, then what "George Combe" & Co. and other infidels are ardently aiming at will follow, viz:—Infidelity or Superstition.

The Protestantism embraced in Scotland at the time of the Reformation was of a more scriptural and uncompromising character than that adopted in England, and a truly substantial education was zealously espoused. John Knox and his fellow presbyters set their hearts with much intensity upon the "Godly bringing up" of the youth. For a time they struggled with a heartless aristocracy, amid poverty and hardship to obtain their favorite object, and after being often repulsed by the state they ultimately succeeded in having a school placed by the side of every parish Church; they are gone, and the storms of many a winter have passed over the spots where their ashes repose, but they are not, cannot be, forgotten, "their works do follow them," and a scriptural education is one of these. Honor to their memories! Scotland owes them much.

I have before me the February number of the Scottish R. P magazine for 1866, in which it is said in an article entitled "The influence of bad books." That in the General Report of Institutions for adults in England for 1864, "that books of an immoral and vicious character are almost universally applied for at the libraries" The editor, Dr. E. R. Tait, no mean judge, ascribes this to a want of a religious education in early youth. Infamy and ruin will be the result of such training, for is the wind not influenced by the kind as well as the amount of knowledge possessed? Was there more attention paid to education with Bible training, and less to mere instruction without it, what a different aspect would society present in our day, for it cannot be denied that vice and crime of all kinds are on the increase, and the criminals are not all uneducated; "for the proportion of criminals who have received an education apart from the Bible" to use the words of one of the profoundest thinkers of our time "is on the increase also," and their deeds cast into the shade as regards infamy, &c, that of their less favored brethren.

Thieves are now a peculiar class, having a language intelligible only to themselves, and involving principles directly opposed to human and divine laws. Is their reformation hopeless? Is there no discipline by which the education of the young thief can be rendered possible? Are there no punishments, no rewards, no influences by means of which he may be led to regard his principles bad and baneful? To answer as "A Young Man from the Country" argues, that a mere knowledge of reading, writing and accounts will reform him is only mere assertion without proof; for his system has been tried, weighed in the balance and found wanting.

The highest welfare of every nation; especially of a free Country like Western Canada, and of the individuals of which it is composed, is inseparably connected with a deep and living dependence upon and duty to God. A nation "living without God in the world, ignoring his existence or scorning his power, (such as France did before and after its first revolution, although enjoying the benefits of a moral and intellectual education,) although appearing with material grandeur, must soon be stricken with confusion and disorder, and rips for anarchy and ruin An education based upon Christian principles, can alone preserve the young in after years, and fit them in principles and habits for that momentous future that awaits them, when all that is of earth shall have ended.

"The cloud-capped towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself;
Yea, all that it inherits shall dissolve,
And like an unsubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a wreck behind.

Marmora Iron Mines

From the Belleville Intelligencer.

Special efforts have been made to test the value and extent of the Marmora Company's ore beds, for upon the result of that test depended the success or failure of the Cobourg and Marmora Railway Company. In the opinion of many there tests were not necessary, as the fact had years ago been established that the iron ore beds of the Company were inexhaustible, and in quality equal to any on this continent. But it had been industriously circulated by gentlemen high in official position that the Marmora Company's ore beds were valueless, that the whole company was in fact a grand swindle, and as these reports obtained circulation among the iron men of Pittsburg and Pennsylvania, they very naturally hesitated to embark in the scheme, until a more thorough and practical exploration of the ore beds was made. Our readers have been kept fully posted as to the nature, extent and result of these explorations. Some two or three months ago, a number of capitalists connected with the Iron Works of Pittsburg, visited Marmora, in company with leading gentlemen of Cobourg, and the result of their visit was to send a gentleman named Edwards, a practical miner, to superintend the getting out of a quantity of ore to be tested, and to make a thorough exploration of the "Big Ore Bed." This work was gone on with under the superintendence of Mr Edwards and Mr. Barber of the Cobourg and Peterboro' Railway Company. Some two or three hundred tons of ore were taken out of what is known as the "middle bed," fronting on Crow Lake. At this point the depth of the excavation was about nine feet below the level of the lake, at high-water mark, and the deeper the miners went, the better the ore turned out to be. In order more fully to test the extent of the bed, a shaft was sunk about half a mile from the "middle bed," towards the centre of the iron mountain, in what is known as the "sand pit. "It will be recollected by the reading of "Notes by the Way," some four weeks ago, in giving a description of the work going on at this place, it was said that preparations were being made to sink this shaft. The work was gone on with, and it has been found that the same indication exist as at the middle bed proving conclusively that the same vein runs through the entire mountain Specimens of this ore were sent on to Pittsburg, and a report of the operations was also forwarded It was at first determined to send a hundred tons to be smelted, but the Pittsburg men were satisfied with the appearance of the ore without putting so large a quantity to that test. Indeed, the quality of that forwarded was so superior to what they expected, and the resort of the extent and richness of the beds so flattering, that they half suspected the parties interested had conked the reports. To remove all objections, and put the question beyond doubt, Mr. R. Jennings, Superintendent of Brady's Bend Iron Works, Pennsylvania, was induced to visit Marmora to examine what had been done, and make a further exploration. This visit was made last week, Mr. Dumble, of Cobourg, accompanying Mr. Jenning to Marmora. It may be well to satisfy the natural enquiry, as to who is this Mr. Jenning. We may say first that he is an Englishman by birth, a theoretical and practical Geologist, of known ability and large experience. He is the gentleman who opened up the Iron and Copper Mine of Lake Superior, and whose practical as well as theoretical knowledge in the exploration of that mineral region, the world is chiefly indebted for the developments which have there been made. He is considered as the great iron authority in Pennsylvania, and therefore any opinion he might give must be valuable. Mr. Jennings spent two days at Marmora, examining the ore which had been taken out, the beds from which it had been taken, and the general formation of the "Big Ore Bed" and fully corroborated the reports which had been previously made by Mr Edwards and Mr. Barber. He is fully satisfied that the ore now got out in the middle bed, and that at the sand pit, will yield at least 70 per cent, and that as they go deeper and further into the heart of the mountain, still richer ore will be obtained. There is no question in his judgment that the "Big Ore Bed," is one vast deposit of iron ore, and of a quality that is not excelled in the world; indeed, he said, speaking of some specimens he was examining, that "no better ore ever went into a furnace." He also made an examination of the "Cain Ore Bed," on the north-western shore of the lake, but is not so well satisfied with the quality of that ore.

Mr. Jennings' opinion was asked of the specimens of Copper ore which had been sent from different localities in the back country, and he had no hesitation in pronouncing the quality superior, and gave it as his opinion that where such specimens were found there must be in the vicinity large deposits of the ore—He was highly pleased at the specimens of Copper, and his position as to the existence of the ore in large quantities must be encouraging to those holding Copper lands, as well as to the country at large. Respecting the Lead ore of Tudor, he said he never saw better, and of other minerals he spoke encouragingly.

This testimony, as will appear evident to every one, is of the highest value, and will serve to convince those who may still be incredulous, that we have one of the richest mineral countries in the world at our very doors, rich in iron, in copper, in lead, in lithographic stone, in marble, and other minerals.

BURIED ALIVE.—In a late debate in the French Senate, on the petition of a Mde Cornol, setting forth the danger of burying those who are not dead by hasty interments, Cardinal Donnet, Archbishop of Bordeaux, recited three cases of living persons supposed to be dead, whom, during his experience as a priest he had saved from burial. In two cases there was complete restoration of life—one of the persons so rescured, a lady of distinguished family, is now a happy wife and mother. A fourth case told by the Archbishop accounts for his long attention to the subject. He said:—"In the summer of 1826, on a close and sultry day, in a church which was excessively crowded, a young priest who was in the act of preaching was suddenly seized with giddiness in the pulpit. The words he was uttering became indistinct, he soon lost the power of speech and sank down on the floor. He was taken out of the church and carried home. All was thought to be over Some hours after the funeral bell was tolled, and the usual preparations made for the interment. His eyesight was gone; but if he could see nothing, like the young lady I have alluded to, he could hear, and I need not say that what reached his ears was not calculated to reassure him. The doctor came, examined him, and pronounced him dead, and after the usual inquiries as to his age and the place of his birth &c. gave permission for his interment next morning. The venerable bishop in whose cathedral the young priest was preaching when he was seized with the fit came to his bedside to recite the De Profundis. The body was prepared for the coffin Night came on, and you will easily feel how inexpressible was the anguish of the living being in such a situation. At last, amid the voices murmuring around him, he distinguished that of one he had known from infancy That voice produced a marvellous effect and a superhuman effort. Of what followed I need say no more than that the seemingly dead man stood next day in the same pulpit. That young priest, gentleman, is the same young man who is now speaking before you, and who, more than forty years after that event, implores those in authority, not merely to watch vigilantly over the careful execution of the legal prescriptions with regard to interments, but to enact fresh ones in order to prevent the recurrence of irreparable misfortunes.

EASY ENOUGH.—An old friend, who is bitten by the inflation mania, sets up this problem:—In Canada specie payment has not been suspended, nor wages increased. On this side we are suffering to the very utmost from a superabundance of irredeemable paper; and yet, to the amazement of the advocates of a metallic basis, the laborers of Canada flock to this side, to receive our high wages, in fact, rather than to remain in Canada to work for the specie basis low rates of wages. Why is this?—Would no 'Resumption' here put a stop to this emigration from Canada? If so, is that to be labored for? Answer—If our friend will only recur to the history of Law's Mississippi scheme, he will find that, while it was in operation, laborers flocked from hard money regions to Paris faster than they now flock from Canada to our side of the line. And if a rum spring should suddenly burst from the base of the Alleghany mountains, we have no doubt that laborers and others would flock to that also. They flocked to this country in 1845 and 1836; but that did not prevent the collapse of 1837. Running indeed always makes good times, just as getting drunk increases vital action; but pay day and getting sober, though unpleasant, are inevitable. We hold it advisable for a people not to run in debt and for an individual not to get drunk. And our high wages and high prices prove that we as a people are running in debt, so long as our currency inflation shall continue. We move that we get out of it and avoid the slow inevitable crash.—N. Y. Tribune.

A young man named Doheny, son of Michael Doheny of 1848, the real originator of American Fenianism, has been arrested at Cork.

GREAT FIRE IN OILDOM

On Tuesday the greatest fire ever known in an oil district took place at Petroleum Centre, Penn., leaving a horrid and fearful amount of ruins. The conflagration began at the Demas Well, where two men were engaged in charging a new tank, containing oil to the amount of 300 barrels. One of the staves being forced out of the bottom, created a vacuum, through which the oil ran out, running down the run; communicated with an engine house, and there caught from the fire in the furnace. From this point it rapidly spread to the oil tanks of the Ocean Oil Company, than to the Artic well and No. 20, Patterson & Dickey No. 19, thence down the run to different wells, five in number belonging to the Braden and Myers, and Braden & Tennent leases, which were soon enveloped in one huge mass of flames With no earthly means of checking the fearful tide it rolled down everything combustible, sweeping every object before them. It soon found a channel, which carried the burning mass into Benn hoff Run, catching in its way three refineries, some or more buildings, and several wells in the progress of drilling. Less than 15 minutes from the breaking out of the fire, it was emptying itself into Oil Creek, at the mouth of the run, thus presenting to the eye a terrible mountain of black smoke and flame nearly a mile in length. The damage is estimated at $150,000 Two men are reported burned seriously, three fatally, and Frank McKenzie, is already dead. He was the most horrid sight ever witnessed, being nothing but a blackened, charred mass of flesh when extricated from the devouring element, Both eyes were burned out, and he was in every way unrecognizable. Another man is reported to have burned to death in a derrick, and one jumped from the top of another derrick to save his life, and was slightly injured.

How the Confederates got War Supplies from the North.

The Matamoras Ranchero of February 17, in reply to certain statements made by Gen. Weitzel, makes some startling revelations, which are important if true. Speaking of the contraband trade during the war, it says:—"All the way from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and New Orleans, lovers of the Union came to Matamoras to exchange the very articles the rebels wanted for high priced cotton. Guns and ammunition, however, to a very limited extent found their way here; but everything else that could be thought of, in any manner serviceable to the rebels, came in abundance from New England, and were directly sold to the rebels by blatant Union men. Beast Butler & Brother actually shipped from New Orleans to a staunch rebel house here, for rebel use, a shipload of pickled pork. Not only did they send a shipload of pork, but Butler & Brother sent out here for cotton exchange account, various ship loads of United States army supplies, which went directly into Texas through their accommodation house. Wm. H. Seward Secretary of State, wrote to Consul Pierce, inquiring into the status of the rebel trade, and whether or not the supplies constantly out from the North went into Texas; and, if so, what steps could be taken to stop such work, or something to that effect. Mr. Pierce replied by informing Mr. Seward of the exact number of vessels in the offing at Bagdad, their sizes and nationality, and with what load. The honorable Secretary was informed that the larger portion of goods arriving here and going to Texas came directly from American ports, and all such trade could be stopped only by refusing clearances to vessels, or by occupying the east bank of the Rio Grande from Eagle pass to Boca del Rio. With this information before their eyes, what did Secretary Seward and President Lincoln do?—They did not refuse clearances to vessels, but knowingly allowed the trade to continue. Now we have to ask what became of Gen. Weitzel's charge, that our merchants and the vice consuls who signed that protest engaged in contraband trade with rebels? Should not Gen. Weitzel amend his charges so as to include Butler, his former master, William H. Seward, and the President of the United States; or else withdraw his charges against our merchants and the vice consuls? Lincoln and Seward cleared the vessels after being notified of their non-takeable destination; Butler shipped supplies, whilst commanding at New Orleans, for rebel destruction and consumption; Yankee skippers bought them, and, in most instance, Yankee shippers received them here and sold them to the rebels. Now, if Gen. Weitzel wants any more information touching the question as to who were guilty of carrying on the contraband trade with the rebels, we would inform him that ex Governor Senator Sprague of Rhode Island, had his fingers in to the tune of two millions of dollars. After the Secretary received an answer from Consul Pierce, to his inquiries, ten times as many goods were shipped from American ports to this place as before; and in one month seventeen millions of dollars in assorted merchandize were shipped from New York alone."

A MENACE TO NAPOLEON.

By this afternoon's telegram from New York, we learn that the Herald's Washington telegram says it is now admitted that the resolutions guaranteeing the Mexican loan will pass the House of Representatives. It is understood that a number of members will vote for it for the purpose of giving Napoleon to understand that the country is in earnest in regard to its enforcement of the Republic of Mexico. Their votes will in some instances be given for the measure so that, with its passage in the House, Napoleon will take the hint and withdraw from that country. It is understood that, after its passage in the Lower House, it will be held in the Senate to see whether the French Emperor will take the hint without further action by Congress. Both Congress and the President are very determined and positive in their opposition to the Imperial Mexican scheme. While there is no disposition to bring on any serious complications with Napoleon, there is a determination to do something to show him that the country will not submit to any double dealing or doubtful course on his part.—Hamilton Times.

National Monument to Lord Palmerston.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer brought forward the motion of which he had given notice of which he had given notice, praying that Her Majesty would give directions that a monument be erected in St Peters, Westminster, to the memory of Viscount Palmerston. He referred to the precedents of the two Pitts and Pardical, and touched on the principle points of Lord Palmerston's career, particularly on his connection with the extension of constitutional liberty on the continent, and his deep and unfailing interest in the suppression of the Slave trade. He eulogised his genial temper, which was incapable of enduring anger, his courage, his tact and ingenuity, and his old English delight in a stand up fight. He concluded by expressing a conviction that as Lord Palmerston had been rewarded for his long labors by the attachment and trust of all classes of the people, so this proposal to perpetuate his memory would meet with the enthusiastic support of all parties.

Mr Disraeli said that he could not allow an occasion to pass in silence on his side of the house. The vote just proposed was acquiesced in by him and his colleagues with the warmest sympathy. They all agreed that the country ought to perpetuate the memory of a minister, who combined in his own person the two great qualities that made a statesman, viz—energy and experience. He cordially coincided with the testimonial to a man who had commanded both their admiration and love. (Cheers.)

Mr. Beresford Hope trusted that the monument about to be erected to the memory of that great man would be worthy of the name it was intended to bear. Sir J. Packington hoped there would be no delay in erecting the monument. The vote for the monument was then put and carried unanimously.

CONFIRMING JEFF DAVIS.—An additional record of the prison life of Jeff Davis is furnished by a Fortress Monroe correspondent. Jeff's health continues good, and he keeps up the same habits to which he has been accustomed for some time past, including his daily outdoor exercise. He reads much, and keeps well posted on passing events. An officer who recently undertook to draw out the rebel ex-chieftain on Fenianism met with a complete failure. Jeff, though a great portion of his time disposed to be social and conversational, is frequently seized with fits of sourness and reticence. He seldom alludes to his trial.

James Stephens in New York.

It is the belief of many persons that the Irish revolutionary chief, James Stephens, is at present secretly concealed in this city under the protecting wings of Head Centre O'Mahony, waiting to see if the British government will claim him as a refugee from justice, or a felonious jail breaker under the extradition treaty between this country and Great Britain. A mysterious looking personage came over on the steamer Fulton, which reached this port from Havre on Tuesday last. This individual was noticed by all the passengers on the Fulton from his retiscent bearing and partial resemblance to the published portraits of the Irish Maximini. Whether he unlaunched himself to his fellow-Fenians on board of the Fulton, and declared himself to be the Simon pure, bona fide article, or C. E. I. R. it is not known, but it is certain that the engineers, fireman, and many of the passengers of Fenian proclivities, believed the stranger to be James Stephens, and on the arrival of the vessel at her dock, a close carriage appeared on the wharf, as if by appointment, and the mysterious stranger, leaving the side of the steamer, entered the carriage, closed the blinds, and the carriage disappeared in the sinuous streets leading from the North River. It is asserted by some of the Fenians in this city that Stephens is closeted with O'Mahony, and that there is a deadly struggle going on between the Head Centres for the spoils, which can only have one result, namely, the confinement of the C. E. I. R., to the lowest dungeons of the O'Mahony mansion. It is believed that Stephens will attempt to take the direction of affairs into his own hands, but it is also believed that John O'Mahony will make a desperate fight for the position he has held so manfully. It is presumed that Mrs. Stephens is also in this city, as it is stated that Head Centre O'Mahony has purchased one thousand dollars worth of jewelry, consisting of neck laces, a gold watch, and some other costly articles of bijouterie for a lady's use. These articles are to be presented to Mrs. Stephens, if that lady has not already received them. Mrs. Stephens is described by the Fenians who were acquainted with her in Dublin, as a lady of about twenty five years of age, of medium stature, with large, lustrous brown eyes, dark masses of hair, a pretty face, full of Irish freshness and health, and a pleasing, lady-like and dignified manner. Mrs. Stephens is the sister of George Hopper, a merchant of Dublin, who was deeply implicated in the Fenian conspiracy, and was sentenced to two years imprisonment. Mrs. Stephens is also the cousin of Mrs. Marquis, the wife of the Governor of the Bridewell, from which James Stephens escaped. It is presumed that Stephens will be compelled to give an account of his stewardship to the Brot

A GOOD HORSE.

"There is much pleasure and profit in the ownership of a good horse, and but very little of either in a bad one;" so parties from whom we receive a bad horse, many, however, are in possession of such who need not be. We think there are few horses so bad but that their condition can be improved and rendered more valuable and useful to their owners, to effect which, there is nothing equal to "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine;" it has effected astonishing results in thousands of cases. 14

Family Reading.
Literary Extracts
Selected and Original Poetry.
Correspondence.
Commercial Reviews.
Home and other Market Reports.

And during the Session of the Legislature,

A Concise Summary of Parliamentary Proceedings, and

The Speeches of Prominent Politicians.

In a word, no pains or expense will be spared to make The Post a first class weekly journal, worthy of British America, and a faithful exponent of public opinion,—alike welcome to the politician and the general reader.

In its political character, The Post will be firm in its adhesion to the Liberal cause,—knowing neither sect, nationality, nor sectional prejudices. It will seek to perpetuate the happy connexion subsisting between British America and Great Britain, and to that end will advocate the great measure now under discussion for the Confederation of all British America under one government as being best calculated to cement the Empire, and to promote the happiness of these provinces, develop their vast internal resources and open up new channels of commerce.

Especial efforts will be made to place before the public, reliable information as to the character, resources, and capabilities of the great, but comparatively unknown, regions of the valley of the Ottawa—its numerous tributaries and new settlements.

☞ Friends at a distance who will send in the names of five subscribers (with the cash) will be entitled to a copy of the paper for a year gratis, and all others are respectfully invited to send in lists of reliable persons who may be willing to become subscribers on the credit terms.

FINKLE & LYON
SEWING MACHINE CO.

OFFICE 591 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

GUARANTEE.—After a fair trial, if any purchaser does not regard the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine as superior to any machine in market, he can return it and have his money. It has taken many of the highest prizes.—is less complicated than any other first class machine,—does a wider range of work without changing,—requires no taking apart to clean or oil, and no "lessons" to set needle, regulate tension, or operate machine.

N. B. Any Clergyman sending us two orders for Machines, shall receive one for himself as a present. The same proposition is extended to Professors and Teachers.

We have now completed our New Manufactory at a cost of some $200,000, including New Patents and important Improvements; and the object of the above proposition is to secure the immediate introduction of our improved machine into every town in the United States without incurring the great expense of a travelling agent.

This proposition cannot avail in towns occupied by our own agents.

Please send for descriptive Catalogue, with samples of sewing.

HOW TO EARN A HOME.

The other evening I came home with an extra ten dollar bill in my pocket—money that I had earned by out-of hours work.—The fact is that I'm a clerk in a down town store at a salary of $600 per annum, and a pretty wife and a baby to support out of it.

I suppose the income will sound amusingly small to your two and three thousand dollar office holders, but nevertheless we contrive to live very comfortably upon it. We live on one floor of an unpretending little house, for which we pay $150 a year, and Kitty—my wife, you'll understand—does all her own work, so that we lay up a neat little sum every year. I've got a balance of two or three hundred dollars at the savings bank, the hoard of seven years, and its astonishing how rich I feel! Why Rothschild, himself, wasn't a circumstance to me!

Well, I came home with my extra bill, and showed it triumphantly to Kitty, who of course was delighted with my industry and thrift.

'Now, my love,' said I, 'just add this to our account at the bank, and with interest at the end of the year——'

I do think I commenced casting interest and calculating in my brain. Kitty was silent, and rocked the cradle musingly with her foot.

'I've been thinking, Harry,' she said, after a moment's pause, 'that since you've got the extra money, we might afford to buy a new rug. This is getting dreadfully shabby, my dear, you must see'

I looked dolefully at the rug; it was worn and shabby enough, that was a fact.

'I can get a new velvet pattern for seven dollars,' resumed my wife.

'Velvet—seven dollars!' groaned I.

'Well, then, a common tufted rug like this, would cost only three dollars,' said my cautious better half, who, seeing she could'n carry her first ambitious point, wisely withdrew her guns.

'That's more sensible,' said I, 'we'll see about it.'

'And there is another thing I want,' continued my wife, putting her hand coaxingly on my shoulder, 'and it is not all extravagant either'

'What is that?' I asked, softening rapidly.

'I saw such a lovely silk dress pattern on Canal St. this morning, and I can get it for six dollars—only six dollars, Harry! It's the cheapest thing I ever saw.'

'But haven't you got a pretty green silk dress?'

'That old thing! Why Harry I've worn it ever since we've been married.'

'Is it soiled or ragged?'

'No, of course; but who wants to wear the same green dress forever? Everybody knows it is the only green dress I have.'

'Well, what then?'

'That's just a man's question,' pouted Kitty. 'And I suppose you have not observed how old-fashioned my bonnet is!'

'Why I thought it looked very neat and tasteful since you put on that black velvet winter trimming.'

'Of course you men have no taste in such matters.'

We were silent for a moment. I am afraid we both felt a little cross and out of humor at one another. In fact on my journey home, I had entertained some serious thoughts of exchanging my old silver watch for a more modern time-piece of gold and had mentally appropriated the ten dollars for furthering that purpose. Savings banks reflections had come later.

As we sat before the fire, each wrapped in thought, our neighbor, Mr. Wilmot knocked at the door. He was employed in the same store as myself, and his wife was an old family friend.

'I want you to congratulate me,' he said taking a seat. 'I have purchased that little cottage on the Bloomingdale road to day.'

'What, that beautiful little wooden cottage with the piazza and lawn and fruit garden behind?' exclaimed Kitty, almost enviously.

'Is it possible?' I cried. A little cottage home of my own, just like that I had often admired on the Bloomingdale road, had always been the one crowning ambition of my life—a distant, and almost hopeless point, but no less earnestly desired.

'Why, Wilmot,' said I, 'how did this happen? You've only been in the business eight or ten years longer than I, at a salary but a trifle larger than mine, yet I could as soon buy up the Mint as purchase a cottage like that.'

'Well,' said my neighbor, 'we have all been working to this end for years. My wife has darned, patched, mended, and saved, we have lived on plain fare, and done with the cheapest things. But the magic charm of the whole affair was that we laid aside every penny that was not needed by actual, positive want. Yes I have seen my wife lay by red coppers, one by one.'

'Well, you are a lucky fellow,' said I with a sigh.

'Times are hard, you know, just now, and the owner was not what you call an economical man, and he was glad to sell even at a moderate price. So you see that even 'hard times' have helped me!'

When our neighbor was gone, Kitty and I looked meaningly at one another.

'Harry,' she said, 'that rug isn't so bad after all, and my green silk will do a year longer, with care.'

'And a silver watch is quite as good for all practical purposes, as a gold repeater,' said I. 'We will set aside all imaginary wants.'

'The ten dollar bill must go to the bank,' said Kitty, 'and I'll economise the coppers just as Mrs. Wilmot did. O how happy she will be among roses in that cottage next spring!'

Our merry tea-kettle sung as a cheerful little song over the glowing fire that night, and the burden was, 'Economy and a home of your own, amid the roses and country air!'

NAMES OF COUNTRIES.

Europe signifies a country of white complexion; so named because the inhabitants there were of a lighter complexion than those of either Asia or Africa.

Asia signifies between, or in the middle, from the fact that geographers then placed it between Europe and Africa.

Africa signifies the land of corn, or ears (?) It was celebrated for its abundance of corn and all sorts of grain.

Spain a country of rabbits or conies.—When this country was once so infested with these animals that the inhabitants petitioned Augustus for an army to destroy them.

Italy, a country of pitch; from its yielding great quantities of black pitch.

Hibernia, is utmost, or last inhabitation; for beyond this westward, the Phœnecians never extended their voyages.

Britain the country of tin; as there were great quantities of led and tin found on the adjacent island. The Greeks call it Albion, from the whiteness of its shores, or the high rocks on the western coast.

A dandy wishing to be witty, accosted a young bell-man as follows:

'You take all sorts of rubbish in your cart, don't you?' 'Yes: just in, jump in.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Despatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.

Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, etc, opened on the 15th ult, and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies thronged their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co., No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

Send Twenty-Five Cents to us, and as soon as we receive it we will mail you a Certificate, showing what you are entitled to. If the article or articles please you, send back the Certificate and One Dollar and we will forward you the article, no matter how costly it may be. If the article is not what you wish, state, when you send the Certificate and dollar, what other article of the same value you prefer and we will send it. If you wish more than one Certificate send us $1 and we will send five; for $2, eleven; for $5, thirty; for $10, sixty; for $15, one hundred.

Agents are wanted in the Army and in every place. We have an immense stock of goods to dispose of, and need a large number of Agents. Our terms to Agents are very libe al and some even of our Lady Agents are making from $5 to $20 a day We give Agents 50 per cent on all Certificates they sell provided they remit not less than $1 for eight.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMETS constructed on a truly scientific principle That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrumen is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings re attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independe t of the case, thereby dispensing with the old heavy frame of stringing by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
W. A. Burdett,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Baril,
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Sam. Henry Fry	Charles Feudel

Mr. EGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal verisimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5.—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilliancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr S. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN

SEWING MACHINES.

EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB. 14th, 1860.

Salesrooms. { 536 Broadway, New York. / 352 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles and more than possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shoe stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nainsook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health

The strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it also an impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply themselves with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

Being in a more especial manner do we elicit the patronage of

Merchant Tailors,	Corset Makers,
Coach Makers,	Gaiter Fitters,
Hoop Skirt Manufactures.	Shoe Binders,
Shirt and Bosom Makers.	Vest and Pantaloon Makers,
	Dress Makers.

Relief in Ten Minutes.

BRYAN'S

PULMONIC WAFERS!

The most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered for all diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, Difficult Breathing, Sore Throat &c. &c.

THESE Wafers give the most instantaneous and perfect relief, when preserved with according to directions never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health, who have tried other means in vain. To all classes and all constitutions they are a blessing and cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or how severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly deranged. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

TO VOCALISTS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS, these Wafers are peculiarly valuable, they will in one day remove the most severe occasional hoarseness and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and inflexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass, and clearness, of which purpose they are regularly used by many Professional Vocalists

THE MECHANIC.

Mechanics! whose toil is the wealth of the nation
Whose breasts are its bulwarks when danger is nigh;
Though humble your lot and despised your vocation,
You have honour and wealth that the world cannot buy
The minions of wealth may affect to despise you,
Pronouncing you ignorant, sordid and base,
But the moment will come that shall teach them to praise you,
The scorn they have written, themselves shall erase.

Not theirs is the hand that can turn back the billow
That threatens to sweep o'er our altars and homes,
They may live in the breeze that but plays with the willow
But woe unto them when the hurricane comes.
They must call upon you in the moment of danger,
When the war banner spreads its red folds to the air,
When our homes are assailed by the hands of a stranger,
And our valleys re-echo with the cries of despair.

Where of Rome's faded grandeur her ruins are telling,
Where Athens proud temples reflect each the sun,
In Palmyra's streets, now the jackal's lone dwelling,
Are recorded the triumphs by industry won
There is not a nation where science has flourished,
There is not a land where the arts have adorned.
But your valor has guarded, your industry flourished,
Thro' glory and shame, the degraded and scorned.

You labor in peace, like a bright, living fountain,
Send rivers of wealth to replenish the earth,
And in war, like the storm-beaten rock of the mountain,
You stand off the blast from the land of your birth
But while in peace, like the sun, o'er your country is shining,
For the wealth you bestow they repay you with sneers,
And the wounds you have borne in her cause unrepining
Ingratitude bathes with adversity's tears.

When the herald of fame in the annals of story,
The deeds of a hero proclaims thro' the land,
The monuments raised to emblazon his glory,
And the deeds they record are the work of the hand
But what your reward when the conflict is ended?
Or where is your niche in the temple of fame?
The laurels you won, with another's are blended
And darkness still rests on the artizan's name.

Yet how not your heart's to a proud man's revailing,
More noble in sorrow than he is in pride;
Attach mania disdain with true dignity smiling,
Your acts will rebuke when your lot they decide.
Let hope cheer your path, though despised and neglected,
Be virtue your shield when temptation is nigh,
By honor's bright code be your actions directed,
Deserve and demand the respect they deny.

For as you languished in darkness and sorrow
Toiling on for the wealth that another must reap;
Each day of regret but the type of to-morrow
As wave reflects wave o'er the face of the deep,
But one after one your chains have been riven
And the day star of hope from the horizon rose;
When the star-spangled flag to Columbia given,
Call'd the children of toil 'neath its shade to repose.

Then high be your aim, for the portals of glory
By freedom unbarred now disclose to the view
A cabinet where to emblazon your glory,
An urn for the tears to your memory due,
When your country's proud star tho' futurity shining,
Beams bright with the deeds that her children have done.
May the loveliest wreath round her diadem twining,
Be that which her toil-worn mechanics have won.

AULD ROBIN GRAY.

CHAPTER II.

Auld Robin, the laird, saw the declaration of his neighbor's dwelling, and he laid his schemes accordingly. He blew and brag git of his siller—tell't Wattie that he understood a' his difficulties—that he had na objections to lend him a helping hand; and that, to crown all, he wad make Jeanie his wife, and the lady o' Stanedykes.

Stanedykes!—but, faither,' asked Jeanie, innocently, 'hoo can ye ca' Jamie Gray an auld man?—or, tha' I were to get him, hoo could either I, or ony ither body, be ladde-o' stanedykes when the auld laird is leevin?'

'Young Jeanie, quo' Walter, gieing a chuckle, 'na, a lass, that were a far ne'er fish to fry. Wha kens about that scapegrace? I'se warrant he's dead and buried long ago. It's the laird himsell I'm speaking about'

'The laird his father!' cried Jeanie, while her heart flaffed as it would have loupit thro' her stays. 'Never speak in that way. Do ye think the laird wad marry me, that might be his grandchild?' and she gaed a wild lauch that sounded hardly canny

'Tak ye, Jeanie!' said Walter, kindly putting her cheek, that had momently grown pale as the driven sna', ay, and be glad to get ye. Oh, Jeanie,' he said, rising hurriedly frae his seat, and pacing about the floor in a distracted like way, 'think on the state we are in; look at me—look at your puir mither—we are beggared out o' house and hin,—and, in a few days, may not have a mouthfu' to eat, or a roof to cover us.'

'Jeanie, my dear baith,' said her mother, leaning her hand on her shoulder, hear what your father says, it is God's truth. Ye're aye done your duty; once what will, I'll aye say that o' ye. But what signifies a', what matters by ganes, it, when a word o' your mouto could lift us out o' this mire of poverty and woe endless, ye keep your teeth close, and determined to act the part o' an undutiful dochter!

Jeanie's heart swelled to her mouth, and while she sat wi' her hands clasped before her and the tears running like beads of boiling water down her cheeks, her once died within her, and she couldna utter a word. Her mind seemed to have fairly given way; and when, in a while, her recollection began to come back, she started, as out of a fearfu' sleep, and in a broken, half screaming way, cried out, 'I wad ruin me here and hereafter—no—no—no—I dare not, cannot do it. O, I wish—I wish—I wish I was dead and buried!' With this she sprit from her chair on the floor, and gaed awa in a dwam, second only to a sinfulness to the awfu' sleep of death.

Next morning, however, she was up betimes, and gaun about the wee affairs of the house (indeed there was now little or naething for her to look after); but her pale cheek, and sunken een, told what she had suffered and was suffering. She seemed to shudder within herself at the bare idea of the struggle which she kent must gain be renewed, as the bleating goat is said to a udder when driven into the den of the hungry wild beast.

So great, however, was the effect of the terrible conflict of yesterday, and such an impression had it made on the minds both of father and mother, that, when they regarded the agonized countenance of Jeanie, they hesitated to put the things to the test, though they kent that, in the course of a few hours, the battle must be either lost or won for ever. Breakfast passed without scarce by being tasted, while Jeanie glanced with a fearful eye on them baith, as, gazing her and lingering about her, they yet feared and kept aloof frae the momentous subject. The dark cloud, she perceived, had not yet passed over their heads. Hour after hour glided away. In the course of the forenoon, Wattie hurriedly shut the auld fanny Bible, which he had set down, as if to pore over; and, putting on his hat, daundered away out like a tipsy man among the fields, without kenning where his path lay.

Jeanie at last sat down to her spinning-wheel as usual, tho' she crooned not away at either o' her favorate tunes, "Crowpies Knowes," or "The Fowers o' the Forest;" and her mother, putting on her spectacles, opened the book her father had shut.—Neither seemed inclined to converse; and, save the humming of Jeanie's wheel, and now and then the mewing of the kitten, that wandered about among the empty dishes in search of its accustomed milk, the hail house was silent. It didna, however, long remain so. Wattie came hurrying in with visible perplexity in his features; and, throwing his hat into a corner, sank down into a chair by the window. Jeanie turned and looked him in the face, but, in the anxiety there painted, saw enough to prevent her looking a second time. The shadow of desolation cam' ower her speerit.

'Jeanie, my dear bairn,' cried Wattie, rising up behind her and patting her tenderly on the back. 'Oh! Jeanie, have mercy on us—speak the word afore it be oure late. Could ye bear to see the father that brought ye up, and the mither that bore ye—could ye bear to see ye're auld mither and me begging our bread frae door to door, or lying on the straw of a poor-house? We thochtna—thochtna to have come to that—and you have in your power to put every thing right. Say but the word; every thing depends on you—our comfort, nay, even our very existence. We'll lie down on our knees before ye on the floor—the parents that gied ye being will throw themsells at yere feet. Ye surely canna spurn them awa wi' disdain! Ye canna think there is a hereafter—and yet see us starving here!'

This was past human tholing. 'What maun I do—what maun I do?' said Jeanie, eagerly, 'tell me what I maun do?'

'Ye maun just say, my dear lassie, that ye'll marry Lord Gray. That's a' Jeanie we want ye to say; and that's no muckle.'—And, as Walter spoke these words, his voice trembled with anxiety and earnestness. Where could Jeanie look for counsel? She looked in her mither's face—and her mither's een seemed to say, 'Oh! Jeanie, do it, or my hart will break!'—Jeanie's hert was all but broken!

'To be sure, to be sure,' she said, putting her hand within her mither's, 'I'll do whatever ye want me. Ony thing ony thing.'

At this very moment Robin Gray, whose coming oure the fields Walter had seen before hurrying in, tapped at the door, carrying in his hand a pair o' fat ducks, his first present of courtship to a famishing family.

It wad be needless here, and a waste bath of time and paper, to gang thro' wi' all the circumstantialities that took place before the wedding, which caused a litter of astonishment and jeering laughter along the bail shore of Fife. But married they were, to the no small consternation of auld blind Nancy, the veteran housekeeper, who hesitated about giving up the keys; till at last, forced to believe her ain een, she concluded that the laird had grown donnard, and lost his right senses. Scarcely less thunderstruck were Walter Grahame and his wife, when they fand what a few days had brought forth; but the accepted bill, the stock in pantry, and the calls of many that scarce a week ago me passed their door, like the Levite, on the opposite side, assured them that all was but a dream.

Jeanie saw her faither and mither once more raised frae misery to comfort, and felt herself the lady o' Stanedykes. Of gauds and gear she had enough and to spare. Some, of course wad tak it for granted she was happy; that, however, is another question.

It was in the thoughtful month of September, when the yellowing leaves the heavy clouds, and the shortening days, remind man of the fate that sooner or later awaits him; and, it might be, some five or six weeks frae the date of puir Jeanie's marriage, that, ae gloaming, as she was sitting at the far end o' the garden, behind the house, under the bourtree-bush, thinking, maybe, mournfully o' the days that were gone, a man, dressed in a sailor's jacket bursts suddenly thro' the hedge and stood before her!

Hey gazed on each other for some time without speaking. His een were riveted upon her, and pierced tho' Jeane's soul; yet the couldna turn her head away.—What, oh, heaven and earth! man she saw wha stood before her—when she was her ain Jamie Gray looking int her heart—when she thoch of what had passed atween them, and when she thoght on what she now was—the faither's wife!

He spoke not a word; but, with a smile of contempt, slowly raising up his finger opposite her face, he gave a long slow hiss of the bitterest scorn, turned on his heel, and departed.

Jeanie was carried to bed in raging fever; and the land wha had heard of his son's arrival, inquired it at once, in the fondness of his jealousy, to the right cause. With the wild fury of a madman, he taxed her wi' having broken thro' the vow she had so lately sworn to afore the minister. All the wicked passions of his wicked heart were roused up like serpents in her then dens. He stampit and swore about his son on the whinbrink of his unnatural hatred; he shook his head owre the deeing Jeanie telling her that she, like the rest, was but born to deceave men; and cursed the day that ever gave birth to such an unfortunate, miserable wretch as himsell.

An awful night of tempestuous horror frowned over, and next morning Jeanie was out o' mind and delirious. She muttered and raved constantly about Jamie asking why he had been sae lang, lang o' coming? What place of the West Indies they had buried him in?—and to take away the man in the sailor's claes that was aye standing afore her. Grace was at last used to comfort her to her bed; and auld sun-blind Nancy, standing wi' her hands on her sides in the middle of the floor, casting a leer first on the bed where lay the distracted and dying bride, and then on the laird, that was pacing up and down the room wi' his hands behind his back, mumbled, between her teeth, "What think ye now, master, o' yer bonna bit wife?"

Her strength at last totally exhausted, Jeanie fell asleep, late in the afternoon; and the laird bidding a body leave the room darkened the windows, and sat down to doze in the leather elbow chair by the bedside, where the sick nurse had been sitting. Scarcely had he closed his een, when he fand something unpercatch sqeezing him. He started forit, and lookit up. It was Jeanie's hand that held a grup of his coat sleeve, so forcibly that he felt her finger nails piercing the flesh o' his withered arm. Scarcely could the hand be drawn away, though the spark of life had fled for ever!

Jamie was never seen in Fife after.

Some say that he was shot in a sea-fight off the Nore; and others that he was the stranger that threw himself oure the pier of Leith. The truth is, that nacbody ever heard ony mair about him.

Auld Lord Gray pat out ten years after Jeanie's judgment-like departure; but he never could be said, from that time, to be properly in his right mind, losing his faculties, ane after another, and growing, as the frailties of age, a kind of second hairn, or rather natural. However, let the truth aye be spoken, he had his beef-tea or chicken-soup regularly every day; and his swelled legs, carefully wappit up in the finest Welsh flannel, were laid on a stool wi' a silk cushion by the dautit hands of sand-blind Nancy

Jeanie's gravestone is in the southmost corner of the kirkyard of Dysart; but the ee dug is now scarcely legible, from the effects of the rain and sea-winds on a soft stane. On the top o't there's the figure of a wee angel blawing a trumpet; but sae defaced as not to be able to scare away the sea-gulls, that, coming up frae the shore, sail round and round about it, and at last light upon't wi' a scream, as if it were the grave of some auld sailor of their acquaintance they had come up on purpose to pay a visit to.

An Extraordinary Confession.

THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN.

The Louisville papers have published an extraordinary statement made by a prisoner in jail in that city, named Sterling King, who asserts that he is the person who attempted the life of Secretary Seward, last April. The Louisville Courier says:—

"We chance to be personally cognizant of the antecedents of this pretended conspirator. He claims to be a native of Virginia, and states that he was a cousin of Horatio King, formerly assistant postmaster general.

"In 1863 he figured as a lawyer in Cincinatti, and also obtained permits for the shipment of goods to Memphis. While thus engaged, he was arrested by the military authorities, charged with uttering disloyal sentiments, tried by court martial, and sentenced to six months' labor on the fortifications back of Covington, with a ball and chain attached to his leg. For some reason the sentence was not carried into effect.

"Some time afterward he appeared in Abingdon, Virginia, where he was sporting the uniform of a Confederate colonel. Gen. John H. Morgan arrested him as a spy; he was tried by a court martial and sentenced to be hung. But in this case, as in many others, good luck attended him, and he managed to escape to the Federal lines.

"We know nothing of King's operations subsequent to his escape from Virginia, until he was lodged in our city jail, on the charge of stealing horses and buggies."

The following is from the Democrat:—

"King states that he was the man who killed President Lincoln. He says that he entered the theatre as any other person, purchasing a ticket and paying for it. At the appointed time he entered the private box, in Ford's theatre, Washington, where Mr. Lincoln was, and he shot him with a single-barrel pistol, which he let fall at the time he leaps from the box. He gives as his object for using a single-barrel pistol that he was compelled to leave it behind him, and if it had been a revolver those in the box might have used it against him.—He further says that after he shot the President and leaped from the box, he passed by several persons, but one of whom he knew, Miss Laura Keene, and she did not know him. According to his statement, J. Wilkes Booth, who it is said was the murderer of Lincoln, was in the rear of the theatre awaiting with horses. From the vicinity of Ford's theatre, he states that he went to the residence of Secretary Seward, and, after forcing an entrance, he made an attack upon the secretary himself cutting him in the throat with a bowie knife. He says that after young Seward was knocked down, the old man lagged not to be murdered, and that he struck the blow to silence him. His only regret seems to be that he did not kill the secretary. He says that the statement published to the papers, that there were two persons in the affair, is false, as he is the man who shot the President and made the attack upon Secretary Seward. He says that there was another person in the affair who has not yet been apprehended, who was to have killed Stanton, but he failed to fulfil his pledge.

"In regard to Booth, he says that Booth had nothing to do with the killing, with the exception of assisting him to make his escape from the city of Washington. He gives in his written statement, which he is now in the hands of the military, the route he pursued after leaving Washington. He says that the man killed in the barn and who is said to have been Booth, was a prisoner who escaped from the Ohio prison. He claims to have, in company with Booth, gone from Washington to Canada, and from thence to the Island of Cuba. He states that his object in returning to the United States was for the purpose of releasing Jeff. Davis, the President of the Confederate States.

"In regard to Mrs. Surrat, who was executed as one of the conspirators, he says that she knew nothing of the conspiracy. The parties who planned the affair, three of whom have never been heard of, met regularly at the house of Mrs. Surratt, but she knew nothing of their designs. He says that he was stopping at the house of Mrs. Surratt some ten or twelve days previous to the execution of the plot.

"There are two prisoners now in the jail, Llewellyn and Grimes, who say that they know something of the affair, and it may be that the tale has been concocted for the purpose of getting the three released from the charges now against them, and having them turned over to the military authorities.

"The above statement was made to Generals Jeff. C. Davis and Watkins, at the jail on Tuesday, after having been related to two or three of the prisoners and policeman Bligh. Finding that his statement was likely to get him into very serious difficulty King determined to put an end to his miserable existence. He asked the privilege of having a small penknife, which was granted him. With this he opened the veins of the left arm, and would have bled to death, had it not been that the attempt was discovered by his cell mate and an arm given. We yesterday paid a visit to King in his cell, and found him too low to speak. The alarm in regard to his attempt to commit suicide was given about 4 o'clock in the morning, after he had bled for several hours."

Extravagance and Over-dressing.

It is not quite certain that there is not a criminal element in the universal over-dressing of the women of New York. The costliest fabrics, fit for a Queen's wardrobe, or the trousseau of the Duchess de Mouchey, nee Ann Murat—the extravagance of whose brilliant array was a scandal even in Paris—find ready purchasers. On Broadway, you may count hundreds of the once unattainable camel's hair shawls in a five minutes' walk, though their price is augmented greatly; and very rich cloaks, which have the past winter cost three hundred dollars, are so common, and, when worn every day in our dusty streets, so grimy and gray, that one gladly turns to the plain and pretty English beaver when the moth of use will not corrupt, and whose beauty the dusty thieves will not steal.—The most bizarre and shocking fashions have a decided, if brief popularity and the eagerness with which the cheap oridium ornaments are bought and worn by all classes of women is a sad commentary on the article sense which inspires these toilets.

Pray Heaven the wise virgins of the west may gently rebuke their wastful and too profuse cousins of Gotham, in the name of sweet simplicity. If we will pay two dollars for every fantastic nothing which a perverted whim can hunger for when we have but one dollar to pay, which is exactly the condition of a large contingent of this proud Republican, there will come a day when a bitter reckoning must be made. Having had one jolly and grotesque dance of fashion we must pay the greedy piper, who was gay Bassano while he piped and fierce Sojluck in the settlement. While we send gold abroad as if the Hudson were the new Pactolus, we have a paper money as buoyant, a lack, possibly as facetious as the thistledown.

Our overcrowded city forces merchants to pay fifty thousand and seventy thousand dollars rent. The immense absorption of costly wares by the women of the land has stimulated their importation, and the prices asked must be enormous to sustain the dealers. Many business firms lean one against the other. The first brick falling down tumbles the whole row. Old and sagacious business men now protest a pause and much distress. It is, perhaps only individual economy which can make a reform worth anything.—American Paper.

The Secrets of Liquor Making.

The New York Express says:—"There has been a trial before the United States Court at Albany that has excited much interest from the revelations made as to the manufacture of imitation brandies and other (suppressed) foreign liquors. The developments in this case will establish pretty conclusively, that a vast majority of what is drunk by us as a fine old brandy is flavored with oil of Cognac and various other delectable ingredients known to the trade.—From the evidence it would appear that the brandy seized is part of a lot of fifty casks, a portion taken by the collector of customs of the Champlain district, another part by the collector at Ogdensburg. The latter seizure has been relinquished, and the present litigation is over that taken by Mr. Dunn the collector at Plattsburg. On the part of the government it is claimed that the liquors is a fine imported brandy, and smuggled into the country without the duties imposed by the present tariff. For the defence it is contended that the liquor was manufactured in the city of New York; and that the basis is a pure or neutral spirits, that it is an imitation of "Seignette" Brandy, made by mixing to the spirit the oil of Cognac sweetened to the proper taste with syrup, and colored by a certain admixture of burnt sugar, &c. They further allege, and have given evidence upon the subject that the casks were also manufactured in New York, in imitation of foreign brandy casks, covering them in every particular, even to their hooping, the winding of the hoops in part with French willow twigs, especially imported by the coopers for that purpose washing the casks when made with a solution of copperas, to give them an appearance of age and various other details."

'I love to look upon a young man.—There is hidden sensibility in the breast that at once charms and pains me.'

The daughter of a clergyman happening to find the above sentence at the close of one of her father's unfinished manuscripts, as he had left it in his study, sat down and added:

'Them's my sentiments, exactly, all but the pain.'

Shortly after Dr. Johnson issued the first edition of his Dictionary, he was met by a bevy of young ladies, who congratulated him upon the success of his work, saying with great naivete, they liked it very much as there was no naughty words in it.

'Ah, my little dears,' said the blue old Doctor chucking one of them under the chin 'so you have been looking for them as easily, have you?'

'That's a stupid brut of yours, John,' said a Scotch minister to his parishioner, the peat-dealer, who drove his merchandize from door to door in a small cart drawn by a donkey; 'I never meet you but the creature is braying.'

'Ay, sir,' said the peat-dealer, 'but you ken the heart warms when relations meet.'

BLOWING UP.—Major N———, upon being asked if he was seriously hurt at the burning of a boiler on a steamboat, replied that he was not, as he had been blown up so many times by his wife that a mere steamboat explosion had no effect upon him whatever.

THURSDAY, APRIL 12, 1866.

DINNER TO THE ASHBURNHAM VOLUNTEERS.

The citizens of Ashburnham being determined to do honor to Captain Rogers and the brave fellows who left their homes at such short notice to meet the Fenian foe when he threatened to invade our soil, and who behaved themselves so creditable while on duty—prepared a dinner for the Company, and to it invited the Captains and officers of the other Companies, also the Mayor of Peterborough, Col. Haultain, M. P. P., Sheriff Hall, Rev. Mr. Beck, and Rev. V. r. Clementi, together with other gentlemen of the town and village.

The eatables were provided by the citizens, and the tables laid out in the drill shed of Captain Roger's Company. Three huge tables, the whole length of the shed, were erected, and when the fowl, steak, lamb, and other viands were brought in and laid thereon, they literally groaned under the loads of good things.

The ladies of the village assembled during the evening, and put all things in order. The place was decorated with mottoes, flags and wreaths of evergreens. Red and white were also entwined around the sides and end of the building, and the arms of the Volunteers were placed as stacked, and looped with flags, in memoratium, of the one that has braved a thousand years. The whole was most tastefully arranged, and did credit to the tender sex who arranged the tables, and also to John Burnham Esq., and the other gentlemen who decorated the room, and went to immense trouble in getting up the dinner.

It would be almost invidious to name any one as more interested than the other. All were so earnest in the work, and so desirous of testifying their appreciation of the readiness of those men who had, fearless of consequences, went to the front, not knowing but that the enemy was there before them.

A little after 8 o'clock, the guests were in their places and the rest of the places were almost filled with citizens who had met to do them honor.

A. C. Dunlop, Esq., occupied the chair; Captains Rogers, Leigh, Poole, and Lieut Kennedy occupied the seats on his right, also Rev. Mr. Clementi and A. H. Campbell, Esq.; the seats on his left were occupied by Mayor Scott, Sheriff Hall, Rev. Mr. Beck, D. Sutherland, Esq., and others.

After the good things had been freely handled and enjoyed, the chairman said that he had been instructed to say that it had been intended to invite the whole of the volunteers, but not having a room spacious enough, they were compelled to abandon the idea and confine their invitation to the officers, and hoped that the officers present would convey this to the men. Then ordering a bumper to filled and ready, he said that the toast about to be given needed no remarks, he would only, therefore, have to give it: "The Queen—may she long be the Queen of the Empire, and may we never be separated from that Empire." Received with continued outbursts of cheering.

Mr. York then sang "God save the Queen." "The Governor General" was then given, and was well received.

The toast of the evening, "The Ashburnham Volunteers," was then given.—The chairman making mention of Captain Rogers particularly, whose forefathers fought for the British power, and who himself was the first to board the pirate, the Caroline, cut her out, set fire to her, and send her over the Falls of Niagara. It is needless to say that this toast given and received amid continued cheering.

Capt. Rogers responded in behalf of the Company, saying that he thanked them for the manner in which the health of the company and his own had been drunk. The Volunteers had been called out and they did what was their duty—they obeyed orders. They went at the call to the front and would be found ready to do so again if required. There was some boasting now on the other side, of the great scare, but we were not so scared. They thought they could come over and gobble us up, but we would be found more than a mouthful. He was glad to know that there were thousands of others ready to go as well. If called again they would be as ready, and would never be found in the rear.

Ensign Rogers being called on thanked the Company for the manner the Volunteers had been received, and hoped they would be found ready to fight as well as go to a dinner.

A. C. Campbell, Esq., next proposed the "Army and Navy." This he said was a toast that would be received with enthusiasm by every Briton. In proposing this he felt the difficulty. He applauded the readiness of the Army and Navy of Britain to defend the right and uphold the weak in every portion of the globe. Who could but admire the cool, calm determined courage of those brave men who fought in every clime, under the most scorching suns and chilling frost. And this bravery was never better exhibited than when Waterloo was won. But it was obeying, that made these men, and better than mere mobs; this would enable them to maintain their name and continue to be the conquerors of a thousand fields.

Mr. Knapp then sang, The Englishman. Mr. York gave "The Red, White and Blue." Captain Sutherland being loudly called for, said that there were Nelsons, Howes and Duncans in the Navy yet, and he was glad to say that the little Isle was well guarded and her ships for every sea well manned. Captain Poole responded to the army.

Captain Sutherland gave the next toast of the evening, "Our Guests." Mayor Scott responded, remarking that he felt that Peterborough was a little behind the citizens of Ashburnham, in acknowledging the prowess of the Volunteers. But he was glad to say that he had been informed that it was still in contemplation. He warmly praised the bravery of the British soldiers, and doubted not but that the Volunteers would be as brave if necessity offered.

Rev. Mr. Clementi being loudly called for, remarked that he being a man of peace, it might be wondered how he could be in any way friendly to the spirit of the movement; but when an enemy invaded our country it was the wrong time to preach peace, as peace would be bought too dearly, if at the price of honor. But if we must fight it must be under the Union Jack, as we had no desire to ally ourselves with the American Republic. He spoke in high terms of England and England's Queen, and what England is doing, having 280,000 volunteers as a peace force. He referred to Murphy as the only Fenian in Canada, and also remarked that the Roman Catholics are loyal, and would fight with equal daring for Britain's sway; that the Fenians were not Catholics but renegades.

Captain Carroll being called for remarked, that although no Captain he was ready either as Captain or full private to go to the front and defend the country against any foe. He further said that not a single man in connection or communion with the Catholic Church is a Fenian. The Catholics had fought for this country in '37 and '38, and none had went more willingly to do so, and so would it be again.

Private Brownlee sang "Gay and Happy Still."

Rev. Mr. Beck then proposed the "Volunteers of the County of Peterborough," in a few appropriate remarks.

The song by Sergeant Johnson, "Bold Soger Boy," was then given.

"Bench and Bar," by Mr. Campbell. We regret we cannot give the speech for want of space.

Mr. Scott responded, which we can no more than mention.

J. Burnham, Esq., also responded in one of his best speeches, and was warmly applauded.

D. G. Hatton also responded.

Rev. V. Clementi, in a most telling speech, lauded the action taken by Ashburnham, and declared he was ashamed that as a proprietor in Peterborough, the town was the guest of Ashburnham when it should be Ashburnham the guest of Peterborough.

"The Press," although the last on the list was of course not least, as many more were given and responded, until the wee hours began to warn of another day, when all left for their homes, sorry to part—all being highly pleased with them elves and every body else.

But Peterborough received it from every quarter. Captain Poole, Ensign Clementi, Sergeant Johnston, and a host of others, gave the old woman a drubbing for being behind the age in everything, but especially in her treatment of the brave Volunteers. Let us hope, when she learns that politeness and generosity has been called in question, that she will improve her manners, and do honor to whom honor is due. None deserve better at the old woman's hands than do the volunteers.

The deficiency of last year was set down at $1916.11, but the auditors reckoned $1200 from Railway, as due. This year they do not take the $1200 due from Railway in to account of deficits. This makes matters assume a different appearance. If they had done last year as they have done this year the deficits would have been at last audit $3116.11

This year the auditors take into account of liabilities $1500 voted last year to the Harvey road, but which was neither levied nor collected, and will be put on the roll this year. These two items amounting to $2700 would cause a different appearance to this year's deficiency which is put down at $3294.64. The $1200 is already paid, and has gone to meet the liabilities. But to proceed on the modus operandi of last year, the deficiency would appear thus:—

Deficiency as per audit 1865.....	$3294 64
From Railway Co, reckoned last year, but not this	1200 00
Also for Harvey Road.....	1500 00
	2700 00
Deficiency as per scheme of last year	594 00

Now we do not say that there is anything wrong in the manner of presenting the accounts this year, by no means, but it will be seen that the same method as last year would give a very different result from that of this year, while both schemes might be correct. The deficiency given this year:—

Deficiency of Town Council.	$3294 64
" " Trust Com.....	1200 90
Total deficits.....	4395 54

But taking away $1500 for Harvey road, also $1200 already paid, the true deficit is $1470.24, or taking $1200, only $3175.54 provided we follow out the old method of doing things.

In regard to this $1500 for the Harvey road, the Council pledged itself to pay to the Government that amount. The County Council did the same. The County has since paid their portion, but the Town has not. It was an understanding that the Government would on receipt of this $3000 finish the road. They now demand the deposit of the money as per agreement, and in default thereof threaten to stop the work.—The wise thing for the Council to do, is to pay over the money at once, as agreed.—They can have no control of its outlay. The Government has assumed that, and the remainder of the costs of completing the road too. The Council may complain of mismanagement of those employed, and obtain their removal, but certainly cannot ask control of outlay. To do so would imply the inability of the Government to expend its own money. The County Council considered the bargain a good one and so did the last Town Council, and it is nothing more than just, as well as honorable, to meet the engagements of the late Council. If a new Council will ignore the legitimate acts of a late Council, all the acts of a Council would be useless unless carried into effect before the term of office expires.

AUDITORS' REPORT.

To the Mayor and Town Council of the Town of Peterborough:—

The Auditors of the Town of Peterborough respectfully submit the accompanying documents, viz:—

An Abstract of the Receipts and Expenditure of the Town for the year ending 31st December, 1865, and also a Detailed Statement of the same:

From these it will appear that the receipts during the year amounted to $27823 85, the expenditures for the same time being $26222 64, leaving a balance in the hands of the Treasurer of $1601 21. In addition to these we append, for your further information, the following:—

1st. An abstract of the receipts and expenditure of the Town Trust for the year ending 31st December, 1865, shewing the receipts to be $29658 31, and expenditure $28087 71.

2nd. A statement of the available assets and liabilities of the said Trust for the same period. It will be observed that this shews an apparent deficiency of $4089 89, but this arises in part from there being included in the liabilities the sum of $3000 for overdue debentures, and $8 98 being balance of debts consolidated but not converted into debentures, which, if deducted from the liabilities, would reduce the deficiency to $1080 90, of which sum $282 48 is for interest on sinking fund, and $798 42 a deficiency accumulated during the working of the Trust, which necessarily arose in discounting, and paying interest on overdue debentures at a higher rate than 5 per cent.

3rd. A statement of the consolidated indebtedness of the Town under the management of the Commissioners: this, as shewn by the secretary, was, on the 31st December last, $848 00.

4th. A statement of the available assets and liabilities of the Town for the year before mentioned. The current liabilities of the Town amounted to $5296 97, the available assets to $2002 33, leaving a deficiency of $3294 64, which, together with the sum of $1080 90 deficiency of Town Trust, amounted to $4375 54, total deficiency to be provided for in the estimates of the current year. Under the arrangement made between the Town and the P. H. L. and B. Railway Company, an instalment of $1200 00 became payable on the 1st of January last, but not falling due in 1865, we have not considered this sum as an asset of that year.

5th. A statement of sundry balances due the Town for licenses and fines in Police Court, representing the sum of $214 80, but not knowing how much of this amount is available, we have not included it as an asset.

We have further to certify, that, having examined the books and accounts of your Treasurer, and compared the receipts and expenditures therein with the vouchers for the same, we have found them correct.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

EDG. PEARSE,
CHARLES CAMERON, } Auditors.

THE FENIANS.

These noted worthies are now and then attracting the attention of the press, especially the New York press. Now we hear of them in one quarter, and anon they are in another. The New York World is the organ of the brotherhood, and the indefatigable reporters follow them in their peregrinations. The journal reported that on the 5th instant their actions were mysterious, and they were very reticent in communicating intelligence of the organization; but the World's reporter had succeeded and obtained important information of the intent of that worshipful body.—Plans had been laid and forces organized, and the first blow was about to be struck. Campo Bello, a small island in the Bay of Fundy was to be attacked and made the base of further operations; Newbrunswick was to be taken and, of course, all the cities and towns thereof; and all this to be effected by 5,000 or 6,000 men, and then would follow an immense sale of Fenian lands—the most desirable part of the enterprise. Campo Bello being taken and in the hands of the brotherhood, a Provisional Government was to be formed, and the new Republic was to be named "Emmetia," in honor of Robert Emmett, the celebrated Irish patriot. The country they intend to divide into four provinces, after the manner of Ireland; the provinces to be called Mahonia, Killiana, Stephenia, and Fenia, and then all the Irish citizens of the United States were to be induced to settle in Emmetia. The whole affair, however, appears to have been the crude imaginations of the World's Reporter.

Later still, Bermuda was the point of attack. No such thing, however, has taken place, nor is it likely to take place for some time. So long as the foolish dupes of those unprincipled vagrants provide funds the Reporters for New York Dailies will find something to report.

The Rochester.

The favorite Steamer Rochester, having been greatly improved by the addition of an upper Cabin, the introduction of a new boiler and new wheels, is again on the waters. These improvements will materially add to the comfort of the passengers, while they will also increase the speed of the vessel. Captain Daintry's usual obliging and gentlemanly conduct will be found exerted for the comfort of travellers. See advertisement in another column.

THE JOLLY DOGS MINSTRELS are going to favor us with an entertainment on Tuesday evening. They have given several in other places, and everywhere with decided success. Being of the town, we hope they will get a full house. For particulars see small bills.

CHOLERA AT HALIFAX.

Our exchanges of the 10th instant bring the intelligence that the cholera has already made its appearance in British America.—The Steamship England, from Liverpool, with 1200 passengers on board, partly Irish and partly German, put into Halifax for medical aid. 160 cases of this terrible disease is reported on board the vessel; 40 deaths had occurred.

"Capt. Grace reports that on Tuesday the first case of cholera occurred, since which time 160 more cases have broken out, and 50 deaths have occurred.

She was ordered off by the Government, but owing to the rapid spread of the disease and the engineers being sick, it was found impossible to proceed. She now lies below the light house. Part of the passengers will be placed on board the hospital ship, and shanties erected on the beech for the sick. There will be no communication with the ship. The authorities are doing all in their power to relieve the unfortunate passengers. There are doctors on board to look after the sick. She has 1,202 passengers, and 100 crew. The passengers are principally German and Irish. The Captain thinks the disease was brought on board by the German passengers."

This is a warning to set our houses in order—very little, if any thing, has been done yet to get the place cleaned up. Health officers have been appointed; we trust they are at work. The hot weather is approaching, and no time should be lost.

But what is being done to meet those cases where the unfortunate creatures may not be able to obtain the necessary medical advice and the prescribed remedies. A correspondent of the Examiner, whose heart is generous and his ideas worthy of consideration, mooted the establishing of a dispensary. At the public sanitary meeting this was again spoken of, yet we do not hear that anything has been done. Would it not be wise to have proper arrangements made, and means provided for the first case as well as the succeeding ones? Delays are dangerous; the sooner something is done the better.—The health committe should be up and doing. All are agreed that cleanliness is a preventative of this disease. Let it be tried at any rate; it costs very little, and the pleasure will be a sufficient reward for the trouble.

A word to the intemperate. Do you value your health? If so, the sooner you lay away your potions the better chance you will have to escape the disease. Physicians are all agreed that of those attacked the greater number by far are tipplers and immoderate drinkers; and of deaths the larger part are of those who use ardent spirits; whereas the Temperate man is less liable to be attacked, and more certain of recovery if attacked. If this be so, is it not wisdom to listen to the voice of wisdom, and refrain from the use of those things that do induce disease, and when attacked almost prohibit the possibility of recovery.

CHOLERA REPORTED AT WASHINGTON.—Considerable sensation was created on Saturday, the 7th instant, in this city by the sudden death of a couple in a family of colored people, with all the symptoms of Cholera. Investigation disclosed the fact that the habitation of the family was in an extremely filthy condition, and that others of its members were likely to suffer from the same cause.

Peterboro Literary Club.

The Annual Meeting of the "Literary Club" was held on Thursday evening last, the 5th inst., when the following gentlemen were elected officers for the current year:—

President—James Hall, Esq., Sheriff.
First Vice President—W. H. Scott, Esq., Mayor
Second Vice President—J. M. Burns, Esq., Commercial Bank.
Third Vice President—H. T. Strickland, Esq., Merchant
Treasurer—J. A. Hall, Esq., Deputy Sheriff.
Secretary—Mr. John O'Donnell, Dentist.
Asst. Secretary and Collector—Mr. F. H. Knapp
Librarian—Mr. Wm. Cameron.

The following gentlemen were elected Directors of the Club and members of the Executive Council.

D. McNaughton, Esq., Merchant.
Lieut Col. Haultain, M. P. P.
John Burnham, Esq., Barrister.
J. W. Dunnett, Esq., Merchant.
J. Stratton, Esq., Editor of Examiner.
M. D. Haggart.

Meetings of the Club are held every Thursday evening, for debates, readings and recitations. Manuscripts $1 per year.

The Eye,

We have been favored by the publisher, A. M. Rosebrugh, M. D., with a copy of a pamphlet on the optical defects of the eye, and their treatment by the scientific use of spectacles. The first part relates to optical considerations, in which the nature of light and the theories concerning it are given, with illustrations. The second part relates to the optics of the normal eye, and gives the result of experiments made with lenses. The third part treats of Myopia, or short-sightedness, and also the opposite of this, or the power of seeing things only that are at a distance. The work is neatly printed by Lovell and Gibson, Toronto, and is worth a perusal.

Personal.

We are glad to learn that Mr. John J. McGee has recently passed a very creditable examination before the Board of Examiners for Provincial Land Surveyors, U. C. Mr. McGee is a brother of the Hon. Thos. D'Arcy McGee and has served his apprenticeship to Mr. Fitzgerald, Provincial Surveyor of this town.

Literary Club.

This Evening there will be Readings and Recitations by the following members:—Messrs R. Boswell, John Burnham, J. A. Hall, W. H. Scott, F. H. Knapp, J. O'Donnell, H. T. Strickland and D. Haggart. The public are invited to attend. Doors open at the usual time.

New Publications.

THE ADOPTED DAUGHTER.—This is the title of a book that has just been put into our hands by the Authoress, who is now in Town soliciting subscriptions for the work. The object of the work is to encourage to perseverance those who may be left to depend on their own exertions. It is a tale of real life, written in a moral and religious strain, and from a cursory reading of it we think that it will be found an instructive book for family reading. It is highly spoken of by the press. We trust the work will be freely purchased in Town.

NEW MUSIC.—The Messrs. A. & S. Nordheimer, of Toronto, have just published a new piece of music. The piece is dedicated to the Canadian Volunteers, and is entitled "Canadian Band March." It introduces the popular air of "Old Piney Wood." It may be obtained at Graham & Stratton's, Peterboro.

Mr. Fowler, late of the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton railway, is out in the Globe of the 10th instant, discussing the building of a railroad from Toronto to Owen Sound.

We are pleased to notice from the Rochester Democrat, that the obliging and attentive City Clerk, Mr. Enos, has been re-elected for two years. The following is from the Democrat:—

"E. Frank Enos, who has held the office of City Clerk for two years, was re-appointed unanimously. This is the second time Mr. Enos has been complimented by a unanimous vote. His manner of discharging the duties of the office has been such as to satisfy all parties who have had business to transact with him. It is essential to the Alderman individually that the Clerk be at once competent, faithful and courteous, and finding those great qualities combined in Mr. Enos, they have done wisely to retain him in the position. Under the charter as amended last spring, the term of the office of the Clerk is now two years."

BURGLARS GETTING THEIR DESERTS.—Bristol Bill has been convicted of robbery and sentenced to 5 years in the Provincial Penitentiary. The grand jury found a true bill against the famous Sergeant McDowell, but threw out the bill in Mack's case. The bill in McDowell's place set forth that he had incited Henry Hyde Parkers and William Smyth to feloniously steal $24,382 from the Gore Bank. He, however, is in the land of liberty and "all right." Bristol Bill and Bill Seddons are to be tried on a second count. More than he are likely to get their board and attention at the public cost for a few years.

JEFF. DAVIS AND C. C. CLAY TO BE RELEASED.—From recent rumours, President Johnson it is said will release these two gentlemen on parole. The probability of their ever being tried for the murder of President Lincoln is fast becoming less likely.

Lakefield Game Protection Society.

On Saturday evening a meeting was held in the Village of Lakefield, for the purpose of organizing a Game Protection Society.

The meeting was largely attended, and an efficient committee was appointed, who expressed their determination to use their best endeavors to put an end to the wholesale slaughter of birds and fish at illegal seasons, which has been so long indulged in with impunity in the neighborhood, that both birds and fish are becoming, year by year, scarcer and more scarce.

It need hardly be added that the promoters of this movement are far from contemplating an interference with legitimate sporting.—On the contrary, the establishment of the society will tend, more than anything else, to enhance the pleasure of those gentlemen, whether residents in the neighborhood or visitors from a distance, who are content to allow the game and the fish a brief space during which they may increase and multiply.

The fine for killing game out of season, and which can be levied by any magistrate, is from $5 to $50; with imprisonment for 3 months in default of payment. And although no individual would like to incur the odium of becoming an informer, the case is different now that a society is established; for it becomes the positive duty of the members of the society to lay in information against any person, man or boy, who acts in contravention of the law.—Com.

School Examination.

The pupils of School Section No. 2, North Monaghan, under the charge of Mr. Isaac Campbell, were examined on Friday, 6th inst. There were a goodly number of the parents present, and also Mr. Stratton, Local Superintendent. The pupils in their various classes read with ease and intelligence with correct spelling; and the facility with which they wrought and answered several questions in Arithmetic, proposed by Mr. Stratton and their teacher, showed that they were no strangers to the principles of Arithmetic. Their answering of questions from their various lessons, Geography, &c., gave evidence of strict training. The examination on the whole was very satisfactory. The parents who attended considered the progress of the school highly satisfactory, considering the short time the present teacher, Mr. Campbell, had been over the school.

COMPULSORY EDUCATION.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—I received your note intimating that my last communication had been mislaid, and I did not intend to trouble you again; but seeing at other letter in your publication of the 5th inst., I will feel obliged by your inserting these few remarks on "Civil Rights."

To take an ignorant and neglected child for granting, and deal with him as if he were a responsible being, is believed to be a scandalous abuse of power, and to say the least of it, demoralising; for, as neglected children are better cared for in prison than out of it, they care not how often they are convicted. There are hundreds of wicked parents who care nothing for their children, leave them to beg, or steal, or run about the street all day long; and who would rather see them dead than otherwise.—The law provides no punishment for these monsters. It takes a parent to task for deserting his child; but this is a kind of misusage infinitely worse than desertion, and it is this the law neglects. If it is the duty of society to hang felons, it is more so the duty of society to prevent children growing up to be felons

Hitherto certain principles in human society have been taken for granted for example perfect freedom—individual independence is considered to be by some a most valued possession. But as we see multitudes who cannot take care of themselves, who recklessly turn their children adrift on the public, who from mental imperfection, or some other cause, cannot keep pace and, therefore, cannot compete with their more highly gifted, or at least more persevering neighbors, and who being so incompetent, fall to be supported by the public, or by means furtively acquired. The question may be asked whether individual freedom is in every points of view the blessing it is said to be? Society in imposing on every one the duty of self-government and self-dependence, is bound to see that all are, and ever will be fit for that onerous condition, failing in that particular, it must be prepared to take the consequences.

I am inclined to think that your correspondent "J. E." would not shudder at beholding a man executed for violating a statute he could not read, than why become appalled or horror-struck at compulsory education. It is Friday before I receive the Examiner, and I have to post on Saturday to be in time for your impression, so that I cannot reply to to the letter "C. S. D." till next week.

Believe me to be
Yours, faithfully,
A YOUNG MAN FROM THE COUNTRY.

Bobcaygeon, 7th April, 1866.

LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

LONDON, March 21st, 1866.

Fenianism, the tinderpost and the commission of enquiry into the outbreak in Jamaica, form the principal newspaper themes in England at present. In Ireland considerable excitement has been aroused by an article in the Cork Examiner stating that it has excellent reasons for knowing that the Head Centre (Stephens) recently left this country for America, and that prior to his departure he enjoined upon the Brotherhood in this country, the advisability of paying more attention to peaceful pursuits, for the present, than to warlike preparations. Mrs. Stephens was then in Cork, but left, I understand, by the Inman S. S., for America, a few days ago. It is quite impossible to say whether this is true about Stephens, but if so, the detective force have the consolation of knowing that Stephens has eluded all their well laid plans, and when he said he could escape, if he wanted to, that it was no empty boast. Arrests, &c., still continue to be made in Ireland under the Habeas Corpus Suspension Act. Baronets, pikes, pistols, bullets and other warlike implements are continually being discovered, 25 bayonets were found in a ditch close to the police barracks no latter than Wednesday, last.

The cattle plague returns of the past week seem to show a small decrease in the number of new cases, and an increase in the number of cures effected to diseased cattle. This may be looked on as a very favorable omen, and it is hoped the disease will be overcome in a short time. A day of humiliation and prayer is appointed throughout England on next week but one. Sheep are beginning to take the disease, causing, for the present considerable anxiety in the minds of owners. No very bad cases, however, have been reported yet.

On Thursday the Queen held a court, for presentations, at Buckingham Palace. 250 ladies and gentlemen, principally ladies, were presented to Her Majesty on this occasion, their names having been previously left at the Lord Chamberlain's office, and submitted for Her Majesty's approval.

In the Times, yesterday, it was stated that the Cholera had again made its appearance in Egypt, and that a quarantine for one month had been established at Malta, for all arrivals from Alexandria, however, the latest Alexandria papers received here, dated 8th inst, only give a total of 16 deaths.

The weather in London for the last few days has been unusually fine for that smoke-begrimed city, the thermometer averaging about 40° in the shade. The winter has been very mild this year; not having had snow more than once or twice, and then only for a few hours. From the 1st November until about a week ago, we scarcely had 24 hours cession of rain.

How affairs go on in Canada it is almost impossible to hear in England, the daily papers correspondents, not thinking it worthy of mention in their letters, and certainly we never hear anything of it through the telegrams brought by the Packets, and forwarded per Reuter & Co.

I see, by an evening paper, that in parliament they think the Fenian prisoners arrested under the Habeas Corpus Suspension Act, are rather hardly treated, and, if possible, intend, by law, to put a stop to it. The following is a portion of a speech made by Mr. Blake, in the House of Commons, this afternoon on that subject, which will give the people of Canada some idea of the pleasure of having Habeas Corpus annulled for a time:—

"Mr. Blake, before the Deputy Speaker left the chair wished to call the attention of the Attorney General for Ireland to the severe treatment of political prisoners in that country. The hon member said that shortly after the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act 18 prisoners were arrested and placed in the gaol at Waterford. A Military guard was placed over them, and they were subjected to restrictions of an unusual and extraordinary character. The cellular system was in operation in Waterford Gaol, and they were only allowed one hour for exercise out of the 24, altogether the Court of Queen's Bench had decided that the minimum allowance of exercise should be two hours per day. They were also entirely precluded from all communication with their families or legal advisers, although some of them were in business, and their sudden arrest had caused the greatest inconvenience and loss. In addition to that there were sentries placed outside their cells, in which a light was kept burning through the night, and whenever the guard was changed their rest was disturbed in order that it might be seen that the prisoners were safe. This was most absurd, as if they could succeed in burrowing through the stone walls in which they were incarcerated, there were armed sentinel outside the gaol. A case of peculiar hardship was that of a person named Dillon, otherwise Smith, who was put down for trial without being allowed to see his solicitor. The gaol, instead of being under the control of the military authorities, was entirely in the hands of the stipendiary magistrate of Waterford—a very respectable gentleman, who he was sure did no more than carry out the orders of government. The facts he had mentioned had been comprised in the grand jury at the late assizes, which, of course, was laid before government, but as no notice had been taken of that presentment, and the restrictions remained in undiminished force."

Several members spoke on this subject all of whom seemed to agree with Mr. Blake, among whom was the Attorney General for Ireland who said he entirely agreed with the Hon. Mr. Blake that these prisoners should not be subjected to any restrictions save those absolutely necessary for their safe keeping; they should be treated as untried prisoners, and not subjected to manage which burglars and pick pockets would not have to undergo before trial. The matter should be laid before Government and instructions sent round to prison keepers notifying them not to deal more harshly than necessary with the prisoners.

The English securities exhibited heaviness, and prices were rather lower. Consols were dealt in, at 87¼ to 87; for the account the bargains ensued at 86¾ to ¼; three per cents reduced were taken at 85¾ to ½; new three per cents 85¼ and 85¾. Exchequer Bills were 3 p. discount to par; India Bonds were 14 p. premium.—Grand Trunk shares were taken at 34, 34¼, 34⅜, 35 and 35¼. Great Western shares at 16⅝ and 17. 5-20 Bonds, 72½ to 72¾.

J. G. J.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—Permit me, through the medium of your valuable journal, to draw the attention of our constituted authorities to the folly of expending money on the roads in the fall of the year. In some instances the snow overtakes the favored jobber before he completes his job, therefore, he cannot put on the finishing touch, (which is in some cases considerable). The job is passed of course, and the lucky individual pockets the cash, and is prepared to go through fire and water to secure his friend's re election at the next polling. I have driven over some of those "late jobs" since the disappearance of the snow, and they are in a deplorable state! The waggon sinks to near the hub, and if the authors of those "late jobs" had to suffer what the patient animal suffers by dragging the vehicles through the deep mud, they would learn to expend the Township money on the roads at the proper time, in June, at the time the Statute Labor is done.

I must confess I am at a loss to know what is done with the balance of our taxes after the various appropriations, &c., &c., are paid. Are not all our taxes paid into the various treasurers of the Municipalities in the County by the first of March in each year? What, then, is done with the money? Is it put out on interest till late in the fall, when our practical men, which we send to the Council board to represent our interests, think proper to lay it out in driblets and favorite jobs. If not put out on interest, who gets the benefit of our money? No body would for a moment believe that it is allowed to lie idle in the Treasurer's hands until required. Is it used by the Treasurer and "majority of the Council" till near the time they are called upon to give an account of their stewardship to their constituents? Will some person who is posted up in these matters explain them, so that our humble capacity can understand what is done with the taxes, which we pay sometimes early in the fall or beginning of the winter, and have to wait nearly a year before we get our share on the roads? It is only wasting money to expend it on the roads in the fall. $8.00 laid out in the spring is worth twice or thrice that amount laid out in the fall—Cannot we have it all laid out in the spring? Does it not enhance the value of our country to a great degree to have good roads? Will not my fellow-ratepayers insist upon having the money expended in June? Hoping that the matter will be attended to this year,

I remain, yours, &c,
A RATEPAYER.

Otonabee, 6th April, 1866.

Gold Discovery on the Niagara River.

The Niagara Mail, of yesterday, contains the following important announcement:—

"A company composed of leading men in Toronto and elsewhere, in which are the names of the Messrs. Gzowski, Cayley, Cameron, Crooks, McMurrich, M. P. P., Kingsmill, besides several others, Bellenay, W. A. Thompson, Judge Lander, &c., &c., under the name of "the Niagara and Ontario Mining and Oil company" having received satisfactory evidence (to them) of the existence of gold, silver and other minerals in large deposits, along the margin of the Niagara River and through Niagara Township, have applied to, and got from the Provincial Government a lease of half the river, and also a lease of the mineral deposits in the Township generally. The company has already leased some 1200 acres of land, in the Township, either to prospect on themselves, or to prevent others from doing so, and we suppose they would lease the whole Township if they could get it. In short it is indubitable that the machinery for a little California, has been set up here within a few weeks.

Confederation in England.

The Attorney General of New Brunswick, gives in a recent speech the following interesting information concerning public opinion in England respecting confederation:—

"Mr. Cardwell," he said, "asked them if they did not find the people of England in favor of the scheme. They admitted they did; but they added that, outside Downing street, they could find only two men who had read the scheme. (Hear, hear.) The public generally imagined that the Union was to be legislative. Six Governments and six Parliaments was a sort of scheme that amused all to whome they spoke of it.—They told Mr. Cardwell that they found that the principal reason why the idea of a union of the Provinces was received with such favour in England was that by the union they would be relieved from the taxation they now bear for the protection of these Provinces. Mr. Cardwell admitted that this was one of the reasons why he approved of the scheme, but he said this was not the only reason. Mr. Cardwell also admitted that there were many objections to the scheme."

A legislative union would be something sensible, a characteristic which we could never see in Confederation.—Montreal Witness.

ARREST OF MICHAEL MURPHEY.—We learn by a telegram received early this morning, that Michael Murphey, the President of the Hibernian Society of this city, and five others, were arrested at Cornwall, when en route to Portland. They were arrested, it is said, "on suspicion of being connected with the expeditionary movement against the Lower Provinces." The telegram adds, "that arms and a considerable quantity of ammunition were found upon them, and they are to be brought before the Cornwall magistrate for examination." There seems to be much reason for concluding that Murphy, who is, unquestionably, a zealous Fenian, perhaps the only one in Canada, was on his way to join the O Mahonies who have lately assembled at Portland, and his arrest is fully justified by his treasonable antecedents.—Globe, 10th inst.

THE TORONTO "HEAD CENTRE" ON THE WING.—We received the following telegram from Port Hope yesterday:—"Michael Murphy and staff left Toronto by the morning express for Boston to-day. They were all fully armed and disguised their revolvers pretty freely. It is supposed they are en route for Campo Bello—to join the army of the Fenian Republic."—Leader

CARELESS USE OF FIRE ARMS.—A sad and fatal accident happened to Mr. Ernest Meredith, of Montreal, while on a visit to the Hon. Mr. Hale, of Sherbrooke. While in the bedroom of his host's son with some friends, Mr. Meredith observed a revolver hanging on the wall. He took it down and while speaking of the danger of carelessly handling these weapons, he undertook to show how to withdraw the charge from it.—While doing so he unfortunately dropped the pistol and on the instant stooped forward to pick it up. He was too late, however, it having reached the floor. The concussion discharged one chamber and the ball lodged in the vicinity of Mr. Meredith's heart. He immediately rushed into a sitting room where a lady was sitting and exclaimed "I have shot myself and am d

The Jury of the International Exhibition held in London, in 1862, made the following report:—"The Colony (Canada) produces many of its own School Books, among which may be mentioned 'Lovell's General Geography,' a trustworthy and attractive manual, remarkable for its clear arrangement and for the fullness of its illustrative and statistical contents."

Dublin Exhibition, 1865.—A Silver Medal was awarded to Mr John Lovell, at the Dublin Exhibition of 1865, for his cheap and excellent series of School Books.

"Lovell's Canadian School Series."—"This is a series of School Books, which have been especially prepared for the use of the Public Schools of Canada and are now in course of publication by Mr. Lovell, of Montreal. They are interesting both on particular and on general grounds, not only as a specimen of the literature of Canada, but still more of the sort of teaching which is being established in that Colony. We have been much struck with the merit of the series which, as a whole, will bear favorable comparison with any works of a similar class published in this country."—London Educational Times

AN ESSAY ON THE MULE.

That gifted and ever glorious knight of the quill, Josh Billings, provides us with the following, which we consider a very elegant production:

"The mule is half hoss and half jackass, and then kums to full stop, natur diskuvering her mistake. The way more nearer to their helf than any other creetur, except a cockroach. They can't beer eny quicker nor lighter than the hoss, yet their ears are big enuff for snow shoes. You kan trust them with enny one whose life ain't worth more than the mule's. The only way to keep them into a pasture is to turn them into a meddler jinest and let them jump out.—They are ready for use just as soon as tha will do to abuse. They hant got enny more friends than Bill Harding, and will live on huckleberry bush, with an occasional chance at Kanady thistels. The are a modern invention; I don't think the Bible alludes to them at all. The sell for more money than eny other domestic animal. You can't tell their age by looking into their mouth enny more than you can a Mexican cannon. The never have no disease that a good club wont heal. If the ever die tha must come right to life again, for I never herd enybody say "ded mule." The are like some men, very korrupt at heart. I have known them to be good mules for six months, just to get a good chance to kick somebody. I never owned one, nor never mean to, unless there is a United States law passed requiring it. The reason why tha are so pashunt is bekauze tha are ashamed of themselves. I have seen dedikated mules in a circus. Tha could kick and bite tremenjus. I wud not say what I am forced to as agin the mule if his birth want an outrage and he want to blame for it. Enny man who is willing to drive a mule ought to be exempt by law from running for the legislatur. The are the strongest critters on arth, and heartiest according to their size. I herd of one who fell oph from the tow path of the Eri canal and sunk as soon as he touched bottom, but he kept on towing the boat to the next stashun, breathing through his ears, which was out of the water about two feet six inches. I didn't see tha did, but Bill Hardings told me of it, and I never rew him to lie unless he could make something out of it."

A DOUBLE HIT.

The following has a very wide application and will be read with a smile of appreciation by both sexes:

HUSBAND TRAVELLING.

Scene 1: Room—Hotel. Spittoons full of cigar stumps. Bourbon whiskey. All hands equipped for a night's spree.—Husband in a hurry to be off, writing home:

"DEAREST SUSIE:—My time is so occupied by business that I can hardly spare a moment to write to you. Oh! darling how I miss you, and the only thing that sustains me during my absence is the thought that every moment thus spent is for the benefit of my dear wife and children. Take good care of yourself, my dear. Feed the baby on one cow's milk. Excuse haste, &c."

WIFE AT HOME.

Scene 2: Parlor: All the gas lit. Thirteen grass widows. Fred, from round the corner, with his violin; Jim, from across the way, with his banjo; Jack, from above, with his guitar; Sam, from below, with his flute; lots of other fellows with their instruments. Dancing and singing. Sideboard covered with nuts, fruits, cake, cream, wine, whiskey, &c. Wife in a hurry to dance, writing to her husband:

"DEAR HUBBY:—How lonesome I feel in your absence. The hours pass tediously. Nobody calls on me, and I am constantly thinking of the time when you will be home and your cheerful countenance light up the now dreary routine of every day life. My household duties keep me constantly employed. I am living as economically as possible, knowing that your small income will not admit of frivolous expenses. But now dear, I will say good bye, or I will be too late for the monthly concert of prayer. With haste yours, &c."

Paying the Minister his Salary.

In some places in the country it is the custom for the people to pay the Minister's salary in produce, pork, cabbages, &c. It is a poor way, often a mean way, but this is the way it is sometimes done. A Methodist Minister writes:—

Coming home faint and weary from visiting in the country afoot, one cold November evening, just as the frost was setting in with severity, Mrs. Dunn said to me:—

"One of the members has been here and left thirty cabbages. He said he had agreed to pay $1.50, and you might give him credit for so much."

"Where are they?"

"He threw them over the fence, and as it is going to freeze hard to-night you had better bring them into the cellar after you have rested."

"Well, I suppose I must; but we don't need so many cabbages; perhaps I may be able to sell them to Mr. Wylder."

Accordingly, weary as I was, I picked them out of the snow, and carried them to the cellar.

Mr. Wylder, who kept a provision market down town, lived across the street from us. Next morning I called over to see if he wanted to buy, or thought he could sell any cabbages.

"Who did you get them from?" said he to me.

"From Mr. Banks"

"What did he charge you for them?"

"Three cents a head."

"Well, that's astonishing. I bought every good cabbage he had yesterday; every one worth having that I could sell, and paid him only two cents a head for them. Then he had a few poor ones at the bottom of the wagon that I supposed he would feed to his oxen for they were good for nothing else."

"Of course we had to keep them and to make the best of the cabbages—which in a very short time after were obliged to throw them out of doors—and gave Mr. Banks credit for $1.50.

"Does your officiating clergymen preach the Gospel, and is his own conversation and carriage consistent therewith?" was a circular from a Bishop to the churchwarden of his diocese. A parishwarden near replied. 'He preaches the Gospel, but does not keep a carriage.'

Printers will play the deuce with type sometimes. A young lady composed some verses for a county newspaper headed 'Dew Drops from Freshly Blown Roses.' The printers devil printed it. 'Freshly Blown Noses.' The fair authoress on reading it had immediate use for a handkerchief.

An advertisement lately appeared, headed 'Iron Bed teads and Bedding.' We suppose the linen must be sheet iron.

It is very easy to be popular—have no opinion of your own.

A pin has as much head as a good many authors, and a great deal more point.

The Weekly Post will be printed on a large sheet of good paper, specially made for the purpose, and will embrace 40 columns of reading matter, printed from new type, and tastefully executed.

Each edition will contain:

Editorials on Current Political Topics.
Details of Foreign News.
Local Intelligence.
Telegraphic Despatches
Special Telegrams from Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, &c.
Family Reading.
Literary Extracts
Selected and Original Poetry.
Correspondence.
Commercial Reviews.
Home and other Market Reports.

And during the Session of the Legislature,

A Concise Summary of Parliamentary Proceedings, and
The Speeches of Prominent Politicians.

In a word, no pains or expense will be spared to make The Post a first class weekly journal, worthy of British America, and a faithful exponent of public opinion,—alike welcome to the politician and the general reader.

In its political character, The Post will be firm in its adhesion to the Liberal cause,—knowing neither sect, nationality, nor sectional prejudices. It will seek to perpetuate the happy connexion subsisting between British America and Great Britain, and to that end will advocate the great measure now under discussion for the Confederation of all British America under one government as being best calculated to cement the Empire, and to promote the happiness of the inhabitants—develop their vast internal resources and open up new channels of commerce.

Especial efforts will be made to place before the public, reliable information as to the character, resources, and capabilities of the great, but comparatively unknown, regions of the valley of the Ottawa—its numerous tributaries and new settlements.

☞Friends at a distance who will send in the names of five subscribers (with the cash) will be entitled to a copy of the paper for a year gratis, and all others are respectfully invited to send in lists of reliable persons who may be willing to become subscribers on the credit terms.

FINKLE & LYON

SEWING MACHINE CO.

OFFICE 581 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

GUARANTEE—After a fair trial, if any purchaser does not regard the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine as superior to any machine in market, he can return it and have his money. It has taken many of the highest prizes—is less complicated than any other first class machine,—does a wider range of work without changing,—requires no taking apart to clean or oil, and no "lessons" to set needle, regulate tension, or operate machine.

N. B. Any Clergyman sending us two orders for Machines, shall receive one for himself as a present. The same proposition is extended to Profession and Teachers.

We have now completed our New Manufactory at a cost of some $200,000, including New Patents and important Improvements; and the object of the above proposition is to secure the immediate introduction of our improved machine into every town in the United States without incurring the great expense of a travelling agent.

This proposition cannot avail in towns occupied by our own agents.

Please send for descriptive Catalogue, with samples of sewing.

See what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:

From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.

From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865

Messrs. Devaugh & Co's Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city The ladies throughout their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush We predict for them a wonderful success.

From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.

Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs Devaugh & Co, No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost casts into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.

How You Can Get a Prize.

PIANO-FORTES

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMETS constructed on a truly scientific principle That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrumen is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings re attached to a strong Iron fram, which is separate and entirel. independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old in-form of stringing by substituting straight bridges, unsevering at the same time The Over String Bass, of which Mr Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
M x Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Herrman Wolfenhaupt,	A. Baril,
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry,	Charle Fradel

Mr. EGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal versimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianiste to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5—Upon a careful examination of Dutons Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilliancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal It combining with a smoothie delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the full power of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr S. B. Dutton, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements as exhibited in the instruments under examination in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone-power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN

SEWING MACHINES.

EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!

PATENTED FEB. 14th, 1860.

Salesrooms. { 536 Broadway, New York, / 252 Washington St., Boston.

THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles, and combining possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be

Simplicity and Perfection Combined.

It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shuttle stitch, which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nainsook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is

Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.

It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it soundly, without fatigue or injury to health

Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it alm at impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.

We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply the natives with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

BRYAN'S

PULMONIC WAFERS!

The most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered for all diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza,

Hoarseness, Difficult Breathing, Sore Throat &c.. &c.

THESE Wafers give the most instantaneous and perfect relief, when persevered with according to directions never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health, who have tried other means in vain. To all classes and all constitutions they are a blessing and cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or how severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly decayed. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

TO VOCALISTS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS.

these Wafers are peculiarly valuable, they will in one day remove the most severe coarseness or hoarseness and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and flexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass, and clearness, of which purposes they are regularly used by many Professional Vocalists.

The Great English Remedy!

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a safe and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

SPRING'S VOICE.

Spring will bring forth the violets
From their brown sepulchres,
The daisy, from its dreary sleep,
With life and gladness stirs;
A wreath of glory round her brow,
The sunshine on her wing—
An angel from the realms of light,
Is gentle hearted Spring.

The birds will fill the smiling groves
With their blithe melody;
The brooklets burst their icy chains,
And sing of liberty;
Nature will wear her gay attire,
The wind sweet fragrance bring—
A kind and tender hearted Queen,
Is this, our gay young Spring.

Soft showers will greet the broad fields,
The sunshine kiss the stream,
And zephyrs breath a tale of love,
The night and day between;
Around our chilly northern homes,
Will sweetest music ring,—
A fairy fingered choirester
Is laughing, romping spring.

But ah, the Spring can never wake
Sweet flowers to life again,
Unanswered fall upon their graves,
The sunshine and the rain;
When autumn flowers were withering,
We laid them down to rest,
The winter of the voiceless tomb
Above their lifeless breast.

But o'er the wintry hills of life,
Beyond death's cold river,
There comes a never dying Spring,
Whose glory fadeth never.
There comes a never dying Spring,
Immortal life to impart,
To raise from out the dreary tomb,
These treasures of the heart;
It comes, sweet bloom and joy to bring,
A never fading, glorious Spring.

A MODEL YOUNG MAN.

BY MISS JEAN KETTLES, MINTO.

Two classes of readers, I am aware, will laugh at our descriptions. Every irreverent young man and every old maid will assert that Model Young Men never did, and never will exist, except in the fond imaginations of love-blinded maidens.

But, supposing it were so, is this a thing to be regretted? If there be nothing new and nothing true, thank Heaven many people believe and act as if there were.—Even the loudest disciples of Realism see and describe men and women and nature, not as they really are, but just as they are reflected on the distorted mirrors of their imaginations. The Pre-Raphaelite may paint a common-place Madonna, but this only proves that his degraded imagination conceives her to have been so. So far as probabilities go, he has infinitely less right to imagine the Virgin to have been ugly than Guido had to represent her as exquisitely beautiful. Why, even the great preacher of the Realities and the Veracities has himself become the slave of his too vivid imaginations, and spent six very big volumes in proving to an incredul us public that the selfish, brutal soldier who plundered Maria Theresa was a hero of pure and spotless fame. So too, if the images of the young men we cherish are very dissimilar to the originals, is not the deception mutual, for are we the angels they think us? Men have worshiped us and sung our praises ever since Jubal first tuned his harp to sing the praises of Cain's lovely daughter, and we are only half returning the obligation by idealising them.

I am not ashamed to say that, first of all, I would like my Model Young Man to be handsome! Many girls profess to be indifferent to personal beauty in men—their reasons invariably being that they had happened to get a plain-looking young man for a lover. If it be granted that beauty—in inanimate nature, in the creations of the mind, or in woman—is a thing to be commended, why should we undervalue it in the noblest work in nature, animate or inanimate—Man?

Have not all poets, painters and sculptors proceeded on the liberal interpretation of the text which declareth that He who is the Beautiful created man in His own image? How absurd, then, to talk as if there was any necessary opposition between beauty and virtue. Those who decry personal beauty on the ground of an effected mental superiority may be reminded that history tells us all really great women of intellect hold an opposite opinion. I was reading lately that one of the wisest and best women that ever lived—Isabella the Catholic, the founder of the grandeur of the Spanish empire, and the patron of Columbus—was eventually swayed in deciding which of the rival competitors for her hand she would accept by the knowledge that Ferdinand the Astute had a manly and comely exterior.

That this opinion is no mere feminine prejudice is proved by the fact that it has been held by wise men as well as wise women.

Plato, in his Treatise on the State, maintained that men who were chosen to be rulers should have the advantage of personal beauty. And all women, wise or foolish, let them say what they choose, hold similar opinions to Plato's and would act as Isabella acted, had they a similar choice. That personal beauty in a man is to be prized, and that there are many men so endowed, are, I take it, matters of fact; but what constitutes this beauty, and who are its fortunate possessors, are, I am afraid, very much matters of opinion But if Nature has developed an endless variety of types of manly beauty, she has compensated for it by producing an infinite diversity of female taste. My model must, therefore, be a handsome man. Man! I say—not a sheepish hobbledehoy, with a beardless, girlish face, nor yet a young old man, vainly trying to hide the "sere and yellow leaf," but a man! in the glorious summit of his manhood, attained, in my opinion, somewhere between the ages of 25 and 35. On this point, too, I would like to dogmatise. I declare it to be an undisputable fact that men look best, and that their manners have the greatest charm for women, between the ages I have mentioned. You may rely upon it, that no woman deliberately prefers a boy of 20 to a man of 25 30, and that no woman under 30 would, could she choose otherwise, marry a man of middle age.—The girls of 18 we sometimes hear of marrying men of 50 would very much rather have preferred one of 30 had he been forthcoming, but, this not being so, they deliberately barter youth for rank, or wealth, or some equivalent, for it would be almost blasphemy to talk of love entering into such an unholy compact. If this be a matter of fact, my next preference is purely a matter of taste. I don't like little men; they are spoken of as pretty little fellows, and that is quite enough for me! Neither do I admire giants; they are generally stupid, helpless beings, with a knack of always being in the way. Then as to complexions, I decidedly prefer dark men, and as the fair golden hair type of female beauty has always been considered the most spiritual and exquisitely lovely, we will gain the advantage of contrast by awarding the palm of beauty to dark men.

So much for outward appearance. Next, as to manners.

By manners I do not mean the mere outward polish, which too often hides the innate vulgarity beneath. To my mind the most despicable creature in nature is your 'little would be Brummel!" Fine manners are to a great extent, relative. What is natural and graceful in an educated gentleman is exquisitively ludicrous when Mr Yellowplush, the valet tries to imitate it in the "flopper" servants' room for the special edification of Mrs. 'Am and Hegge, the cook, who thanks Jeames such a handsome young man. You, too, O swell clerks! dandified jump-the-counters! and medical students of loud and "horsey" costume, are not quite the "thing" for the Club window in Pall Mall, the "Row" in the height of the season, or the betting ring at Epsom. Yet ye are not altogether useless, for ye afford some little amusement to this dull and dyspeptic age.

Yet my model must not be such as ye are. Whatever his position in society, he must be in the true and high sense of the word a gentleman. One class of men I particularly detest—those poor creatures called "ladies men." Empty things, who in the smallest of small talk are always paying us the silliest of stale compliments, and ostentatiously offering us attentions we loath, and otherwise making themselves as ridiculous and disagreeable as possible.—My model in the society of women would be neither weakly deferent to all their whims, nor yet patronizing contemptuous, but have that air of manly independence which when tempered with gentle courtesy is so pleasant to and so successful with women, and at once distinguishes the true gentleman from the snob and the boor.

> "The churl in spirit, howe'er he veil
> His mind in form for fashion's sake
> Will let his coltish nature break
> By season through the gilded pail."

Having disposed of the outward graces of the person and the mind, I will now speak of the mind itself My model must be intellectual—must be "clever." When the wife is mentally superior to her husband she very often ignores and despises him; and when the disparity is too far the other way the husband too often despises and neglects his wife, and seeks out of doors the conversational pleasures he cannot find at home. Mr. Thackeray has painted women as divided into two classes The first represents her as a weak, helpless, unintellectual creature, fondly worshipping her lord and master, as if he were some divinity, ever altogether he has more than an average share of human follies and passions. The other is that class of which Beatrix Esmond and Bessie Prior are the types—a cold calculating, heartless, but clever woman, who accepts a husband for convenience or from necessity, and goes on quietly looking down on him from her serene altitude of intellectual superiority. Nor can I give in my adherence to the theory so ably advocated by Misses Parkes and Cobbe, that your average woman is intellectual equal, if not superior, to your average man. Were this theory true, woman, who was created to be the wife of man, could not, constituted as human beings are, carry out the Scriptural injunction so essential to domestic happiness, which enjoins wives to be obedient to their husbands. If the Model Young Man be very intellectual and accomplished, he will be miserable if unequally yoked to a girl who has not also similar tastes to his own; but if he be an ordinary young man he will be happiest in the society of an ordinary young woman.

The qualities which I have already enumerated as essential to a Model Young Man have all risen in regular gradation above each other; but far more important than any of the graces I have named is the one which crowns them all—Character.

My Model Young Man must be Good.

This, I am sorry to say, is not considered by many girls to be essential in theory, and by many more in practice. Men are not so indulgent to us. They unanimously regard virtue as being theoretically the highest female accomplishment, and most of them carry their theory into practice.—Many girls seem to think that a reputation for being "fast"—which, translated into ordinary English, means being a snob and a blackguard—adds a piquante charm to a young man's character. This is both a crime and a mistake—a crime, because they who condone sin are in a measure guilty of it themselves—a mistake, because by so condoning it, women surrender a power which, if exerted, might protect themselves and the whole Except among some cases of our own Scotch population, the woman who breaks a certain commandment is frightfully cast off by all her friends, male and female; a bitter penalty—I do not say too bitter—is exacted from her, and she is taught that for sin there is no pardon on this side of the grave. But the man who caused her to sin, and who is therefore the guiltiest of the two, what of him? He actually, by many girls, is regarded as a hero, and even staid matrons do no more than mildly deprecate his reputation for gallantry. "Gallantry," indeed! O, strange perversion of words! that a phrase which represents a noble virtue should be prostituted to designate the most wicked and cowardly of vices. The world may talk about a reputation for gallantry, but truth uses no such euphemistic phrase. Truth proclaims these men to be base, cowardly ruffians who, under the pretext of some lie spoken or acted, lead poor weak confiding girls to ruin, and hurry their grey-headed parents in shame and anguish to a premature grave.

How sad to think that many girls, especially among the bi her classes, in the full knowledge of their villainous and deceptious, accept without hesitation, despicable scoundrels like these as lovers and husbands—thus not only committing a great sin, but committing treason against their whole sex.

Attempts have sometimes been made to justify this criminal inconstancy, but they have been invariably signal failures. How could such blasphemous sophistry be other than a failure, opposed as it is to the laws of Him who is no respecter of persons, and who will punish sin by whomsoever committed—high or low, male or female. My Model Young Man must, therefore, have no Brummagen reputation for gallantry. He must also be temperate. This is a sin many girls overlook, vainly flattering themselves that "he" will be steadier when married, and that they will reform him—finding out, when too late, that with their eyes open they have earned all the miseries of the drunkard's wife. But why need I go on catalogueing virtues? Have I not said that my model must be good, and does not that include everything—industry, modesty, humility, good temper, truthfulness, and all the graces that adorn the character of the true man and the Christian. He need not be—I would rather that he was not—like those weak-minded young men revival times produce who effect a sanctimonious air, and are always quoting Scripture. He should not talk religion, but "live" it. The man who ostentatiously breaks God's laws is always a villain and often a fool, and the man who is always parading his religion is always a fool and very often a rogue. True manliness despises both. My Model Young Man must be no charlatan, but whether poor or rich he must Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata.

It happened at Bonur One moolight winter's evening I called up Beethoven, for I wanted him to take a walk and afterwards sup with me in passing through some dark narrow street he paused suddenly. Hush! he said, 'what sound is that—its my symphony in F,' he said eagerly. 'Hark, how well its played!'

It was a little, mean dwelling; and we paused outside and listned. The player went on; but in the midst of the final there was a sudden break, then the voice of sobbing. 'I cannot play any more—it is so beautiful, it is so utterly beyond my power to do it justice. O! what would I not give to go to the concert at Cologne.'

'Ah, my sister,' said her brother, 'why create regrets where there is no remedy, we can scarcely pay our rent.'

'You are right; and yet I wish, for once in my life, to hear some really good music. But it is of no use.'

Beethoven looked at me. 'Let us go in,' he said.

'Go in!' I exclaimed. 'What can we go in for?'

'I will play to her,' he said, in an excited tone. 'Here is telling—genius—understanding. I will play to her and she will appreciate it! And before I could prevent him his hand was upon the door.

A pale young man was sitting by the table making shoes; and near him, leaning sorrowfully upon an old fashioned harpsichord at a young girl, with a profusion of light hair falling over her beutiful face. Both were cleanly but very poorly dressed, and both started and turned towards us as we entered.

'Pardon me,' said Beethoven. 'But I heard music, and was tempted to enter. I am a musician.'

The girl blushed, and the young man looked grave—somewhat annoyed.

'I—I also overheard something of what you said,' continued my friend. 'You wish to hear—that is, you would like—that is—shall I play for you?'

There was something so odd in the whole affair and something so eccentric and pleasant in the manner of the speaker, and the ice seemed to be broken in a moment, and they all smiled involuntarily.

'Thank you,' said the shoemaker, 'but our harpsicord is so wretched, and we have no music.

'No music,' echoed my friend. 'How, then does the Fraulien—'

He paused and coloured up, for the girl looked round full at him, and he saw that she was blind.

'I—I entreat your pardon,' he said; 'but I had not perceived before. Then you play from ear?'

'Entirely?'

'And where do you hear the music, since you frequent no concerts?'

'I used to hear a lady practicing near us when we lived at Brunl, two years ago.—During the summer evenings her windows were open; and I walked to and fro outside to listen to her.'

'And have you never heard any music?'

'None excepting street music.'

She seemed shy, so Beethoven said no more, but seated himself quietly before the piano, and began to play. He had no sooner struck the first chord than I knew what was to follow—how grand he would be that very night! And I was not mistaken.—Never during the years I knew him, did I hear him play as he did to that blind girl and her brother! He was inspired; and and from the instant that his fingers began to wander along the keys, the very tone of the instrument began to grow sweeter and more equal.

The brother and sister were silent with wonder and rapture. It was as if they were all bound as a strange dream, and only feared to wake.

Suddenly the flame of a single candle waved, sank, flickered, and went out.—Beethoven paused, and I threw open the shutter—admitting a flood of dazzling moonlight.

At length the young shoemaker rose and approaching him eagerly, said, in a low tone, 'Wonderful man! who and what are you?'

The composer smiled, as he only could smile—kindly. 'Listen,' he said, and he played the opening bars in the symphony in F.

A cry of delight and recognition burst from them both, and exclaiming, 'Then you are Beethoven!' as they covered his hands with tears and kisses.

He rose to go, but was held back with entreaties—'Play to us once more—only once more!'

'Farewell to you,' said he, as he performed another piece most exquisitely.

'You will come again!' asked they in one breath.

He paused, and looked compassionately at the blind girl—'Yes, I will come again and give the Fraulien some lessons.'

'Let us make best back,' said Beethoven 'that I may write out that sonata while I can yet remember it!' we did so, and he sat over it till long past day dawn. And this was the origin of that Moonlight Sonata with which we are all so fondly acquainted.

An Obvious and Pressing Duty.

Hall's Journal of Health gives the following suggestion which deserves the immediate attention of all who wish to avoid the scourge of cholera, which threatens to attack us this summer. We recomm nd them to the special consideration of our citizens:—

1st. Every householder owes it to himself, to his family, to his neighbors, to the community in which he resides, to have his house from cellar to garret, from the sweet curb to the rear line of his lot, most scrupulously cleansed and white-washing.

2nd. Every man who has any authority in city or town government should consider himself bound by the oath of office, and by every consideration of humanity, to give himself no rest until every street, alley, close, gutter and sewer is placed in a state of as perfect cleanliness as possible, and kept so until the frost of next season comes.

3rd. These cleansings should be done now, because if put off until warm weather, the very effort necessary for the removal of filth will only tend, in the essential nature of things, to hasten the appearance of the disease, to increase its malignity, and to extend its devastations; because the sun of spring and summer will sooner warm into life and intensity the vapours and malignant influence, which in its remorseless tread, wrecks so much of human happiness, and desolates so many hearthstones.

Approved Recipes.

PIE CRUST.—An excellent pie crust may be made by taking about a quart of bread sponge in the morning before you bake, add thereto one beaten egg, nearly a teacup of melted butter, some flour; knead a little and set in a warm place to rise. When light it may be seaded over, and then roll out like any pie crust. A little butter spread on the upper crust, that folded down and rolled again makes it flaky. If the pies are made of uncooked apples the crust will be much lighter to stand a half hour or so after being made, before putting in the oven. Less butter will do very well.

BAKED BEANS.—Pick over and put to soak over night a quart of white beans.—In the morning boil slowly in plenty of water; when so soft that you can squeeze one between thumb and finger, drain through a colander. Have a stone jar or deep dish; place in the bottom thereof a little salt, a piece of butter the size of a walnut, a teaspoon of sugar, a little black pepper; pour in the beans, cover with water, place a cover on the dish, and bake three or four hours. Should the water dry away, add more from time to time. This is good for those that don't like pork.

BEEF OR OLD FOWLS.—Are most excellent cooked in a similar way. Cut up in pieces, season to taste, with a little water in the jar; cover tight, set in a moderate oven after breakfast, and when you take it out for dinner, you will find the meat tender and very nutritious.

STARTLING STATEMENTS.—Mr. Doolittle the other day in Congress, in a speech on the representation amendment, stated that of the 1,600,000 males in the South over twenty years of age, one-third perished in the late war! That is 533,000 rebels who paid the forfeit to their crime. Mr. Doolittle says further, that of the 4,000,000 of the black population, 25 per cent was destroyed by the same cause. This gives 1,000,000 men—making of white and black loss the enormous human sacrifice of 1,523,000. Then of Northern soldiers the loss is put at 500,000, which swell the aggregate to a round 2,000,000 human beings slaughtered.

A red-nosed gentleman asked a wit whether he believed in spirits. "Ay, sir," replied he, looking him full in the face, "I see too much evidence before me to doubt it."

A certain landlady is said to make her pies so light that her lodgers can see to go to bed without a candle after eating a moderate sized piece.

Well, Bridget, if I engage you I shall want you to stay at home wherever I want to go out. Well ma'am I have got no objections, providing you do the same when I want to go out.

FENIANISM ABOUT DEAD.

For some time those remarkably invisible but mischievous creatures have been the subject of much writing, and caused considerable excitement. But the idea that the millions of trained men and the ready purses of the friends of Erin would so soon die out, or become empty, was not willingly received by all. The Fenian bubble, however, is dead or a dying. It is simply ridiculous to imagine that a people so miserably poor as that class of American citizens is, could carry on a war with the greatest power in the world; and the leaders themselves knew that full well. In consequence of events of late, orders have been issued and received to return to their homes, as it was found there was no chance of recovering arms, &c., seized by the United States authorities.—The affair has turned out a miserable fiasco, but it has done its evil work on the dupes themselves. Hundreds of them left their homes, or gave up their situations, to join the movement, and now are without situations or means of living—in fact, have lost all. The New York World says they are utterly ruined, not knowing where to go, after they arrive at head-quarters, their funds not being sufficient to do more than pay their passage back again.

Very soon we may expect that the anger of the deluded brotherhood, instead of being vented on Canada and New Brunswick, will be turned against the unmitigated scoundrels who preside in Union Square. They have lived for years on the credulity of the Irish people; they have had a beggarly existence on the proceeds swindled out of working men and servant girls; and now, in the first overt act they have taken to redeem their lying pledges, they have only ruined their dupes instead of aiding Ireland.

Church of England in Ireland.

On the 10th inst. Sir John Grey, M.P. for Kilkenny, moved a resolution in the House of Commons, to the effect that the Church of England in Ireland was a just cause of dissatisfaction to the people of that country, and urgently demanded the attention of Parliament with a view of placing all the churches on a religious equality.

He maintained that the Irish Church had cost more money and heart-burnings than the greatest war the kingdom had ever been engaged in, and yet had not increased in numbers nor brought into its communion the majority of the people it was designed to convert, in fact had not been successful in any one point.

Mr. Fortescue admitted the case, and regarded the resolution with personal sympathy, but declined on the part of the government either to oppose it or take charge of it. As nothing would be done until the state of public feeling both in England, Scotland and Ireland should be so matured as to enable them to bring their conclusions to a practical result. But it may be seriously asked would any act of Parliament make a people loyal while that same government pays £100,000 a year to disseminate disloyalty. Let us hope that a perfect equality may be established, and then Ireland will have fewer hungry wolves who fatten on the people's ignorance.

"THE HOME."

We had intended to draw the attention of the members of the Town Council to their neglect of this institution, while they were giving largely in other ways, where the wi dom of giving might be doubted, and the help afforded perverted. Very often there are those who are ever objects of charity, because they spend on whiskey every cent they can obtain, until they feel the attacks of appetite, and then they run to the Council or to some charitable association or person, and beg for a little to meet the necessity. To give to such parties is almost aiding and abetting their intemperance, although not so intended by the charitable donors. But money given to the ladies who manage "The Home" will not be so spent. During the year they have provided far a large number of needy and destitute individuals.

At present there are over a dozen in the Institution and these have to be provided for, and there can be no doubt but that those ladies who have the care of it must now and then feel the burden, although it has been self-imposed. But since the Council has now made a move to aid in the work, we trust they will continue, and not allow an institution to go down that is doing so much good. Last year the sum of upwards of $550 was required to meet the disbursements. This sum was collected, or given as donations. The least the Council should think of (in view of the number of sufferers that are provided for) should be about $400. The offering of the Council on Monday evening will be the beginning of better things, and we have no fears that it will be so neglected in the future.

MEMORANDUM ON THE CHOLERA.—We have received from the Bureau of Agriculture and Statistics a pamphlet with the above title. It purports to have been adopted at a Musical Conference held in the Bureau of Agriculture in March last. It came too late to avail ourselves of its contents this week, but if there is anything useful in it we will let our readers know in our next. Now is a time that all are looking for information on the subject.

Examination of Teachers.

The following are the names of those who received certificates on the examination of the Senior Board at Bowmanville, held on Tuesday last. No certificate was given for a longer period than one year, and some for six months only:—

FIRST CLASS.

Samuel Cornell.

SECOND CLASS—MALES.

John McCamus.
D. Higgins.

SECOND CLASS—FEMALES.

Coroner's Inquest.

An inquest was held on Tuesday, by one of our coroners, on a dead body that had been disinterred for that purpose, but as the jury considered the individual died of consumption, which the medical testimony, after examination, corroborated. We do not deem it prudent to enter into the reasons that induced the coroner to have the body raised. Such a thing, however, should not be done, unless where there are very strong reasons to suspect that foul play has been used.

Suicide.

A melancholy case of suicide occurred on Sabbath morning in the Township of Cavan, near Baillieboro. A farmer, named Archibald Eagleson, in very comfortable circumstances, hung himself in his hay loft about six o'clock on that morning. No cause has been assigned for his doing the deed. Mr. Eagleson was a widower but a comparatively young man, being about 33 or 34 years of age. He has left no children. An inquest was held on Monday, but we did not hear the result of the investigation.

Physiogs.

An adjourned meeting of the "Physiogs" will be held in the Firemen's Hall on Saturday evening, the 5th inst., at 9 o'clock, for the purpose of arranging the different companies that is to compose the procession on the Queen's birthday. Every person intending to take part will please attend, as some idea of the number must be ascertained in order to provide the requisite number of masks. Any person who cannot attend the meeting will find the lists of different companies with the Secretary at Graham & Stratton's Book Store, who will furnish all necessary information.

Royal Canadian Bank.

This Bank will establish a branch in this town in a few days. A large amount of stock has been subscribed here, and the stockholders, we learn, are paying up the necessary sums in the most liberal manner.

We also learn that a branch of the Ontario bank is about to be established, and we are informed that the workmen are now preparing an office for that purpose.

Literary Club,

The subject for debate which was to have been discussed last Thursday evening, and was postponed, will be taken up this evening, viz.—"Was the banishment of Napoleon to St. Helena justifiable." Leaders, the same as announced last week.—There will also be readings and recitations by members of the club as usual. Doors open at the usual hours.

Farm Stock Sale.

We would draw the attention of our readers to the sale of Farm Stock and Implements, on the farm of Mr. E. Mannell, on the 12th concession of Otonabee; the sale takes place on Tuesday next. See advertisement in another column.

In a special correspondence to the Hamilton Spectator reference is made to a rumor of Halliday bringing an action against the Globe for $50,000 damages for libel. The Spectator correspondence has evidently a low idea of justice at Brockville. He says that if the matter comes before a Brockville jury, Mr. Brown will have a hard time of it, Mr. Halliday having numerous friends there.

MURDER TRIAL.—Honora Fallaly was tried at Lindsay, on Friday, the 27th inst., for the murder of Michael Fallady, her brother in-law, on the 26th of December last. The evidence went to prove that the prisoner had been insane for some time previous to the commission of the deed, and the jury accordingly gave a verdict of not guilty.

The Court of Rome stifles a rumour of an attempt at poisoning, of which the Holy Father appears to have been the object. The attempt is not imputed to the party of action, but to the Jesuits and re-actionary fanatics, who fear that the Pope may return to a liberal policy, and come to an understanding with Italy.

DR. GUSTAFF was yesterday tried at the Toronto Assizes for the attempt to poison Mr. McKinnon several months since in Toronto. The jury found him guilty and the judge sentenced the "Dr." to fifteen years imprisonment in the Provincial Penitentiary.

Prince Alfred, Victoria's second son, is soon to be made a Duke, and have a seat in the House of Lords. York has been the usual title of the second son, but it is believed that Alfred will be the Duke of Edinburgh.

Ottawa has now a population numbering 17,735. This, says a local cotemporary, will admit of an issue of 70 tavern licenses this year. Very consolatory!

The Governor General was expected to arrive in Ottawa yesterday. Great preparations were made for receiving him in a manner becoming his high station.

The dwellings of James Staples, Esq., of the Township of Hamilton, were consumed by fire on Saturday evening last. Loss $4000; no insurance.

The storms of last Saturday and Sunday blew down some houses in Cobourg. They were not murdered at the time.

It is rumoured that the Prince and Princess of Wales will very soon visit Ireland.

TOWN COUNCIL.

MONDAY, April 30th, 1866.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment. Present—His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Millen, Toole, Wilson, Ormond, Stevenson, Chamberlen, Cox, Hamilton, Wrighton.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication from Rev. Maultsin, Secretary of the Peterborough Protestant Home, in answer to a letter sent by the Clerk of the Council, was read and received.

A communication from Messrs. Fitzgerald and Bolger was also read on the subject of the new Map made by them, asking assistance from the Council. The request was referred to a special committee.

Several communications were read—one from the committee appointed at a meeting held in the Protestant Home, asking aid for that Institution; one from Mr. Cluxton and others, asking for improvement on several streets in the East Ward; one from Thos. White and others, asking for improvement on Bethune Street; and from Thos. Beatty and others, asking for improvement on Reid Street. The three last petitions were referred to the committee on Streets and Bridges.

Accounts from D. McNaughton for repairs to the Fire Engine, and from Thos. Chambers & Son for Bread given in charities. The former was referred to the finance committee, and the last to the committee on charities.

An account from Wm. Croft was ordered to be laid on the table, and in case of any action being taken by Mr. Croft the Mayor was instructed to defend the same.

The following report from the committee on finance was read by the chairman:

The account of J. S. Carver for postage 41 cents.

An account for cleaning streets and protecting bridge from ice floating down the the creek, vouched for by Chief Constable Arnot, $10.75.

An account of J. R Benson. Your committee beg to say the account has been reported on once, Dec. 22; and again a resolution was passed on Jan. 3d. Your committee cannot sign it entertain it.

The petition of Magarity applying for payment of rent due from Mrs. Prince—your committee would recommend Magarity to apply to those who engaged the house; your committee consider they have no power of granting the amount.

An account of W. Lee for $4 for labor performed on the sidewalks, your committee recommend to be paid.

The account of W. Cummings. Your committee beg to state they have allowed all the fines due to him which have been collected, amounting $30.50, which they recommend to be paid.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

CHAS. ORMOND, Chairman.

April 30th, 1866.

The Report was received and adopted on the following division:

YEAS:—Messrs. Toole, Wilson, Wrighton, Ormond, Miller, Cox, Hamilton.

NAYS:—Messrs. Chamberlen and Stevenson.

A committee consisting of Messrs. Toole, Millar, Chamberlen, Cox and Stevenson was appointed to examine Messrs. Fitzgerald & Bolger's Map, and report at next meeting of Council whether it is advisable to give the assistance asked for in the petition of those gentlemen.

The License committee submitted a Report which was received and adopted.

On motion of Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Wilson, George McCombs was appointed pound-keeper for the present year.

On motion of Mr. Wilson, seconded by Mr. Wrighton, the Street and Bridge Committee was authorized to have the side-walks on McDonald street and the crossings on Downie street repaired.

On motion of Mr. Ormond, seconded by Mr. Toole, the Street and Bridge Committee were authorized to have the streets within the corporation cleaned, and the accumulation taken to the river above Mr. Dickson's pond.

The committee was also directed to examine the side walks, and give an estimate of repairs and improvements required, estimating for each ward respectively, and report at the next meeting of Council.

On motion of Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr Wilson, the Treasurer was authorized to pay the orders of the health officers to the amount of $10, for the purpose of burying dogs, cats, &c., which does not belong to their official capacity.

A motion of Mr. Millar's to grant $250 to the Protestant Home was lost, and the following amendment carried:—

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr Ormond.—That the sum of three hundred dollars be given for the remainder of the present year, payable as follows:—$100 on demand, $100 on the first of August, and $100 on the first of December, and that the aforesaid sum be given to the ladies of the Protestant Home, less one forth which sum is to be given to other persons, who from religious scruples object to go to the Home, on application to His Worship the Mayor, in such sums as he may deem proper.

Mr. Ormond introduced a By-Law to amend By-Law 158, and to fix the price of Auctioneer's License.

Mr. Cox introduced a resolution to pay the Auditors $10 extra, for the labor and care taken by them in the pecuniary affairs of the Town.

The Council adjourned for two weeks.

(For the Examiner.)

To the Medical Profession of the County of Peterboro'.

GENTLEMEN,—As the new Medical Act for Upper Canada comes in force from May 1st, we think this a favorable time for making the following suggestion to the gentlemen of the medical profession. For this purpose no more appropriate means presents itself than the columns of one of our Town papers.

At present there is no uniform tariff imposed by the medical men of this County, but each man makes his own tariff, and varies it an indefinite number of times. In this way one medical man does an injustice to his neighboring practitioner by undercharging him, or to his patient in overcharging him. There is no standard to which either can appeal without putting the case into court, and calling other medical men to give their opinion in the case. This, of course, causes delay, often great trouble and expense to both parties. The fees charged by lawyers are in most cases regulated by law, and are so far, uniform throughout the province. Why may it not be so in the medical profession?

What we wish to suggest is this:

1st. Let a convention of all the regularly authorized medical men of the County of Peterboro' be convened, and let them decide what their tariff in future shall be.

2nd. Let this tariff or table of charges be printed and circulated, that the public may know on what terms they can obtain medical advice and assistance.

By this means a much better understanding could be maintained in the profession and with the public.

May 1st, 1866. MEDICUS.

DISINFECTANTS.

Several kinds of disinfectants have been suggested of late in the expectation of the cholera visiting us next summer. We suppose the theory of disinfectants is that they decompose substances which give forth noxious properties to the air, and that, unless the disinfecting process be resorted to, the people being under the influence of the foul air, their energies are more easily lowered, and they become easy victims of this epidemic. The same principle applies to every disease to which we may be exposed, so that if proper sanitary precautions were used, the liability to fever and other ills to which the flesh is heir, would be much diminished. There is no doubt, with proper precautions, the mortality of children will be much diminished in Montreal. We propose to suggest a few disinfectants which will cost but a trifle, and which may be adopted to almost every circumstances.

First. Chloride of Lime. This substance constantly diffuses chlorine through the air, and is a powerful disinfectant of the air. This chemical is valuable in houses where rats have died in the wall, or substances are decomposing which cannot be reached. A little powder is placed in a saucer and mixed with water, and where instantaneous disinfection is necessary, vinegar poured on the chloride of lime quickens the diffusion.

Next, Solution of Chloride of Zinc.—This is excellent for placing in contact with the decomposing substance. It immediately deodorizes any substance by contact. It is called Mr. Wm. Burnette's Fluid.—This is useful for cesspools, &c.

Sulphate of lime is one of the most useful disinfectants. By mixing the powder commonly called Gypsum or Land Plaster with night soil it becomes odorless, and is equal to guano as a fertilizer. Sulphate of iron or common copperas, by being dissolved in the proportion of one pound to two gallons of water, is valuable for sinks, sewers and cesspools; it acts only by direct contact. It is a cheap substance, always at hand, and will no doubt be found the most useful. Let sanitary precautions be adopted in our houses, and with ordinary attention to diet, cholera is disarmed of its terror. We have given as above a variety of disinfectants which will suit almost every case.—Montreal Paper.

REMEDY FOR CHOLERA.—The following remedy is recommended to be used in diarrhœa preceding cholera, until the services of a regular physician can be secured, namely—oil of aniseed, oil of cajeput, and oil of juniper—of each half a drachm; sulphuric ether, half an ounce; strong sulphuric acid, 7 drops; spirit of wine, 2.3 drops; tincture of cinnamon, 2 ounces; mix the dose and take 10 drops in a tablespoonful of water every quarter of an hour. This receipt should be carefully preserved by our readers, as one that has the best medical authority to recommend it.

Telegraph Completed.

VICTORIA, VANCOUVER'S ISLAND, April 24th, 1866.

To the President and Secretary of State of the United States.

I congratulate you on the completion of the telegraph line connecting Vancouver's Island with the United States, effected by American enterprise. It is my earnest hope that it may prove an enduring link to bind the United States of America and Great Britain in the bonds of peace and progression.

A. E. KENNEDY,
Gov. Vancouver's Island.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Washington, April 26th, 1866.

Gov. A. E. Kennedy. Vancouver's Island:

We thank you for your kind greeting, and join with you in the hope that the enterprise, the successful prosecution of which is thus signalized, may continue until it shall speedily unite the continents wide open to a common and complete civilization.

ANDREW JOHNSON,
WM. H. SEWARD.

WHEELING, W. Va., April 29—This morning six burglars entered the residence of the cashier of the Harrison National bank of Cadiz, Ohio, bound and gagged that gentleman, and compelled his wife to deliver up the keys of the bank and safe; proceeded thence to the bank they effected an entrance and robbed the safe of $100,000 in United States bonds, and about $50,000 in deposits. After locking the watchman in the safe they made good their escape on a hand car, cutting the telegraph wire in two places; $20,000 reward is offered for the of the robbers.

April 30.—The burglars engaged in robbing the Harrison National bank of Cadiz, Ohio, were overtaken about two miles from Longrange, Ohio, this p.m. A sharp encounter took place, in which one of the robbers was wounded and three captured. One of them succeeded in making his escape, closely pursued. The amount of money recovered will probably exceed $150,000.

A WARNING TO TRAVELLERS.—A citizen who arrived last evening by the midnight train from the East, was proceeding homeward on foot from the station, when he was shortly overtaken by three genteel-looking rascals, who seemed desirous of pressing an acquaintance by enquiring the time. The gentleman merely gave his opinion in reply to the question, without taking the trouble to look at his time-piece, and was about to hasten on his way without encouraging further intimacy of his intrusive companions, when one of the three laid a persuasive hand upon his shoulder. The movement was no sooner made than the gentleman, who was on the alert, turned and laid the rascal low by a well-directed expansion of his muscle, and immediately followed up the attack by bringing a portmanteau, containing a quantity of silver money, in violent concussion with the countenance of a second, which had also a prostrating effect. The third individual of the party took the hint at this juncture, and suddenly remembered he had business in another direction. The gentleman who came off first best in this interview did not wait for apologies or explanations, but continued his way, leaving his new found friends equally ready to drop the acquaintance. He believes that the party followed him upon the cars from Suspension Bridge, and were aware of the fact that he had a considerable sum of money in his possession. —Hamilton Times.

FIRE AND LOSS OF LIFE.—On Saturday morning about one o'clock, a fire broke out in the dwelling of Mr. Corbett, farmer, about five miles from Belleville. The house and furniture were completely destroyed and two of the family perished in the flames. Mrs. Corbett and her nephew, a little boy, were burned to death. The fire spread so rapidly through the house that the rest of the inmates barely escaped with their lives. Mr. Corbett, his niece, and his son, William Corbett, were all dangerously burned. The bodies of Mrs. Corbett and her nephew were not recovered until the fire was over, when their remains were merely a blackened mass.

STABBING AFFRAY IN BRANTFORD.—Last Sunday afternoon a quarrel arose in a saloon between two carpenters named Johnstone and Smith. Both men were intoxicated, and the former drew a knife on the latter, and inflicted fourteen wounds, from which he is not likely to recover. Johnstone is under arrest.

A shawl is coming from British India for the great exhibition, on which ten years of careful labor have been devoted. Lady toad re may like to know the proportions of this dainty garments; its length is about five yards and a half; its width a yard and three quarters; the ground is red, and its arabesque designs are said to reach the extremest point of delicacy. It was ordered by the Queen of Oude before the revolt of the Sepoys and the siege of Lucknow.

The Approaching Wool Season.

As the wool season approaches, great trouble is threatened to be long maintained, both in the United States and Canada, as to how prices will range. Many will have it that the heavy duties now imposed by the Unified States must very materially decrease the prices which our farmers have received during the past five years; while others maintain that they will not be much, if any, falling off. The rapidity with which our trade with the United States increased, and the flattering influence of Reciprocity, was very gratifying. Prior to 1860, our whole annual clip did not amount to a great deal in the years 1864-5, according to our Provincial returns, we shipped very nearly as much for the use of American mills as we did during the whole six years from 1853 to 1858, inclusive! The following figures show the amount of our exports and imports for several years past:—

	IMPORTS.	EXPORTS.
1859.....	$125,285	$400,873
1860.....	142,704	402,234
1861.....	196,186	434,190
1862.....	444,533	724,830
1863.....	375,074	974,349
1864 half-year..	241,861	892,323
1860-5.....	365,296	1,963,168
	$1,789,295	$4,561,425

With regard to the duties, we do not fear that prices will be much affected thereby; for the Americans must purchase from us, or lose some of their machinery stand idle.

It will be noticed by the figures given above, that we import considerable Wool annually. Most of these imports are from Great Britain, and arise from the fact that our manufacturers get a quality of wool rather better suited to their purpose than our own. But if the Americans are not prepared to pay good prices for our Wool during the coming season, our farmers may rest certain that our own manufacturers will soon cease their importations and buy at home. Under these circumstances, although there may be a slight falling away from the high prices of the past few years, we think there is no danger that our Wool will not always command a fair paying price; the United States' tariff to the contrary notwithstanding.

The American duties on Wool are imposed according to the quality. The rates are as follows:—Wool worth 12c. per lb and under, 3c. per lb.; over 12c. and not over 24c., 6c per lb.; over 24c. and not over 32c., 10c. per lb. and 10 per cent; over 32c., 12c. per lb. and 10 per cent. These rates, particularly those on the better qualities of Wool, are very high—amounting, on the best samples, to nearly 50 per cent! Our Wool-growers may we think, draw one inference from the strict classification of Wools which the United States' Customs Officers will require to make under their present law, and that is, that Canadian buyers will also be more strict during the coming Wool season, in judging of the quality of the Wool offered for their acceptance. Heretofore there has not been very much variation in the prices offered for different qualities. In remote sections of the country, in particular, farmers have also received pretty much the same price, unless the sample was unusually poor. The discriminating nature of the American tariff must render our Canadian purchasers more particular, and thus cause the prices to depend more on the quality than they have ever previously done in this country.

Under this state of circumstances, the prudent Wool-grower will man feel increased care in preparing his clip for the market. He will see that his sheep are kept so as to preserve the fleece from objectionable matter; the process of washing will be attended t more thoroughly than it has been customary to do it heretofore; and after shearing, greater care will be taken in preserving the Wool from all dust and dirt. When a farmer has different qualities of Wool, he would do well to separate them, and, in short, be diligent in all points which may enhance the qualities of his wools, and thus enable him to obtain the highest prices which will be paid during the approaching season.

The Irish in the United States.

From the Montreal Evening Telegraph.

The Yankees having made what use they could of Irishmen and Fenians, now turn round and abuse them as the scum of the earth. Will that never learn wisdom and recognise the patent fact that in the British Colonial possessions he has a sphere of action, a position, and opportunity to gain respect and advancement such as he never obtains in the United States, where he is used and cajoled, but despised, and treated as inferior to the negro. In the British Colonies and dependencies all over the world Irishmen hold the foremost places, and the highest offices. In the United States they have no position in society, and are rigidly excluded from all positions of trust and honor, and the following from the Boston Traveller is a fair specimen of what the native Yankee thinks of them:—

"A gang of Irish vagabonds "retired" from the service of Mr Stiles—the very efficient Superintendent of the Cambridge Union Railroad Company—last Monday, because that gentleman employed a colored man in his private stable. The Irish are the only people capable of producing such wretched paltry, contemptible bigots, and their conduct goes far to justify what their English masters say of them, that they are incapable of acting like rational beings. They are perpetually complaining of not being liberally treated, and of the tyranny to which their race has been subjected for ages, at home; but no sooner do they find themselves in foreign countries, than they display the meanest kind of prejudices, and are the dirtiest tools of the dirtiest faction. One would think that the long scourging to which they and their ancestors have been subjected would have taught them to abhor slavery.—but such is not the fact, they being the sole supporters of slavery who come to this country from Europe. Englishmen, Scotchmen, Welshmen, Frenchmen, Swiss, Germans, Norwegians, Swedes, Danes, Italians, Spaniards, and other foreigners, have no prejudice against those genuine Native Americans, the colored people, while the Irish display it on all occasions. And yet they are striving so get us into a war with England, in order that Ireland may be freed! They'd better conquer their prejudices, before they attempt to conquer the English."

THE BUFFALO FENIANS.

TARGET COMPANIES AND SHIPPING PREPARATIONS.

A correspondent of the London Free Press writes as follows from Buffalo:—as I have no doubt you are, with the majority of the people of Canada, anxious to know the movements of the Fenians, I thought I would write a few lines to give you an "inkling" as to what they are doing in this part of the United States.—You have heard of the formation of "Target Companies" in this city, but as the city newspapers have denied that these are composed of Fenians, it may be as well to give you the reason why they have assumed the name of Target Companies. According to the laws of this State no body of men can form themselves into a company to learn military drill using firearms, unless they are organized by, and under the authority of the States Officers. In order to evade this law the Fenians took the name of "Target Companies." It is only necessary to find out the number of Fenians who are armed and drilled and ready to march as soon as the order to do so is given. There are from 35 to 40 companies, each composed of 100 men, making a total of from 3,500 to 4,000 men, all professedly eager for the fight. The "Relief," one of the largest and strongest tug steamboats on the lake, was bought for the Fenians a few days ago, and is being pierced for six guns, and I understand they have other vessels being fitted up with all dispatch, as it is expected that as soon as navigation opens they will endeavour to strike somewhere, and as an evidence that such is in contemplation, I would mention a fact that is not generally known here, that a great number have been ordered to give up their situation before the 1st of May, to be engaged in active service. I earnestly hope that when they do move and attempt to gain a foothold in Canada, that you will be prepared to give them such a reception as will prevent them from ever making another attempt.

The steamer Ottawa arrived at Halifax with troops and ordnance stores for Canada and the other British Provinces. The London correspondent of the Chicago Tribune says that the frigates Liffey (33), and Galatea (26); the corvettes Jason (21), and Satellite (21); the sloop Petrel (11) and the gunboat Rainbow have received orders to prepare for sea with the utmost despatch.—Their destination is said to be the Gulf and River St. Lawrence, where their presence may be necessary in view of the complications that are likely to grow out of the lapse of the reciprocity treaty and the fisheries question. A considerable number of American vessels have also been ordered to the same place.

THE RIVAL OF NIAGARA.

THE GREAT VICTORIA FALLS OF THE ZAMBESI RIVER IN AFRICA.

Livingston, the orb-beaued traveller, in his recent book of travels in Africa, thus describes the most wonderful geographical discovery of modern times:—

The Victoria Falls of the Zambesi river are among the most remarkable curiosities of the known world in Africa. For the inhabitants of the country the river is channels and tranquil, flowing by lovely islands thickly covered with tropical vegetation. Lofty palm trees, with their fruit in golden clusters, grow abundantly upon the banks. Many flowers peep out near the water's edge. But these charming islands are soon succeeded by dangerous rapids. It is only when the river is very low that they can be passed in safety. Elephants and hippopotami are often swept over the falls, and, of course, smashed to pulp. In guiding the race of waters, the party was requested not to speak, as talking might impair the virtue of the 'medicine." There were places where the utmost exertions of the canoe-man had to be put forth to force the boat to the only safe part of the rapids, and to prevent it from sweeping down broadside on. At times it seemed as if nothing could save the canoe from dashing headlong against the rocks, but just at the nick of time the word was passed to the steer-man, who, with ready pole, turned the craft a little aside and it glided swiftly past the threatened danger.

On reaching the falls a spectacle of indescribable magnificence was presented to the travellers. The cataract is formed by a crack across the river, the bed of the Zambesi, at that place. The lip of the crack are still quite sharp, except about three feet of the edge over which the river rolls. The walls go sheer down from the lip without any projecting crag—The cleft is in length a few more yards than the breath of the Zambesi, which was found to be, by measurement, a little over 1,000 yards, but this number was retained to mark the year in which the fall was for the first time carefully examined. The width at the narrowest point was found to be 80 yards, and at the widest somewhat more. Into this chasm, twice as deep as Niagara Falls, the river, a mile wide, rolls with deafening roar, forming the Victoria cataract. It is broken into several partial falls by rocks and islands, in all making upward of 2,700 feet of perpendicular falls. The whole body of rolls clear over quite unbroken, but after a descent of ten or more feet the entire mass suddenly becomes like a huge sheet of driven snow. Pieces of water leap from it in the form of comets with tail streaming behind, till the whole sheet is changed into myriads of rushing, leaping, sequence comets. The amount is probably exceeded by Niagara, though not in the months when the Zambesi is in flood. This vast body of water necessarily inclines in its descent a large volume of air, which, forced into the cleft to an unknown depth, rebounds, and rushes up loaded with vapor to form three columns, each like a column of steam, visible at the distance of twenty-one miles. In reaching the height of 200 feet from the level of the river, this vapor becomes condensed into a perpetual shower of fine rain.

THE POPE'S CHARITY.

(From a Halifax Paper.)

Let it not be charged upon us that we desire to deny to Roman Catholics, as private citizens, the exercise of equal privileges, either civil or religious. We are content that these shall be equal; we demand this equality for them as earnestly as we insist upon it for ourselves: but the experience of every civilized nation on earth has settled the fact for all time, that Rome will not and never can be, from her own showing, satisfied with anything short of supremacy in Church and State. Equal religious privileges, forsooth! When she is weak—certainly then she clamors for equality; but now can an intelligent Roman Catholic look in your face and tell you this is all the Church desires, when he knows in his heart that the Bull in Cœna Domini, which is rehearsed by the Pope in person, one rotundo, on every Maunday Thursday.—the Thursday before Easter,—is a tissue of curses, anathematizing in detail, and by name every Protestant denomination in the entire Church Catholic, and consigning them all to eternal perdition! What equal religious privileges mean in the Church of Rome's vernacular may perhaps be gathered from the late Encyclical of the Pope against liberty of conscience Surely it requires no special argument to prove that when religious liberty is denounced as though it were simply another name for infidelity, civil liberty can find much favor with the apologists of the Pope's Encyclical. The language of the Bull in Cœna Domini, to which we have referred, is to the following purport, and we quote the extract for reference:—

"We excommunicate all Hussites, Wicklifites, Lutherans, Swingliens, Calvinists, Huguenots and Heretics, whatsoever names they are called, and of what sect soever they be; as also their adherents, favorers, receivers, and defenders; together with all who, without our authority or that of the Apostolic See, shall read, keep, print or in any way defend their books containing heresy; as also all schismatics, or those who withdraw from us, or recede from obedience to the Bishop of Rome. Furthermore we excommunicate and anathematize all and singular, of what station or degree soever, or by whatever name called, who appeal from the orders or decrees of us, or of the Pope of Rome for the time being; and all who by themselves, or others, give intelligence of matters relating to the state of Christendom to Heretics, to the prejudice of the Catholic religion."

Outrage on Protestants in Italy.

Florence, March 24.

On the 19th instant the town of Barletta was the scene of horrible outrages, arising from a savage reaction promoted by the clerical party, with the object of destroying some inoffensive Protestants. Three of these unfortunate persons were burnt alive, together with their own household goods, others were thrown out of the windows, and there butchered in cold blood. The officer of the subprefecture were also attacked by the mob, and all letters and furniture they contained destroyed. The subprefect was maltreated, and only saved his life by escaping to a place of concealment. One of the guards of public security was killed, and the delegate wounded. Two houses were also burned, and many others sacked. The number of persons murdered by the rioters amounts to thirteen. A detachment of soldiers was ordered off with all haste from Trani, and by their assistance order was restored. Many arrests have been made, including several priests and Monks. M. Mayer, the Evangelical pastor of Barletta, has addressed the following letter to the Courriere delle Marche of Ancona:—

Barletta, March 27

Yesterday our ordinary hall of conference was assailed by a swarm of Modern Pharisees, led by a Priest named Luggiero Tontiglione, who for several days past had been exciting the populace to excesses against the Protestants.—The whole building was set on fire, four of our brethern were killed, or I should rather say, two of our brethern and two persons who came to their assistance. One of our ministers saved himself by a miracle. I myself escaped over the roofs of the houses. The house of D. C., the wine merchant, was completely burned down; he himself escaped. I write to you still concealed in a called of my house.

TILTING HOOPS

We are not aware that our lady friends in Canada have adopted the tilting hoops now so fashionable in American circles. The following caustic remarks from the Rochester Union will therefore not apply to them:—"that it is necessary in the cause of public decency, to say nothing of good morals, for public journals to enter a protest against an infamous fashion, shows how terribly demoralized society is becoming. The tilting hoop mania among the women and girls of respectable families is a startling episode in American society. That women of mature years should wear them, and thus expose their persons to the lascivious gaze of street loafers, are indications that the wearers naturally, if not really, belong to the abandoned class by whom this detestable fashion was first inaugurated—but that young girls of respectable families are allowed to appear on the street in a guise which identifies them with public prostitutes, with the sanction and permission of their parents, argues very poorly for the good sense or discretion of their parents or guardians. Such sights are now daily to be witnessed on our streets as would shame the Lorettes of Paris and bring a blush to the cheeks of Cyprians. We have seen young ladies of the most respectable (so-called) families of this city expose their persons through the instrumentality of this infamous fashion in a manner which calls loudly for the action of the police. To the conservative influence of that body we appeal for the preservation of public morals. They should arrest every woman who appears upon the streets in this abominable guise. This seems to be the only effective remedy against that fearful abandonment of American women to the behests of fashion. Let the remedy be adopted at once. It is not be evident that a crisis is being forced on in the fashionable world which will sooner or later call forth the "armed intervention" of the public authorities.

A Column of Fire One Thousand Feet in Height, and A River of Flame Thirty-five Miles long.

A jet of lava of immense proportions then and some occurred in Hawaii, as related by Mr. Coan, of the Honolulu Island of February, in his account of the eruption of Mauna Loa, on the island of Hawaii.

The eruption commenced near the summit of the mountain, and only five or six miles southeast of the eruption in 1852. But two days after the summit crater sent down its burning floods along the southeastern slope of the mountain; then suddenly the valve closed and the great furnace apparently ceased to blast. After thirty six hours the fusin was seen bursting out of the eastern side of the mountain, about midway from the top of the base.

It would seem that the summit lava had found a subterranean tunnel, for half way down the mountain, when gaining new vent point, or meeting with some obstruction, it burst up vertically, sending a column of incandescent fusin 1,000 feet high into the air. This fire jet was about 100 feet in diameter, and it was sustained for 20 days and nights, varying in height from 500 to 1,000 feet. The discharge from the mountain side was often with terrific explosions, which shook the hills, and with detonation which were heard for forty miles. The column of liquid fire was an object of surpassing brilliancy, of intense and awful grandeur. As the jet issued from the awful orifice it was at white heart. As it ascended higher and higher it reddened like fresh blood, deepening its color, until, in its decent, much of it assumed the color of clotting gore.

In a few days it has raised a cone some 200 feet high around the burning orifice, and it, as the showers of burning minerals fell in lavid torrents upon the cone, it became one vast head of glowing scale, flashing and quivering with restless action, and sending out the heat of 10,000 furnaces in full blast. The struggles in disgorging the fiery masses, the upward rush of the column, the force which raised it 10,000 vertical feet, and the continuous falling back of thousand of tons of mineral fusin into the throat of the crater, and over a scene of glowing coals one mile in circumference, was a sight to inspire awe and terror, attended with explosive shocks which seemed to rend the mural ribs of the mountain, and sounds to waken the dead and startle the spirit in Hades. From this fountain a river of fire went rushing and leaping down the mountain with amazing velocity, filling up basins and ravines, dashing over precipices and exploding rocks, until it reached the forests at the base of the mountain, where it burned its fiery way, consuming the jungle, evaporating the water of the streams and pools, eating down the trees, and sending up clouds of smoke in murky columns of fleecy wreaths to heaven.

All Eastern Hawaii was a sheen of light, and our night was turned into day. So great was the illumination at night that one could read without a lamp, and labor, travelling and recreation might go on as in the daytime. Mariners at the sea saw the light at 200 miles distance. It was a pyrotechnical display, more magnificent and marvelous than was made by an earthly monarch. In the daytime the ascending for thousands of square miles would be filled with a murkey haze, through which the sun beams shed a pale and sickly light. Smoke, steam, gases, ashes, cinders, furnace or capillary or filamentary or verdiculations called Pele's hair—floated in the air, sometimes sparkling out like a fan, sometimes careering in swift currents upon the wind, or gyrating in ever changing colors in the fitful breezes. The point from which the fire fount ain issued is 10,000 feet above the level of the sea, thus making the gaseous pillar a distinct object of observation along the whole eastern coast of Hawaii.

The rivers of fire from the fount ain flowed about 35 miles, and stopped within 20 miles of Hilo. Had the fountain played 10 days longer it would probably have reached the shore.

I'LL NO DO'T AGAIN.

BY MRS. JAMES HOSTON.

When the wee bit tot hassle has pyked the nessie,
Or fy'lt the b't frockie she's new gooten on,
If she's da'd down a dish, or stay'd out i' the rain;
She cobs to her mither "I'll no do't again,"
"I'll no do't again,"
"I'll no do't again."

When the wean' brither's toast doe the watch frae the wa',
An' hurtit the beastie so bright and so sma',
If he's taen out the razor that's lippin'd to name,
He cries out when he's aboutit, "I'll no do't again." &c.

If he has stay'd frae the schule, or been tellin' a lee,
If he's hurt his bit bulk, or has strown a bawbee;
If he's broken a window, an' fear't to go hame,
The wee heartie's sichin', "I'll no do't again."

O wonderfu' words, they are aye on the tongue
O' saint and o' sinner, o' old and o' young;
They've a power that wad soften the heart o' a flint o,
The words o' contrition, "I'll no do't again"
O frail human heart! though in purpose upright,
It forgits, like the deen, when he's out o' yer
sicht:
When its virtues at last o' its follyes think shame
The soul sichs in sorrow "I'll no do't again."

Bill Portly was a porter, who the station long about. He thought no small beer of himself because he was so stout. But one day some one put him out of all conceit with fat—he said he was no man of tons but just a man of vat. So William purchased Banting's book, whose treatment, as I glean, procures for those inclined to fat a leaning to be lean. 'No bread' was one of Banting's rules, but William took instead, that 'half a loaf,' which proverbs say, is better than no bread.' And his provisions he cut off until his meals were spare, and much less like a hire-it than a die-it, you'd declare. His sides fell in, his limbs grew lank, his skin hung on his bones. To see how he had lost his size, it would have cost you groans. But still he persevered, and vowed he must, he would get thin—" one might cut off one's flesh by will, as one cut's off one's skin." At last he grew so very weak and sickly that he found, he'd have to call a doctor in, to try and bring him round.—'The doctor came and shook his head, and told him it was clear, that if he got much thinner he'd not be much longer here. He told him that his theory of corpulence was wrong—all fat's not fatal, and man's life's as broad as it is long. So William took the doctor's hint, and dropt his starving whim, and ate his grub in style, for fear the worms should feast on him.

A SMART BOY.—The minister of a church near Glasgow recently delivered his usual annual sermon to the children of his congregation. Having divided his subject into five heads, the Rev. gentleman proceeded, at the close of each division, to ask the children a 'few simple questions.'—After quoting the text—'He careth for them as the apple of His eye'—and explaining how sensitive as organ the human eye was, he concluded by asking his dear young friends what any of them would do supposing a mote or a little sand or dust went into there eyes—when up started one little fellow and answered, I'd blow my nose, sir.' The seniors in the congregation became convulsed with laughter.—(Glasgow Herald.

It is very desirable that men going to parties should be known to their hosts, which is not always the case, and more especially that they should know their hosts personally which is not universally the rule. At a large private ball, which was hanging rather heavily on hand, a young man was leaning languidly against the mantelpiece, and observed to another standing near, "This is a dreadfully stupid affair I am quite tired of it." "So am I" responded the strange gentleman addressed. "Then I move that we slip away!" "You can do as if you wish," again replied the other, "but, unfortunately, I can't; I'm master of the house!"

A Yorkshire Lad, who recently visited the city for the first time, gives his view of the ladies in this way: "Somewhere, in every circumference of silk and velvet that wriggles along there's a woman, I s'pose; but how much of the holler is filled in with meat, and how much is gammon, the spectator dun no. A feller marrys a wife, and finds, when it comes to the p'int, that he has nothin' in his arms but reg'lar antony. If men are gay deservers, wot's to be said of the female that dresses for a hundred and forty weight, but hasn't reely as much fat on her as would grease a griddle?—all the apparent plumpness consisting of cotton and whalebone."

A writer in Georgia paper introduces the American Eagle, which for five years has been a comparative stranger in those parts, in this style, preliminary to the Fourth of July: We must fix up the Eagle, get the Goddess a set of teeth and a waterfall, and have Fourth of July got up regardless of expense. We must give all the Mormon women a husband apiece, marry the antious schoolmarms that come down South to teach the darkies, put the niggers at work, build a horse railroad from New York to the city of Mexico, dam up the Gulf stream, lick England (Old and New,) annex Cuba and we will be again a great and glorious country.

MATRIMONY.—A confirmed old batchelor used the following argument against matrimony:—"Muslin is a great prompter of laziness. If young men wish to accomplish anything of moment, either with head or hand, they must keep clear of the institution entirely. A pair of sweet lips, a small waist, a swelling chest, a pressure of two delicate hands, will do as much to unhinge a man as three fevers, the measles, a large sized whooping-cough, a pair of lock-jaws, several hydrophobias, and the doctor's bill."

VANITY.—'My dear,' said Mrs. Dogberry, to her daughter, "you should not hold your dress so very high in crossing the street."—"Then ma," replied the maiden, "how shall I ever show the beauty of my flounced pantalets, that has almost ruined my eyesight to manufacture? I'm sure I don't care if the beaux do look at me." Mrs. Dogberry spoke of "the sin of vanity and the beauty of decorum," and walked off to her chamber.

'Mamma,' said little Nell, 'had the governess ought to flog me for what I did not do?' 'No, my dear child, why do you ask?' 'Because she flogged me to day when I didn't do my sum."

'The ocean speaks eloquently and forever, says Beecher. 'Yes,' retorts Prentice, 'and there is no use telling it to dry up."

A schoolmaster in Ohio advertises that he will keep a Seedy school twice a week—on Tuesdays and Saturdays.

The following notice may be seen on a blacksmith's shop in Essex: "No horses shod on Sunday except sickness and death."

How long did Cain hate his brother? As long as he was Able.

A splendid ear, but a very poor voice, as the organ grinder said of the donkey.

A grocer advertises in the following manner: "Hams and cigars, smoked and unsmoked."

The Jury of the International Exhibition held in London, in 1862, made the following report:—"The Colony (Canada) produces many of its own School Books, among which may be mentioned 'Lovell's General Geography,' a trustworthy and attractive manual, remarkable for its clear arrangement and for the fullness of its illustrative and statistical contents."
DUBLIN EXHIBITION, 1865.—A Silver Medal was awarded to Mr John Lovell, at the Dublin Exhibition of 1865, for his cheap and excellent series of School Books.
"LOVELL'S CANADIAN SCHOOL SERIES."—This is a series of School Books, which have been especially prepared for the use of the Public Schools of Canada and are now in course of publication by Mr. Lovell, of Montreal. They are interesting both on particular and on general grounds, not only as a specimen of the literature of Canada, but still more of the sort of teaching which is being established in that Colony. We have been much struck with the merit of the series which, as a whole, will bear favorable comparison with any Works of a similar class published in this country."—LONDON EDUCATIONAL TIMES.

AND DISPATCH.
Orders respectfully solicited.
GRAHAM & STRATTON.

ON the morning of the First Saturday in April will be published the initial number of
THE WEEKLY POST,
OFFICE ON METCALFE STREET, (over SPARKS STREET), OTTAWA.
Subscription, $1 in advance, or $1.50 credit.
The Weekly Post will be printed on a large sheet of good paper, specially made for the purpose, and will embrace 40 columns of reading matter, printed from new type, and tastefully executed.
Each edition will contain:
Editorials on Current Political Topics.
Details of Foreign News.
Local Intelligence.
Telegraphic Despatches.
Special Telegrams from Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, &c.
Family Reading.
Literary Extracts
Selected and Original Poetry.
Correspondence.
Commercial Reviews.
Home and other Market Reports.
And during the Session of the Legislature,
A Concise Summary of Parliamentary Proceedings, and
The Speeches of Prominent Politicians.
In a word, no pains or expense will be spared to make The Post a first class weekly journal, worthy of British America, and a faithful exponent of public opinion,—alike welcome to the politician and the general reader.
In its political character, The Post will be firm in its adhesion to the Liberal cause,—knowing neither sect, nationality, nor sectional prejudices. It will seek to perpetuate the happy connexion subsisting between British America and Great Britain, and to that end will advocate the great measure now under discussion for the Confederation of all British American under one government as being best calculated to cement the Empire, and to promote the happiness of these provinces, develop their vast internal resources and open up new channels of commerce.
Especial efforts will be made to place before the public, reliable information as to the character, resources, and capabilities of the great, but comparatively unknown, regions of the valley of the Ottawa—its numerous tributaries and new settlements.
☞ Friends at a distance who will send in the names of five subscribers (with the cash) will be entitled to a copy of the paper for a year gratis, and all others are respectfully invited to send in lists of reliable persons who may be willing to become subscribers on the credit terms.
A SEWING MACHINE, WORTH $40,
Will be given as a bonus to the lady or gentleman sending the largest list of prepaid subscribers (not less than 100) before the 1st of Jan., 1867.
Specimen copies will be sent free to any address. C. E STEWART & Co.

FINKLE & LYON
SEWING MACHINE CO.
OFFICE 521 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
GUARANTEE.—After a fair trial, if any purchaser does not regard the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine as superior to any machine in market, he can return it and have his money. It has taken many of the highest prizes—is less complicated than any other first class machine;—does a wider range of work without changing,—requires no taking apart to clean or oil, and no "lessons" to set needle, regulate tension, or operate machine.
N. B. Any Clergyman sending us two orders for Machines, shall receive one for himself as a present. The same proposition is extended to Profession and Teachers.
We have now completed our New Manufactory at a cost of some $200,000, including New Patents and important Improvements; and the object of the above proposition is to secure the immediate introduction of our improved machine into every town in the United States without incurring the great expense of a travelling agent.
This proposition cannot avail in towns occupied by our own agents.
Please send for descriptive Catalogue, wit samples of sewing.

Also what the most popular and widely circulated periodicals say of our Establishment:
From the "Dispatch" of February 25, 1865.
We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the announcement of Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, Silver Ware, and Fancy Goods, in our advertising columns. We are personally acquainted with the members of this firm and know them to be gentlemen of sterling worth and integrity. Their stock of goods, for variety and extent, we have scarcely seen paralleled.
From the "Mirror of Fashion," March 1, 1865.
Messrs. Devaugh & Co.'s Great Sale of Jewelry, etc., opened on the 15th ult., and we venture to say that no finer display of goods was ever exhibited by any establishment in this city. The ladies throughout their bazaar almost to suffocation, although the streets were rendered nearly impassable by the melted snow and slush. We predict for them a wonderful success.
From the "Ledger," February 28, 1865.
Our lady friends should visit the extensive establishment of Messrs. Devaugh & Co, No. 15 Maiden Lane, if they wish to indulge themselves with a sight which they will long remember. Such a profusion of elegant Watches Chains, Rings, Earrings, and, in short, of Jewelry of every name, kind and description, we never before witnessed. Their silver and plated ware is superb and almost caste into the shade the other splendid establishments which have long been the boast of our city. It is estimated that their stock is worth not less than one million of dollars.
How You Can Get a Prize.

PIANO-FORTES
DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.
ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMETS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrumen is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong Iron frame; which is separate and entirel; independe t of the case, thereby dispensing with the old heavy form of stringing' by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Daniels is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.
They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfield,	Wm Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Barili.
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry.	Charle- Pradel

Mr. ROSSMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.
Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal versimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.
From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.
The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smooths delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.
GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr S. B. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.
Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN
SEWING MACHINES.
EMPIRE SHUTTLE MACHINE!
PATENTED FEB. 14th, 1860.
Salesrooms, { 536 Broadway, New York, / 252 Washington St., Boston.
THIS MACHINE is constructed on entirely new principles of mechanism, possessing many rare and valuable improvements, having been examined by the most profound experts, and pronounced to be
Simplicity and Perfection Combined.
It has a straight needle, perpendicular action, makes the lock or shuttle stitch which will neither rip nor ravel, and is alike on both sides; performs perfect sewing on every description of material, from leather to the finest Nansook Muslin, with cotton, linen or silk thread, from the coarsest to the finest number. Having neither CAM nor COGWHEEL, and the least possible friction, it runs as smooth as glass and is
Emphatically a Noiseless Machine.
It requires FIFTY PER CENT less power to drive it than any other Machine in the market. A girl twelve years of age can work it steadily, without fatigue or injury to health
Its strength and Wonderful Simplicity of construction renders it alm at impossible to get out of order, and is GUARANTEED by the Company to give entire satisfaction.
We respectfully invite all those who may desire to supply themselves with a superior article, to come and examine the Unrivalled Machine.

PULMONIC WAFERS!
The most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered for all diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza,
Hoarseness, Difficult Breathing, Sore Throat &c.. &c.
THESE Wafers give the most instantaneous and perfect relief, when persevered with according to directions never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health, who have tried other means in vain. To all classes and all constitutions they are a blessing and cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or how severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly destroyed. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.
TO VOCALISTS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS.
these Wafers are peculiarly valuable, they will in one day remove the most severe occasional hoarseness and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and flexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass, and clearness, of which purpose they are regularly used by many Professional Vocalists.

Memorandum on Cholera.

Adopted at a Medical Conference held in the Bureau of Agriculture, in March, 1866.

PUBLIC AND PRIVATE DUTIES AS CONNECTED WITH CHOLERA.

The impending danger of a public calamity, and still more, its appearance in the midst of a community, in adding to the ordinary wants adds necessarily to the duties of all.

The State, the municipal corporations, the different associations, some professional corps and private individuals, have each special duties, more or less onerous, more or less dangerous oftentimes to perform.

Cholera being, as it is, one of the most awful of all scourges, cannot appear, not even be simply threatening, without a general call for the performance of such duties, in the accomplishment of which it is within the province of every one to render eminent services to his fellow-citizens. Besides, it needs the concurrence of every one; for, in vain the State would try to do its part, if the municipal and other public bodies were refusing their concurrence, or, which amounts to the same thing, were derelictant in doing their share of the work; in vain would the municipalities and public bodies, in harmony with the State, attempt to accomplish their part, if institutions, families and private individuals were careless of their own.

There is a community of interest to be subserved in averting the common danger; there must also be a community of action in preparation and defence for such an object.

On the Government devolves the duty of the general organization, of the gathering of the forces, of the promulgation of general information, of the external surveillance. It is its duty to keep the grand watch, red to defend the approaches, if they can be defended. The law embodied in chapter 38 of the Consolidated Statutes of Canada and the laws relating to Quarantine have defined what part the State is to take in such measures, besides what appertains to the nature of State administrations.

To bring to bear on the subject wise views and judicious counsels for all, to remind the minor bodies and the public at large of what is required from them by the law of the land, are also a part of the duties of the State: it is also its duty to institute a Central Board of Health, with whom all other Boards, and even individuals, can correspond, in order to impart to the composing portion of the whole body unity of purpose and uniformity of action.

Such observations are made not to teach the State, but rather to warn people against the too common error of expecting more from the Government than the Government can possibly perform, and thus individuals or corporations might neglect what is most needed in such circumstances.

More special duties devolve upon municipal bodies; but they are restricted within narrower limits as to space. Each corporation is to see that every possible thing for the salubrity of their locality is done, that the poor are furnished with the necessaries of life, and, in case of sickness, with the necessaries called for by their painful situation: they have to invite to their assistance the counsels of men who, by their position and their avocations, can advise them in devising local measures and calling for general action from the higher authorities, if wanted.

Public institutions, families and individuals have to show themselves willing and obedient in accomplishing what is required from them, in avoiding what is forbidden and in extending to others such help as is within their reach to dispense.

It is a constant duty for every citizen of a community to guard against everything which could be offensive or detrimental to his neighbors or to society in general; but that duty becomes a great deal more stringent in case of calamity, when the difficulties and the burdens of human life have become much heavier.

There is in such time more responsibility in every act of private and civil life, when the neglect of wanted precautions when the indulging in something dangerous, when the diffusion of a simple foolish joke or an ill-timed rumor can bring into the bosom of your own family or to the fireside of your neighbor sorrow, terror and even death.

A time of pestilence, when the hand of the Almighty is laid upon us, ought to be a time of more than ordinary composure, sobriety of mind and body, of simplicity and dignity of manners, of watchfulness over ourselves and of charity to fellow creatures.

The remainder of this Memorandum is devoted to outline the general principles by which the conduct of public bodies and private individuals should be directed during an epidemic. Intended for all and being of necessity restricted to generalities, this paper is not supposed to impart a profound knowledge of things which are not, and which cannot be, otherwise than the exclusive privilege of men devoted to the special study of medicine.

Moreover, it would be dangerous to say more than what can be sufficiently well understood by the people at large, because otherwise a misinterpretation of an unavoidably half acquired notion might lead to very fatal mistakes.

If fully impressed of its tenor and honestly actuated by a high sense of duty, they will always know when (either in a public or in a private capacity) they can take upon themselves to act, and when they should call to their aid the counsels or administration of men whose specific mission is to acquire for all, what all cannot, by any possibility, be made to acquire for themselves.

MEASURES AGAINST CHOLERA.

It is useless and also highly detrimental (this cannot be too often repeated) to flatter ourselves with the idea that, if such a particular thing were often done in such a particular manner, complete immunity from that disease would be attained; it is equally dangerous to despond under the depressing belief that nothing can be done to mitigate the evil.

Cholera has visited almost the world entire (continents and islands) at least five times, in spite of all measures adopted by the most enlightened and civilized countries to prohibit its introduction. It must be accepted, then, as a truth, that cholera must and will prevail wherever the higher counsels of the Almighty decree that it shall be so.

But God has given to man a certain power over things natural, in accordance with the general laws established by Him; and the legitimate use of such power, if not always attended with complete success, never fails, however, to be followed by some good results.

It has been even so with Cholera. A happy disposition of soil and mind, good salubrious conditions of life, cautious and hopeful faith, moderate and temperate habits have saved, and will always save, thousands from the effects of this and other scourges. Notwithstanding that the same views have already been enunciated, it is thought important to bring them again and again before the notice of the public, even at the risk of being considered tedious.

The measures to be adopted against Cholera, and in fact against any contagious epidemic or epidic disease, may be classed under the following headings:—1st, Sequestration or Separation; 2nd, Hygienic precautions; 3rd, Diffusion of sound ideas and judicious advice, and inculcation of obedience thereto; 4th, Prophylatic timely interference; 5th, Intelligent curative treatment.

The measures of the first class are evidently appertaining to the functions of the Government and municipal bodies, as defined by law; the measures of the second, third and fourth classes necessitate the cooperation of the community generally, and of all its members individually; the measures of the fifth and last relate to duties which devolve on members of the medical profession, and, under their guidance, on health officers, Sisters of Charity and other attendants on the sick, and on them alone.

If every one could pause to reflect on the importance of the performance of his own duties, do them well and not embarrass others in the accomplishment of theirs, and if all were to work in harmony, good will, devotion and forbearance, without assuming other than their own task, at the same time fulfilling it unflinchingly, it would be no great stretch of prophecy to predict grand results for present and future good.

SEQUESTRATION.

The means of sequestration or separation, as a preventive measure, are of two kinds: firstly, those employed against the introduction of pestilence from infected countries; and, secondly, those which are adopted in centres of population, within a country already invaded by an infectious or epidemic disease. The first are effected by the establishment of Quarantine or Lazarettos; the second, by the establishment of temporary special hospitals or refuges in isolated situations, if possible.

Such measures, it has been already said, are useful and extremely advantageous; but it would be a dangerous fallacy to calculate upon their absolute success, and to neglect the far better measures of a moral, sanitary and hygenic character.

A few remarks and observations would be sufficient to convince every unsophisticated mind of this truth. To be satisfied of the infallible result of a Quarantine would require that the certainty of the disease being contagious be thoroughly established; or, if simply infectious, it would require a certain positive knowledge of the nature of its mode of transmission, of the time it can lay latent on persons or things, and a close insight into the nature of chemical or other agents capable of destroying the virus. It would again require the certitude of its being incapable of travelling on the winds and with the currents of running waters, or, if otherwise, to be fully aware of the exact distance at which the virus cannot be any more hurtful by having lost its propogating influence.

It would also necessitate an absolute prohibition of every intercourse, mediate or immediate, between all persons or things appertaining to the country to be protected, and also of every thing or person started from all suspected or infected regions, and even from all persons and things connected with the Quarantine station itself, such station becoming ipso facto an infected spot.

Even if we were entirely conversant with the mysterious propagation of those maladies, such total prohibition of intercourse between countries is constant intercourse with one another would be, in itself, a great calamity.

The recent successful instance of sequestration at New York, on board the English ship Atalanta, connected as it is perhaps with political, social and commercial tendencies of the day (not altogether medical) has received amongst our republican neighbors an advocacy of absolute prohibition by means of extremely rigid quarantine and non-intercourse. To adopt extreme measures on the isolated experience of the case of the Atalanta would be indulging in the very fatal philosophical error of arguing of the general by the particular; and possibly the non-spreading of the disease in the Atalanta may, still, be attributed to the presence of the cold season.

All this reasoning, nevertheless, is not a plea for the abandonment of the principle of sequestration and of measures of quarantine, as already and repeatedly enunciated—Happily, however, there is a middle course that can be observed, equally distant from extreme determination called for by most opposite opinions.
